Stock Exchange, to make a speculative sale of Consols, had not agreed to an arrangement on the terms of keeping debts secured in respect of the differences with a right on the part of debts. to close the account if he failed to do so, but that pltf. only agreed to give a certain security with a fixed cutting limit, & therefore pltf. was entitled to damages against debts. for closing the account when that limit had not been reached.—*SURMAN v. 153. — Meaning of.]—By the usage of the London Stock Exchange stockbrokers who have entered into contracts for the purchase of stock are, in the event of the insolvency of their principal, justified in immediately selling the stock. A principal is insolvent within the meaning of this rule when he is unable to pay his debts in the ordinary course of business. In equity an agent is entitled to be indemnified against liability, as well as loss, incurred on behalf of the principal. Messrs. C., brokers on the London Stock Exchange, on behalf of Sir R. H., entered into contracts for the purchase of stocks to be completed on July 15, 1870. On July 12 they wrote to Sir R. H. to the effect that unless he paid them on July 15 a balance, which consisted of the difference between the contract price of the stock & the value thereof at the market price of the day, owing to them from him they would be defaulters; but that if such payment were made, they would sell or continue the stocks, as he thought fit. Sir R. H. promised to pay, & directed them to deal with the stocks as they thought best, & they sold part, & continued part. Sir R. H. did not pay on July 15, but shot himself; on the next day a bank of which he was a partner stopped payment, & on July 19 he died. On July 16 Messrs. C. were, solely by reason of Sir R. H.'s failure to pay them, declared defaulters on the Stock Exchange, & ceased to be members of that body, & in accordance with the rules, all their transactions for Sir R. H. were closed, & all the stocks they had continued for Sir R. H. were sold at the price of the day. In consequence of the value of the stocks having fallen, the balance appearing to be due to them from Sir R. H. was thus largely increased. The stocks afterwards continued to fall in value. Messrs. C. afterwards paid 6s. 8d. in the pound on their Stock Exchange debts, & were re-admitted as members of the Stock Exchange:—Held: (1) the sale was justifiable, both under the usage of the Stock Exchange, which entitled a broker to sell upon his principal becoming insolvent, & also because the continuation was only effected on the representation of Sir R. H. that he would pay on July 15; (2) although Messrs. C. had not paid their debts in full, they were entitled to prove against Sir R. H.'s estate for the increased balance appearing due to them after the sales were effected.—LACEY v. HILL, CROWLEY'S CLAIM (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 182; 43 L. J. Ch. 551; 22 W. R. 586; *sub nom. LACY v. (b) Mode of Closing Account.

154. Sale & repurchase by broker.]—Stockbrokers had on behalf of clients made a contract for the purchase of shares on the Stock Exchange. The clients having failed to provide the money for the price of the shares, the brokers, for the purpose of closing the clients' account, went into the market, & sold a like amount of shares to a jobber, & as part of the same transaction, repurchased the shares from him on their own account. By reason of the sale & repurchase being effected by one transaction, the brokers were enabled to repurchase the shares at a lower price than they would have had to pay if they had purchased them in the market in the ordinary way. The brokers in their account with the clients charged them commission on the shares to the jobber:—Held: the brokers having acted in a fiduciary capacity in the sale of the shares, & having, by reason of that sale & the repurchase being effected

He sold (inter alia), two lots of foreign cotton to different jobbers at the respective market prices of the day & immediately bought back from the same jobbers at the same prices equivalent amounts of cotton of the same description. The broker having assigned his property for the benefit of his creditors, resp., as trustee of the deed of assignment, sued applt. to enforce the broker's claim to be indemnified. The scrip was purchased "for account Aug. 29," but could not be then delivered, the scrip having in the meantime been called in by the directors to be registered in order that shares might be issued. Before the shares came out a call was made. These facts were known to pltf.; but he from time to time desired to have the scrip forwarded without further delay. The share certificates came out in Dec.; & then the selling brokers tendered the shares to debts. with a demand of £150 for the call. Pltf. on being applied to, refused to furnish the £150 denying his liability & claiming the shares without such payment; & on their being withheld he repudiated the contract & brought an action for money had & received:—Held: the non-delivery of the scrip on Aug. 29 did not entitle him to recover his purchase-money.—M'EWEN v. The brokers became defaulters on the Stock Exchange on Jan. 13, & were on Jan. 24 adjudicated bkpts. At the time of their stoppage there was on the current account a balance of £1362 10s. to their credit, & a balance of £7500 was due from them to the bankers on the loan account. They had deposited with the bankers as security bonds & shares belonging to some of their clients. This deposit was made without the authority of the clients, but the bankers did not know that the securities were not the property of the brokers.

PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 6.

f. To recover purchase-money of shares—Company not formed.]—Deft. sold to pltf. certain shares in a projected joint-stock railway co., for a sum exceeding the deposit originally paid by deft. The project was abandoned before any co. was regularly formed, either by deed or written agreement. Pltf., on the abandonment of the project, having received back only the amount of the deposit originally paid by deft., brought an action against deft. for the recovery of the residue of the price of the shares:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover from deft. the residue of the sum paid for the shares, in an action for money had & received.—MAGUIRE v. GODDARD (1840), 2 Jebb & S. 455;

g. To repudiate contract—Subject-matter of contract not existing at date of contract.]—A party gave an order to a broker to "buy for me forty shares of the Ayr & Galloway Ry.," a company which was not properly constituted till subsequent to the date of the order. The purchase having been intimated to & recognised by the mandant:—

The deposit was made to secure the general indebtedness of the brokers to the bankers, & not merely their indebtedness on the loan account. After the stoppage of the brokers the bankers realised the deposited securities, the proceeds of which were, together with interest until sale, more than sufficient to cover the balance due on the loan account, & there remained in their hands a sum exceeding the credit balance on the current account:—Held: the two accounts must be treated as one, & it was the duty of the bankers to apply the £1,362 10s. due from them on the current account in reduction of the £7,500 due to them on the loan account, & to use the deposited securities to satisfy only the difference between these two balances; therefore the sum remaining in the bankers' hands belonged to the owners of the deposited securities.

(2) Two days before the stoppage of the brokers a client had sent them a cheque to pay for some stock which they had purchased for him. This cheque was paid to their current account, & the amount of it formed part of the £1,362 10s. The purchase was not completed by the brokers:—Held: the client had no equity as against the owners of the deposited securities to be repaid the amount of his cheque out of the £1362 10s.—MUTTON v. PEAT, [1900] 2 Ch. 79; 69 L. J. Ch. 484; 82 L. T. 440; 48 W. R. 486; 44 Sol. Jo. 427, C. A.

171. — Purchase by country broker from London broker—London broker alleged to have acted as principal.—Where a country client has employed a country broker to purchase stocks & shares through a London broker, it is a question of fact in each case whether the London broker has acted as a broker & bought for his client, in which case he has complied with his mandate, though in accordance with the practice of the Stock Exchange, he sends forward to the country broker a "net price," which includes the price paid by him to the jobber plus his commission, or whether he has acted as a principal selling to his client, not at the jobber's price plus a regular or reasonable remuneration for himself, but at an arbitrary price obtained by adding an arbitrary sum to the jobber's price.

A country client instructed a country broker to buy certain shares for him, & the country broker instructed London brokers, members of the London Stock Exchange, who acted for them, to buy the shares, & they bought the shares from a jobber, adding to the price paid by them to the jobber their own commission, & returning it to the country broker as "net price." The country broker sent to the client a bought note stating the price, but omitting the word "net," & added his own commission; & this was the usual course of dealing in other purchases or sales of shares.

In an action by the country client to recover from the country broker the sums paid by him on the ground that the way in which the London brokers had returned "net prices" had made them vendors & not brokers, it was found as a fact that the London brokers had acted as brokers & not as principals:—Held: upon the authority of Aston v. Kelsey, No. 93. ante, pltf. was not entitled to recover.—BLAKER v. HAWES & BROWN (1913), 109 L. T. 320; 29 T. L. R. 609.

SUB-SECT. 7.—BROKER AS PRINCIPAL.

A. In General.

174. Rights of broker—To set up agency in defence to action.—A., a broker employed by B. to sell certain railway shares, agreed with C., D.'s broker, to sell him fifty shares, of which A. afterwards informed his clerk at his office, who made an entry in the book as of a sale from A. to C.; & a contract note, to the same effect, was sent to C. A. subsequently saw the entry in the book, & altered it by writing the name of B. as seller, & directed another note to be sent to C., with the name of B. as seller. A fresh note was accordingly sent the same evening or the next morning, but C. received them both together the next morning. C. did not return the first note, nor did A. request to have it returned. In an action brought by D. against A. for breach of the agreement, in not completing the sale, the judge who tried the cause left it to the jury to say whether the second note was a correction of a mistake in the first, & told the jury that if deft. entered into a written contract in his own name, he could not afterwards set up that he was acting as broker merely, & although known to be a broker, if he signed the contract in his own name, he was liable:—Held: (1) this was no misdirection, (2) evidence that it was the custom in Liverpool to send in brokers' notes without disclosing the principal's name, was properly rejected.—*MAGEE v. After the sale pltf. paid certain calls due on the shares, & brought an action against defts. to recover the amount so paid:—Held: although defts. had bought the shares acting as brokers & as agents for an undisclosed principal, they were personally liable to indemnify pltf. for his liability on the shares.—*WILCOX v. The jury found that pltf. was induced to purchase the shares by the false & fraudulent representations of deft. The transactions took place between Nov. 1905, & Aug. 1906, but pltf. did not discover the fraud till July, 1912. The action was commenced in Nov. 1912:—Held: when once fraud is established the rights of the party

Deft. returned for answer that he had done so, inclosing a sold note, which stated the purchase to be for the settling day, Oct. 15. On Oct. 2, pltfs. requested the name of the purchaser immediately, as the shares were going up; to which deft. replied that the shares being sold for Oct. 15, the buyer refused to give the name until then, but if pltfs. had any reason to doubt the integrity of their principal, they might at once transfer the shares into the name of R. & he deft. would be at the expense of retransfer. After Oct. 14, the price of shares in the railway co. in question began to fall, & in reply to a demand from pltfs. on Oct. 21, deft. gave R. as the name of the purchaser. It appeared that in the bought note to R. no mention was made of the settling day, but that pltfs. had applied to him for payment, but he disclaimed all knowledge of them in the transaction, & referred them to deft. On the same day, May 11, the brokers handed a ticket with deft.'s name as the buyer to the jobber. This ticket having been, according to the custom of the Stock Exchange, divided, a "split" for fifteen shares came through various hands to the broker of pltf. who was the registered holder of fifteen shares, & had, through his broker, sold fifteen shares to another jobber for delivery on the same May 15. On the receipt of deft.'s name pltf. executed a transfer of the shares to him, & pltf.'s broker handed the transfer & the certificates of the shares to deft.'s brokers, who accepted them on behalf of deft., & paid pltf.'s broker the price. Deft.'s brokers in handing in his name acted by the express authority of deft., & in accepting the transfer & paying the price they acted according to the custom of the Stock Exchange, though without any express authority of deft. The co. stopped payment on May 10, & on May 11 a petition was presented, & an order of the Ct. of Ch. for winding up the co. was afterwards made. On May 18 deft. refused to accept the shares, & pltf. was afterwards compelled to pay a call as the registered holder of the shares, upon which he brought an action against deft. for not indemnifying him against the calls:—Held: deft. was bound by the acceptance of the transfer by the brokers on his behalf & payment of the price; & a contract then arose between pltf. & deft., by which deft. was bound to indemnify pltf.

215. Nature of contract—Employment.]—Pltfs., who were stockbrokers, entered into an oral agreement with deft. that he should introduce clients to them, & that pltfs. should transact business on the Stock Exchange for the clients thus introduced, upon the terms that, as between pltfs. & deft., deft. should receive half the commission earned by pltfs. in respect of any transactions by them for any clients introduced by deft., & that he should pay to pltfs. half of any loss which might be incurred by them in respect of such transactions. Pltfs. claimed to recover from deft. half the loss which they had incurred in Stock Exchange transactions which they had entered into on behalf of one R., who had been introduced to them by deft.:—Held: deft. having an interest in the transactions, equally with pltfs. & the main object of the contract being to regulate the terms of deft.'s employment, the principle order which he gave to the clerk, who delivered it to defts. The third lot of shares was paid for by pltf. in a similar manner, with the exception that the cheque was drawn to the order of the clerk. Defts. received the cheques & credited pltf. with the amount of them. Orders for the purchase of other shares by defts. were subsequently given by pltf. to the clerk, who did not transmit them to defts., but made out & handed to pltf. bought notes purporting to show purchases of shares in pursuance of the orders, & to be signed by defts., which were forgeries. Pltf. gave him cheques for the supposed prices of the shares which he misapplied to his own use:—Held: upon the above-mentioned facts there was no evidence for a jury of a holding out by defts. to pltf. of the clerk as authorised to enter into contracts on their behalf, & therefore, defts. were not liable in respect of the orders subsequent to the first three.—*SPOONER v. During the currency of the agreement the Stock Exchange was closed for some months owing to the war. In an action on the agreement pltf. contended that the agreement in effect entitled him to a salary, whether the Stock Exchange was closed or not:—Held: it was an implied term of the agreement that to entitle pltf. to remuneration the Stock Exchange should remain open, & pltf. was not entitled to recover.—*BERTHOUD v. 232. ——— Rule made after particular transaction.]—On Mar. 10, 1847, A. employed B., a sharebroker & member of the London Stock Exchange, to sell for him certain documents which purported to be scrip or certificates, each for fifty shares, in a projected railway co. On Mar. 27 B. sold these certificates to C., & handed over the proceeds to A. The certificates being subsequently found to be forged, B. was, on May 11, called upon & obliged to pay, pursuant to a resolution of a committee of the Stock Exchange, to C. a certain agreed value as for genuine certificates of that co., & which considerably exceeded the price for which he had sold the spurious certificates.

216. ———.]—Pltf. was a “half-commission man” & defts. were stockbrokers & members of the London Stock Exchange, & an agreement was made between the parties that pltf. should have a share of the commission on orders introduced by pltf. & executed by defts. Pltf. had a seat in defts.’ office, & was paid by commission, & not by salary, for helping to carry out the business in the office. Pltf., having left defts.’ service, brought an action against them to recover a share of the commission earned by them on transactions which they, as brokers, had entered into, after he had left their service, on behalf of persons whom he had introduced to them during that service:—Held: the agreement was one which gave rise to the relationship of employment, & as there was no evidence that the parties had agreed that commission was to be paid for an indefinite period after the employment should cease, pltf. was not entitled to commission on orders given after the termination of his employment, but where during his employment orders had been given to open & carry over stocks pltf. was entitled to commission on those transactions until they were closed.—*BICKLEY v. 219. Authority to bind broker—Acceptance of orders by broker—Whether sufficient holding out.]—Defts., a firm of stockbrokers, had in their employ a clerk to whom they allowed commission upon orders introduced by him to them & accepted by them, but who was not authorised himself to accept orders on their behalf. On three occasions pltf. gave orders to the clerk for the purchase of shares by defts. on pltf.’s behalf, which orders were transmitted by the clerk to defts., who executed them & sent to pltf. bought notes in respect of the shares so purchased. No intimation was given by defts. to pltf. that they accepted the orders prior to their execution by defts. In payment of the price of the first two lots of shares purchased pltf. drew a cheque payable to defts.’

In an action by B. against A. to recover the sum so paid by him to C., the declaration contained a special count averring a promise by A. that the certificates were genuine, & a count for money paid. Upon the latter count, A. paid into ct. the sum he had received on the original sale, with interest:—Held: (1) B. was not entitled to recover upon the special count, there being no promise, express or implied, that the certificates were genuine; & under the count for money paid, B. was only entitled to recover the amount actually paid by him to A.; (2) the resolution of the committee of the Stock Exchange, made after the transaction was completed, however it might bind the members of that body, could not affect A.—*WESTROPP v. 234. ———.]—(1) Four exors. holding stock in their names directed their solr. to sell the stock. The solr., in the name of his firm, gave to a stockbroker whom the solr. had employed in Stock Exchange speculations directions to sell the stock. The stock was sold by the broker, & the solr. returned to the stockbroker transfers of the stock, with receipts indorsed, signed by the four exors. The sale was completed, & the stockbroker sent to the solr. a cheque for part of the purchase-money for the shares, & carried the balance on the transaction to the credit of the solr. in the account between them, which account was afterwards settled by a payment made to the stockbroker:—Held: under the circumstances, the stockbroker must be held to have had notice that the shares were not the property of the solr., & that, though the solr. had from the exors. authority to receive the purchase-money, payment to him, by giving him credit in an account between them, was not sufficient to discharge the stockbroker, who remained liable to the exors. for the balance.

(2) The sale was made subject to the Rules of the Stock Exchange, & the stockbroker alleged that by those rules the broker could recognise only the person employing him, & obey his directions as to the disposal of the proceeds of a sale:—Held: the Rules of the Stock Exchange applied only to the sale on the Stock Exchange, & not to subsequent transactions.

(3) What was the extent of S.'s agency for pltf's. It appears from the letter of June 28, that the transfers were sent by S. to [def't.] on that day, & that the receipts on those transfers were signed by pltf's. That would, in my judgment, import an authority in the person who was allowed to transmit these receipts himself to receive the money as money. Pltf's., in the statement of claim, say that as to such part as was paid in cash or in discharge of a call properly payable by pltf's., they are willing to accept such payments as payments made to themselves or on their account. That appears to be a distinct admission that S. was armed with authority from pltf's. to receive the purchase-money by an actual payment in cash, but no further (FRY, J.).—*PEARSON v. 243. Existence of custom—Whether question for jury—Custom not universal.]—Pltf., through his broker, sold to deft., a stock jobber, a number of shares in a bank. On the same day the jobber gave to pltf.'s broker a ticket with the name of G. upon it, as the intended purchaser, & which name had been passed to him from another jobber in the usual manner according to the course of business on the Stock Exchange. Pltf. executed a transfer to G., whose name was registered as a shareholder. The bank being wound-up it was discovered that at the time G.'s name was passed to pltf. as the transferee of the shares he was an infant, & by order of the Ct. of Ch. pltf.'s name was placed upon the list of contributories in his stead. To an action brought by pltf. against deft. to indemnify him for the amount of calls paid, in consequence of being replaced on the list of contributories, deft. pleaded that he was discharged from his liability by the usages of the Stock Exchange. The jury found that it was not part of the usage of the Stock Exchange that, if there be several intermediate sales between the first seller & the last buyer, & the first seller receive the price of the shares & transfer them to the last buyer, the intermediate buyers are irresponsible when the name of the transferee which was passed was that of a person legally incapable of being registered: Held: (1) the judge was right in leaving the jury to say what was the usage of the Stock Exchange, for it is not so universal an usage as to be binding upon all persons dealing there; (2) the jobber, until he has passed to the purchaser the name of a person who is legally capable of contracting, & who has given authority for the use of his name as transferee, is not discharged, notwithstanding the rules & usages of Stock Exchange to the contrary. —DENT v. 254. — Effect of private instructions to broker.]—Pltf., a holder of 200 shares in a co., by his brokers, contracted on the Stock Exchange for the sale of that number of shares to the defts. who were jobbers, for a future day called settling day. Before the settling day the jobbers, on a day called the name day, in accordance with the custom of the Stock Exchange, gave to the vendor's broker the names of seventeen persons as ultimate purchasers, to whom the shares were to be transferred in different parcels. The brokers of the vendor accordingly prepared seventeen deeds of transfer, got them executed by the vendor, & on settling day handed them & the share certificates to the jobbers, who thereupon paid the price agreed upon. In the meantime the co. had stopped payment & was ordered to be wound up. The seventeen transferees, through their brokers, had paid their purchase-money to the jobbers, & had received but not executed the deeds of transfer, & pltf., whose name remained on the list of shareholders, was obliged to pay calls on those shares. Pltf. thereupon filed a bill against the jobbers, claiming indemnity against the calls:—Held: the contract between pltf. & the jobbers must be interpreted according to the rules of the Stock Exchange, & after the jobbers had paid to the vendor his purchase-money, & given the names of transferees to whom the vendor executed transfers, & after those transferees, through their brokers, had received the transfers & paid their purchase-money to the jobbers, the liability of the jobbers ceased, & the bill was dismissed.

Afterwards deft. sold the same shares for pltf., & sent him an account crediting him with a sum made up of both premium & deposit. Pltf. bought & sold these shares for his own principals, & debited or credited them at the prices charged as above to himself on the purchase & sale by deft.: —Held: deft. was not precluded from charging pltf. with the deposit on the first transaction, but, upon pltf. bringing assumpsit for a balance, might set off such deposit. (2) Deft. bought also for pltf. shares in the T. & D. Railway, which then were only unissued scrip, so that no deposit was payable. By the custom of the market, Liverpool, the price does or does not include the deposit according as the scrip has issued or not: & the published share lists show how this is. Deft., before the scrip issued, sent pltf. bought & sold notes, stating the price without the deposit: but he daily sent pltf. the share lists. After the scrip issued, deft. paid the deposit; but he still omitted, in accounts afterwards sent, to debit pltf. with the deposit. Pltf. had made these purchases for his own principals; & he debited them at a price not including the deposit; but whether the contract, as between him & the principals, was a time bargain, or shares were actually delivered, did not appear:—Held: deft. was not, upon either supposition, precluded from charging for the deposit, & setting it off, as in the former case.—DAILS v. LLOYD (1848), 12 Q. SUB-SECT. 1.—CONTINUATION ON STOCK EXCHANGE.

263. Nature & effect of continuation—Does not amount to loan.]—To “continue,” in Stock Exchange phraseology, is a technical term, which means to sell & to agree to rebuy the same amount of stock at a future day at the same price, & a sum for accommodation. Such a transaction is a sale & repurchase, not a loan, & is not a ground for an action by the purchaser of stock for an account of profits.—BONGIOVANNI v. SOCIÉTÉ GÉNÉRALE (1886), 54 L. 265. — — — — —.]—Stockbrokers were employed by a client to make for him from time to time on the London Stock Exchange speculative purchases & sales of stock, shares, & bonds. The brokers furnished him with money to enable him to pay for the purchases, & he authorised them to hold the purchased stocks, shares, & bonds as security for their advances, & also to repledge them.

The brokers had a loan account with their bankers, with whom they deposited stock, shares, & bonds belonging to various clients en bloc, as security for the bankers' advances. The bank allowed the brokers to withdraw the deposited securities from time to time, as they required them, upon their depositing others of equal value. Ultimately, the brokers became defaulters on the Stock Exchange, & were adjudicated bkpts. At the date of the default there were in the hands of the bank various stocks & shares, & also some bonds payable to bearer, which the brokers had purchased for the client. The stocks & shares were transferable by deed in the ordinary way, & they had all been transferred to, & were registered in, the names of trustees for the bank. Some of the transfers were made by the client himself, some by the brokers, & some by third parties. Those which were made by the client were expressed to be for a nominal consideration; the others were expressed to be for full value. The bonds passed by delivery on the Stock Exchange, & were always there treated as negotiable.

The client claimed to be entitled to redeem the securities on paying to the bank the amount which was due from himself to the brokers; the bank claimed to hold the securities until payment of a larger amount which was due to them from the brokers. The client asserted that the authority which he had given to the brokers to repledge his securities authorised them to do so only for an amount not exceeding what was due from himself to them.

There was evidence that the majority of transactions on the Stock Exchange, when the purchaser of securities does not pay for them at once, is carried on upon a system as "contango," or "continuation," under which the person who provides the purchase-money becomes the owner of the purchased stock or shares, he entering into a contemporaneous contract with the purchaser to sell to him at a future day, generally the next "account day," on the Stock Exchange, an equal amount of similar stock or shares at the original price, increased by a charge called the "contango":—Held: upon the evidence, especially having regard to that relating to the "contango" system, there was nothing to lead the bank to suppose that the stocks & shares which were transferred to their trustees were not the brokers' own property; & the bank must therefore be treated as bona fide holders for value without notice, & their legal title could not be impeached; & consequently, the client could not redeem without paying the amount which was due from the brokers to the bank.

The arrangement is one by which the broker becomes, as between himself & his client, the owner of the shares in question although he is under a contract to provide an equal amount of similar shares at a future date (NORTH, J.).—BENTINCK v. LONDON JOINT STOCK BANK, [1893] 2 Ch. 120; 62 L. J. Ch. 358; 68 L. T. 315; 42 W. R. 140; 9 T. L. R. 262; 3 R. 120.

The broker, accordingly, borrowed a sum from pltf. but he wrongfully applied a part to his own use. The broker was unable to redeem the bonds, & deft. with knowledge of the circumstances, promised & agreed to call & give the broker his cheque for the deficiency on receiving back the bonds. The broker, acting on the faith of this promise, gave a crossed cheque to pltf., & redeemed the bonds. On the same day deft. by a trick, obtained possession of the bonds without giving his cheque; & the broker's crossed cheque was consequently returned, & he became a defaulter:—Held: deft. was responsible to pltf. for the fraud, & the bonds in his hands were still liable to repay pltf. his debt.—MOCATTA v. 275. ————.]—A stockbroker, member of the London Stock Exchange, deposited bonds as a security for a loan with a stock & share dealer, a member of the London Stock Exchange. On the day on which such a loan is repayable, the practice is for the lender to send back the securities to the borrower in the morning, & for the borrower later in the day to send a good cheque to the lender for the amount of the loan, or else to return the securities, or other securities of equal value. The lender sent back the securities to the borrower on the morning on which the loan was repayable:—Held: this did not affect the lender's right to the securities, if the borrower did not give him a good cheque for the loan, or send him other securities of a value equal to that of the securities sent back.—BURRA v. SUB-SECT. 2.—RELEASE OF INTERMEDIARIES.

A. In General.

299. Right to name transferee—By “name day” —Validity of custom.]—GRISSELL v. BRISTOWE, No. 304, post.

300. Effect of failure to name transferee—Liability of intermediary—Broker known to be acting as agent.]—A shareholder in an incorporated railway co. instructed a stockbroker to sell his shares. The broker agreed with a jobber for the sale of them; but the name of the purchaser was not mentioned. The jobber had been instructed to purchase by B., another broker, who, as the jobber knew, was not purchasing on his own behalf. B. afterwards requested time for completion, his principal not being ready; & the jobber granted the time on B. giving his own name as that of the principal. A deed of assignment was prepared from the vendor to B., who paid the price to the vendor, & took the deed of assignment executed by the vendor. Upon a bill filed by the vendor:—Held: B. was bound to execute the assignment, to procure himself to be registered, & to pay the calls made since the execution of the assignment by the vendor, & to indemnify the vendor against future calls; & a decree was made to that effect.—WYNNE v. PRICE (1849), 3 De G. & Sm. 310; 5 Ry. & Can. Cas. 465; 12 L. T. O. S. 531; 13 Jur. 295; 64 E. R. 493.

301. ———.]—A jobber purchasing shares on the Stock Exchange for the next account must, on the next name day, give to his vendor the name of a third person, who must be a bonâ fide purchaser & legally bound to accept a transfer of the shares, or he will himself remain personally liable in respect of such shares, & be bound to indemnify his vendor from future calls upon them.

The “carrying over” of shares from the first to a future name day, without the authority or consent of the jobber's nominee or ultimate purchaser, puts an end to the latter's liability, who thereupon ceases to be the purchaser, or a person legally bound to take the shares or to take a transfer of them, & the jobber in such case does not come within the principle of the decisions in Coles v. Bristowe, No. 254, ante, & Grissell v. Bristowe, No. 304, post, but remains liable to the original vendor.—MAXTED v. PAINE (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 81; sub nom. MAXSTED v. PAINE, 38 L. J. 302. ———.]—NICKALLS v. MERRY, No. 308, post.

303. Effect of refusing information to seller.]—(1) R. through his brokers sold shares on the Stock Exchange to a jobber, who passed a name into which R. executed a transfer & the sale was settled. The transfer was never registered, the co. was wound up, & the name proved to be that of a minor. The jobber gave R. all the information in his power, informing him to whom he resold the shares, & by what brokers the name was originally passed. On bill by R. against the jobber for indemnity against past and future calls:—Held: deft. was exonerated from all liability.

(2) Semble: the proper course for a vendor to pursue is, to make inquiries of all intermediate purchasers & brokers, & to sue the last principal or any intermediate person who refuses information.

(3) The customs & usages of the Stock Exchange when they do not contravene the laws of the realm, are to be observed & enforced in equity.—RENNIE v. MORRIS (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 203; 41 L. J. Ch. 321; 25 L. T. 862; 20 W. R. 227.

B. Effect of Naming Transferee.

(a) In General.

See, generally, COMPANIES, Vol. IX., pp. 328–331, Nos. 2074–2087.

304. General rule—Intermediary released from liability.]—(1) The usage of the Stock Exchange is that in transactions between members of it there is an implied understanding that, on the purchase of stock or shares, the buying jobber shall be at liberty by a given day, called the “name day,” to substitute another person as buyer, & so relieve himself from further liability on the contract, provided such substituted person be one to whom the original seller cannot reasonably except, & that such person accept a transfer of the stock or shares, & pay to the original seller the price:—Held: a reasonable usage; as a usage founded on the general convenience of all persons engaged in a particular department of business, cannot, as regards such persons, be said to be unreasonable.

(2) Pltf., the holder of shares in a co., through a broker, sold them to defts., jobbers on the Stock Exchange. After various sub-sales, the names of four persons were given to pltf.'s broker as the persons to whom the shares were to be transferred. Pltf.'s broker thereupon prepared four transfers to those persons, & pltf. executed them, & the broker delivered them with the shares to the brokers of the proposed transferees, who thereupon accepted the shares, & paid the price to pltf.'s broker. The transferees not having executed the transfers, or caused them to be registered, pltf. remained the registered holder of the shares, & was compelled to pay calls thereon. In an action against defts., claiming an indemnity against calls:—Held: the contract, as interpreted by the usage of the Stock Exchange, was, that defts., the first buyers, were to be at liberty to transfer the contract, with all its rights & obligations, to any sufficient buyers who would take it upon them with all its incidents; & as pltf. had transferred the shares to deft.'s nominees, & the latter had accepted & paid for them, though they had not executed or registered the transfers, defts. were released from all further liability on their contract to pltf.—GRISSELL v. BRISTOWE (1868), L. R. 4 C. P. 36; 38 L. J. C. P. 10; 19 L. T. 390; 17 W. R. 123, Ex. Ch.; revsq., L. R. 3 C. P. 112.

305. — Transfer accepted & price paid.]—COLES v. BRISTOWE, No. 254, ante.

306. — — — — —.]—A. having instructed his brokers, B. & co., to purchase shares in the O. Bank, received from them a bought note stating the purchase of shares from C., a jobber, but, according to the usual practice on the Stock Exchange, not specifying the registered numbers of the purchased shares. Between the date of purchase & the settling day the bank stopped payment & proceedings were taken to wind it up. A.'s solrs. thereupon wrote to B. & co. repudiating the contract for purchase contained in the bought note, on the ground that the contract was illegal & void, being in contravention of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 29, & giving notice that if they completed it it would be at their own risk. On the same day A. wrote a private letter to B. calling attention to the formal letter, " & I wish you clearly to understand that whatever position you may have to assume with regard to them (the shares) I consider myself fully bound to support you."—The name of A., as the purchaser of the shares, was returned to C. by B. & co., & on receiving a transfer & the share certificates the money was paid by them to the transferor's brokers. A. refused to execute the transfer, & returned it to B. & co., in whose possession it remained, without for some time any intimation to the vendor that A. repudiated the transaction :—Held : as the liability of C. (the jobber) in respect of the shares had ceased on the acceptance of the transfer by B. & co., it followed that A., though he had not executed the transfer, had in the circumstances, & by not definitely repudiating the authority given to B. & co. as his agents, become equitable owner of the shares, & bound to indemnify the vendor against all loss & liability in respect of them.—LORING v. DAVIS (1886), 32 Ch. D. 625; 55 L. J. Ch. 725; 54 L. T. 899; 34 W. R. 701; 2 T. L. R. 645.

307. — — — — —.]—Transferee must be able & willing to purchase.]—A jobber, the moment he purchases shares, as between himself & the seller undertakes all the obligations of a purchaser; but by the custom of the Stock Exchange a jobber can get rid of his liability, as the decisions now stand, by giving another name. If he gives the name of an infant, he fails to comply with that requisition & himself remains liable (MALINS V.-C.).—MAYNARD v. EATON (1873), 9 Ch. App. 416, n.; 29 L. T. 637; 22 W. R. 252; on appeal (1874), 9 Ch. App. 414, C. A.

308. — — — — —.]—(1) A purchase or sale of shares made by one who is not a member of the Stock Exchange & made through a broker who is a member of that body, will be treated as made subject to the Rules of the Stock Exchange. The Rules of the Stock Exchange imply that the name of the person given as that of the ultimate purchaser of shares must be that of one able & willing to purchase & they are not satisfied if the names given is that of a non-existent person, a lunatic, an infant, a married woman, or a person who has not given authority for the use of his name.

(2) The period of ten days limited by the rules of the Stock Exchange, within which the seller may object to the name given, has application only to objections grounded on the pecuniary incapacity of the person named to perform the contract, not to his capacity & willingness to enter into it.

M. sold 50 shares in a co. through his broker a member of the Stock Exchange to N. a stockjobber & also a member. On the settling day N. passed to M.'s broker the name of L., which he had received from some other broker, as the purchaser. M.'s broker made no objection to L. & prepared a transfer to L., which M. executed, & the price for the shares was paid. Two years afterwards the co. was ordered to be wound up; M. was placed on the list of contributories & ordered to pay certain calls in respect of the shares. It then appeared that the transfer had never been registered, & that L. was an infant :—Held : N. the jobber had not performed his contract inasmuch as he had not given to M. the name of a purchaser competent & willing to contract & he was liable to indemnify M. against the calls.—NICKALLS v. MERRY (1875), L. R. 7 H. L. 530; 45 L. J. Ch. 575; 32 L. T. 623; 23 W. R. 663, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. MERRY v. NICKALLS (1872), 7 Ch. App. 733, C. A.

309. Exception to rule—Sale with registration guaranteed—Transferee refusing to register.]—A firm of stock jobbers agreed on the Stock Exchange to buy 100 shares for a certain day, & on the sale note were the words "with registration guaranteed." The jobbers, before the day, gave the name of a transferee, who duly paid the purchase-money; the seller executed the deed of transfer, & delivered it to the transferee. The transferee never registered the transfer, & calls were made upon the seller, who filed a bill against the jobbers for indemnity, & had since died :—Held : the jobbers were liable to indemnify the estate of the seller.—*CRUSE v. 301. ———.]—A jobber purchasing shares on the Stock Exchange for the next account must, on the next name day, give to his vendor the name of a third person, who must be a bonâ fide purchaser & legally bound to accept a transfer of the shares, or he will himself remain personally liable in respect of such shares, & be bound to indemnify his vendor from future calls upon them.

The “carrying over” of shares from the first to a future name day, without the authority or consent of the jobber’s nominee or ultimate purchaser, puts an end to the latter’s liability, who thereupon ceases to be the purchaser, or a person legally bound to take the shares or to take a transfer of them, & the jobber in such case does not come within the principle of the decisions in *Coles v. R. 252; on appeal (1871), 9 Ch. App. 414, C. A.

308. ———.]—(1) A purchase or sale of shares made by one who is not a member of the Stock Exchange & made through a broker who is a member of that body, will be treated as made subject to the Rules of the Stock Exchange. The Rules of the Stock Exchange imply that the name of the person given as that of the ultimate purchaser of shares must be that of one able & willing to purchase & they are not satisfied if the names given is that of a non-existent person, a lunatic, an infant, a married woman, or a person who has not given authority for the use of his name.

(2) The period of ten days limited by the rules of the Stock Exchange, within which the seller may object to the name given, has application only to objections grounded on the pecuniary incapacity of the person named to perform the contract, not to his capacity & willingness to enter into it.

M. sold 50 shares in a co. through his broker a member of the Stock Exchange to N. a stockjobber & also a member. On the settling day N. passed to M.'s broker the name of L., which he had received from some other broker, as the purchaser. M.'s broker made no objection to L. & prepared a transfer to L., which M. executed, & the price for the shares was paid. Two years afterwards the co. was ordered to be wound up; M. was placed on the list of contributories & ordered to pay certain calls in respect of the shares. It then appeared that the transfer had never been registered, & that L. was an infant:—Held: N. the jobber had not performed his contract inasmuch as he had not given to M. the name of a purchaser competent & willing to contract & he was liable to indemnify M. against the calls.—NICKALLS v. MERRY (1875), L. R. 7 H. L. 530; 45 L. J. Ch. 575; 32 L. T. 623; 23 W. R. 663, II. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. MERRY v. NICKALLS (1872), 7 Ch. App. 733, C. A.

309. Exception to rule—Sale with registration guaranteed—Transferee refusing to register.]—A firm of stock jobbers agreed on the Stock Exchange to buy 100 shares for a certain day, & on the sale note were the words "with registration guaranteed." The jobbers, before the day, gave the name of a transferee, who duly paid the purchase-money; the seller executed the deed of transfer, & delivered it to the transferee. The transferee never registered the transfer, & calls were made upon the seller, who filed a bill against the jobbers for indemnity, & had since died:—Held: the jobbers were liable to indemnify the estate of the seller.—CRUSE v. 310. ——— Shares carried over without authority.]—
MAXTED v. PAINE, No. 301, ante.

311. ——— What amounts to ratification.]—On June 14, 1866, pltf.'s broker sold for him to deft., a jobber on the Stock Exchange, twenty O. & G. shares. £15 paid up, at 16½ discount, & received from deft. a name ticket, in which the name of E. was inserted as the purchaser at one-eighth, & the consideration stated to be £2 10s., whereupon the transfer was completed, by inserting therein the consideration, £2 10s. & the name of E. as the purchaser, in accordance with the ticket, & was executed by pltf. & handed by his brokers to P. & co., the London brokers of E., but it was never executed by E., nor sent to him, nor was he aware that any transfer had been executed; & the shares remained on the register in pltf.'s name as holder. Previously to this, on Apr. 29, 1866, E. had, through M., a country broker, instructed P. & co. to purchase for him, which they accordingly did, 1000 O. & G. shares for the account day of May 15. This transaction was a mere speculation on the part of E., & he never intended to take a transfer to himself, as was known from the first to M., but not to P. & co. until after the purchase was made by them, & shortly before the account day of May 15; on May 10, O. & G. stopped payment & E. was applied to by M. for money to take up the shares, or to carry them over, but he did not pay or provide any money for that purpose, nor did he give authority to M. or to P. & co. to carry the shares over beyond May 15, nor was he consulted by them, nor did he do or say anything further in the matter. On May 14, M. wrote to P. & co. informing them that E. could not meet his engagements as regarded the shares, & that M. could not meet them either, & therefore authorising P. & co. to do "whatever they thought best." Thereupon P. & co. carried over the contract in respect of a portion of the 1000 shares to the then next account day on May 30, & again subsequently from that day to the account day of June 14, on which last mentioned day they gave E.'s name for twenty of these shares, by means of the before-mentioned name ticket which was then handed by debt. to pltf.'s brokers, as above-mentioned; M. being aware & approving of what P. & co. had so done. Two calls were made on the shares by the liquidators in Aug. & Oct. 1866, respectively, & were paid by pltf. In Oct. 1866, E. was declared bkpt., & pltf. proved for the amount of the first call, on which a dividend was declared, but was never received by him. P. & co. proved & received a dividend on the amount of the purchase-money of the 1000 shares, but both pltf. & debt. were, at the time of the bkpcy. proceedings, ignorant of the before-mentioned transactions between E., M., & P. & co.

In an action by pltf. to recover from debt., as on a contract of indemnity as purchaser of the shares, the amount paid by pltf. for the above-mentioned calls:—Held: the shares having been carried over from May 15, without any authority, express or implied, from E. for so doing, the contract was at an end & so far as E. was concerned on that day; & the contract of June 14, therefore, was not binding on him, & therefore debt. not having given to pltf. a contract binding on E. as the ultimate purchaser, had not discharged himself from the responsibility which, by the usage of the Stock Exchange, rests on the jobber, under such circumstances, as the purchaser, & so remained liable to indemnify pltf. against the calls, according to the rule laid down in Maxsted v. Paine, No. 301, ante; (2) neither the taking no notice by E. of M.'s application for money to take up or carry over the shares, nor the proceedings in bkpcy., amounted to a ratification by E. of the carrying over the share on May 15, & May 20, & the giving in his name on June 14, or by pltf. of the acceptance of such name as that of the actual purchaser; & no repudiation of the transfer on the part of E. was necessary.—MAXSTED v. MORRIS (1869), 21 L. T. 535.

313. Implied undertaking by buyer or seller—To buy or sell from or to person named—Validity of custom.]—The question, then, is, what is the nature of the contract which a man enters into when he directs shares to be bought or sold through the instrumentality of the Stock Exchange? The answer, in my opinion, is a very plain & obvious one; he undertakes to buy & sell according to the practice & usage of the Stock Exchange, assuming of course such practice & usage not to be illegal. That practice & usage may, I believe, be stated to be generally to this effect: The broker instructed to buy shares enters into a contract with a jobber, who undertakes to deliver on a particular day a certain number of shares at a specified price; the jobber then buys those shares at any price he pleases from another broker, who is instructed to sell shares, & this other broker contracts to deliver these on the day specified; when the day arrives the names of the seller & purchaser are exchanged, an instrument of transfer is presented to the person who instructed the broker to sell, he, executes the transfer to the person who instructed the broker to buy, who accepts the shares, & thereupon the transaction, as between the seller & the buyer, is complete (LORD ROMILLY, M.R.).—*HODGKINSON v. 314. Objection by seller—Time for making—Customary time.]—Pltf. having through his brokers on the Stock Exchange sold to debt., a jobber, ten shares in O., G. & co., Ltd., debt. on the "name-day" passed a ticket to pltf.'s brokers containing the name of G. as the ultimate buyer. No objection was made to the name, & pltf. executed a transfer to G. of the ten shares. It was afterwards discovered that the brokers named on the ticket as G.'s brokers had been instructed to buy by S., & had, in fact, bought a large number of shares for S. as undisclosed principal. The ten shares in question, the dealings not being for specific shares, were delivered to them as part of the shares so purchased; but the name of G. was passed in pursuance of S.'s instructions, & according to an arrangement by which G., who was a person of no means, consented to allow his name to be passed in consideration of a sum of money paid to him. The purchasing brokers, as well as debt. were ignorant of this arrangement. Calls having been made on the shares which pltf. was compelled to pay, & which he was unable to recover from G., he brought this action to recover them from debt.:—Held: debt. had fulfilled his obligation by passing a name to which no objection was taken within the time limited by the usage, & in the absence of any fraud on his part, he could not be treated as ultimate buyer himself, or be made liable for the calls.—*MAXTED v. 316. Infant.]—D. held shares in a joint-stock co., which he agreed, through his broker, to sell to pltf. N., a dealer on the Stock Exchange. N. in due time gave the name of G. E. as the transferee, & the shares were transferred to him. The co. was afterwards wound up; & as it appeared that G. E. was an infant, D. was placed on the list as contributory in respect of these shares, & had paid £1,300, for calls on them. D. commenced an action against N. to recover the £1,300, & N. then filed the bill in this suit against D. & T. E. the father of G. H. alleging that T. E. was the real purchaser of the shares & liable for any loss, & praying that the action might be restrained, & that the questions might be decided in the suit:—Held: D. ought not to be deprived of the opportunity of establishing his claim & of recovering, if he could, against N. merely because another person might also be liable to pay the money, & might be the person who ultimately would have to pay.—NICKALLS v. EATON (1870), 23 L. T. 689; 19 W. R. 172, C. A.

Shortly afterwards the co. was ordered to be wound up, & upon the application of the infant, his name was removed from the list of contributories, & the names of the transferors substituted in its place. By a resolution of the Committee of the Stock Exchange, the broker was ordered to indemnify the transferors:—Held: C. & co., must indemnify the brokers.—PEPPERCORNE v. CLENCH (1872), 26 L. 322. —.]—The owner of sixty £100 shares in a co., on each of which £10 had been paid up, sold them on the Stock Exchange to jobbers, who furnished the name of a purchaser to whom the shares were transferred, & in whose name they were registered. The co. was afterwards ordered to be wound up, when it turned out that the purchaser was an infant at the time of the transfer; & his name was thereupon removed from the list of contributories, & that of the vendor placed thereon. The vendor then filed his bill against the jobbers to compel them to indemnify him against all liability in respect of the shares, & to repay him all calls he might have to pay thereon, with costs. After defts. had put in their answer, an agreement was entered into between pltf. & the liquidator for a compromise of pltf.'s liability on the shares, amounting to £5,400, the terms of which were, in substance, that pltf. should pay the liquidator £2,000, transfer the shares to him, & authorise him to use his name in all proceedings against defts., & to retain all moneys recovered therein, which were to be applied in recouping pltf. the £2,000, & in satisfying all liability on the shares, in consideration whereof pltf. was, after all proceedings were over, to be released from all liability on the shares without further payment. Upon the hearing of the cause defts. did not dispute their liability to pltf. as vendor of the shares, but they contended that the release comprised in the agreement enured for their benefit, so as to make the £2,000 payable thereunder by pltf. the measure of their own liability either to pltf. or to the liquidator:—Held: the object & spirit of the agreement being to keep up & enforce the liability of defts., they could not set it up without giving effect to all its provisions, & consequently that it did not operate as a release in their favour, or relieve them in any degree from their liability to pay the full amount payable on the shares.—*HERITAGE v. 325. Person domiciled abroad.—A broker purchased on the Stock Exchange, from J.'s broker, certain not fully paid up shares in a joint-stock co., at a sum to be paid on the next settling day. The purchasing broker gave as his principal the name of G., a foreigner domiciled abroad; but J. refused to transfer the shares to G., on the ground that he was domiciled abroad, & had no property in this country to meet any liability which might accrue in respect of the shares:—Held: there was an implied contract between the brokers that the purchasing broker would furnish to the seller the name of a responsible transferee; a foreigner domiciled abroad was not such a responsible transferee & J. was not bound to execute a transfer of the shares to him.—GOLDSCHMIDT v. JONES (1870), 22 L. T. 220; 18 W. R. 513.

326. —.]—Pltf., through G. & B., stock-brokers, entered into a contract with M., a stock jobber, for the sale of 280 shares in a co., for the next account day, Apr. 27. The shares were £50 shares, on which £5 was paid, & a call of £5 was payable. As to 100 of the shares, M. arranged with deft. that he should take in 100 shares at £3 discount for M.; that is, on the name day, Apr. 26, M. would be entitled to receive from deft. a ticket containing the name & address of the person into whose name the shares should be transferred. M. was bound to deliver a similar ticket to G. & B. No such tickets were passed by deft. to M., nor by M. to G. & B.; but an informal memorandum was delivered by deft. to M., & by him to G. & B., & it was arranged between G. & B. & deft. that the delivery of the name should stand over until required by G. & B. On Apr. 27, pltf. executed, amongst others, a transfer for 100 shares, leaving the name of the transferee in blank, & transmitted it with the certificates to G. & B. On Apr. 30, G. & B. paid the call, & on that day deft. paid them the amount of the call, the difference between the £5 paid on the share & the £3 discount at which he had purchased & the stamp, & G. & B. settled with M.; G. & B. handed the certificates to deft., but retained the transfer. On May 3, certain stockbrokers agreed to take in for the deft. 100 shares, & gave him a ticket with the name of J., of Smyrna. Deft. delivered a ticket to G. & B. with J.'s name & initials, & no address, which they returned as imperfect. On May 11, the co. stopped payment, the transfer was never registered, & a call of £5 was made on pltf. as a contributory, which he paid, & sued deft. to recover back the amount:—Held: there was a contract between pltf. through G. & B. with deft., that when required deft. would deliver a name into which the shares might be transferred; as the name which deft. had offered to G. & B. was that of a foreigner residing abroad, he did not offer a person to whom no reasonable objection could be made; & deft. had not fulfilled the contract, & was liable to pltf. for the amount of call & interest as damages for the breach.—*ALLEN v. 329. Custom of Stock Exchange.]—Pltf., a holder of shares in a public co., agreed through his broker to sell them to a jobber for £202 10s. By the usage of the Stock Exchange, the transfer of the shares would not be made until a future day, & in the interval the shares might be again sold until a certain day, when the original buyer must name the person to whom the transfer was finally to be made. Accordingly, the shares were ultimately sold to deft. for £145, a call having been made in the meantime, & pltf. executed & gave to deft. a deed transferring the shares to him, the consideration named in which was £145, the difference being paid to pltf. by the jobber. Deft. never registered the transfer, & an order was made for winding up the co. Pltf. was compelled to pay calls upon the shares, & filed a bill for specific performance & repayment, alleging that there had been a purchase by deft. for £202 10s.:—Held: (1) the fact of the call having been made in the interval did not invalidate the contract.

(2) The usage upon the Stock Exchange, if not familiar to deft., was, at all events, familiar to his brokers, which is the same thing. He knew that shares frequently passed through several hands before they came into the possession of the actual purchaser to whom the transfer would be made, & he knew that the transfer would not be made by the person from whom he purchased, but by the holder of the shares. Therefore, deft. knowing this usage, & receiving & retaining the deed of transfer & certificates, acquiesces in the transaction, & becomes in fact the purchaser of the shares from the vendor who transferred them to him (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).—*HAWKINS v. 330. Duty of purchaser—To prepare transfer.]—In an action for a breach of contract in refusing to accept, at the time appointed by the contract, & to pay for, certain shares in a water, gas, & market co., such shares being by the co.'s Act of Parliament made personal estate, & a form of transfer under seal being thereby given, it is sufficient to aver that pltf., the vendor, "had always been ready & willing to do all things, & that all things had happened, etc., necessary to entitle him to the performance by deft. of his agreement": & notice to deft. of pltf.'s readiness & willingness to transfer the shares is not necessary or a condition precedent to pltf.'s right to recover, it being on the contrary the duty of deft., the purchaser, to prepare & tender a transfer for execution by pltf.; & a plea of want of such notice is bad, & no defence to the action.—COBBOLD v. PETO (1872), 27 L. T. 130.

331. ———.]—On the purchase of shares in a co. the obligation to prepare a transfer is, as a general rule, on the purchaser.—BIRKETT v. COWPER-COLES (1919), 35 T. L. R. 298.

332. ——— To tender transfer.]—A railway Act, sect. 147, enacted that the shares shall to all intents & purposes be deemed personal estate, & not of the nature of real property; sect. 148 enacted that the conveyance shall be in writing, & gave a short form of conveyance to be executed by the seller & purchaser:—Held: nevertheless, in order to enforce a contract for the transfer of shares, the purchaser must tender a conveyance to the vendor, as in the case of sales of real property.—*STEPHENS v. 336. Duty of seller—To execute transfer—Price stated in transfer differing from price received.]—Pltfs., as brokers for deft., on Oct. 2 sold to a jobber 100 shares in the General Credit co. for £5 a share, K., giving the name of S. as the ultimate purchaser, in whose name the usual transfer was made out. In that transfer the consideration money stated was the sum paid by S. being an increase of some £18 or £19 on the sum for which deft. had sold to K. This transfer was then, on the same day, executed by deft., & £495 being his full purchase-money, less £5, pltfs.' commission of £1 per cent., was paid to him by pltfs. Upon the executed transfer being sent to K. for delivery to S., K. discovered errors in the spelling of the names in the body of the document, for instance, deft.'s name was spelt "Eatan" instead of "Eaton," & the purchaser's name was spelt "Solomons" instead of "Salomons." K. thereupon corrected those errors, & at the same time filled in the date, which was in blank when executed by deft., by writing in "Sept. 30." Upon the transfer being then sent back to deft. for him to "initial" such corrections, he declined to do so, or to return the transfer, until pltfs. should pay him the difference between the price at which they sold the shares for him, & that at which they were bought by S. By reason of such refusal & the detention of the transfer, K. was compelled to buy in against pltfs., & the latter thereupon brought an action against deft. to recover the money paid by him to K. in consequence. At the trial deft. objected that he was not bound to re-execute the transfer, because he was thereby required to admit the receipt of a larger sum than he had actually received, & secondly, that the transfer was invalid by reason of the alterations in the names & date made by K. subsequently to its execution by deft., & that it was pltf.'s duty to tender a good deed to deft. stating the price actually paid to deft., & the increased price paid by the ultimate purchaser. A verdict was found for pltfs.:—Held: pltfs.' action for money paid was maintainable. Upon the execution of the transfer by deft. on Oct. 2 & the payment to him of his agreed purchase-money, the transaction was complete, & he had no longer any right to the transfer, & was not entitled to retain it on its being sent back to him to be initialled, nor to claim payment of the difference between the purchase-money received by him, & that which was paid by S. to K.

Qu.: whether, if the objections which were taken at the trial & by the rule had been made by deft. at the time when the transfer was sent back to him they might not have prevailed. But ct. held that the questions therein involved did not arise in the present case.—MEWBURN v. EATON (1869), 20 L. T. 449.

337. ——— Validity of custom to sign for different consideration.]—Deft. having instructed pltf. to purchase certain railway shares on the Liverpool Stock Exchange, received a transfer note on the settling day for the purpose of transferring his shares to the purchaser. It is the custom on the Liverpool Stock Exchange for the original seller to transfer his shares not to the immediate purchaser, but to some sub-purchaser who may have purchased from some person other than the original purchaser; & it frequently happens that the sum in the transfer note is different to the sum which the original seller is to receive. To avoid difficulty, at the foot of the transfer note it is stated that the consideration money differs from that which the first seller is to receive owing to the sub-sale by the original buyer, but that the note is so regulated to fulfil the provisions of Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184).

Deft. refused accordingly to sign the transfer because it stated that he had received a sum which was untrue:—Held: deft. was bound to sign the transfer deed; the footnote was to be read as part of the transfer, & was sufficiently explicit.

Semble: a custom to sign for a consideration different from that stated in the deed of transfer would be bad.—CASE v. MCCLELLAN (1871), 25 L. T. 753; 20 W. R. 113.

340. Proof of transfer—Admissibility of stock-broker's day book.]—During the trial of an action to establish pltf.'s right to be indemnified by the two defts., or one of them in respect of 200 shares transferred into pltf.'s name as trustee for defts. or one of them, pltf. desired to prove that the shares had been bought on the Stock Exchange for one of defts. through his brokers, G. & D. G. was dead, & pltf. tendered in evidence an entry in the day book of the firm of a purchase of 200 shares by G., for the particular deft.; & having proved that the entry was in the handwriting of G., that it was made by him in the ordinary course of business at the time of the purchase as a memorandum of the transaction, & that the ledger of the firm was made up from the day book, contended that it was admissible in evidence as a declaration made by a deceased person, first, because it was made against the pecuniary interest of the person making it; & secondly, because it had been made in the ordinary course of business:—Held: it was not admissible upon the first ground, because it might, according to the turn of the market, have been to the advantage of deceased; nor upon the second ground, because it was not made in the performance of any duty.—MASSEY v. ALLEN (1879), 13 Ch. D. 558; 49 L. J. Ch. 76; 41 L. T. 788; 28 W. R. 212.

CAUTY* (1811), 8 M. & W. 160; 2 Ry. & Can. Cas. 616; 10 L. J. Ex. 348; 5 Jur. 411; 151 E. R. 992.

In an action for not accepting the shares:—Held: evidence was admissible of a custom among brokers in mining shares, that in contracts relating to the sale & purchase of such shares, the delivery takes place at the time appointed for payment.—*FIELD v. 350. — As to genuineness of documents delivered—Reasonableness of rule.]—A person who employs a broker to sell shares on the Stock Exchange is bound to indemnify the broker for any liability he may incur, in consequence of carrying out his principal's instructions, under any rules of the Stock Exchange, provided that such rules are reasonable.

A rule which provides that the seller of shares or stock is responsible for the genuineness & regularity of all documents delivered, & for such dividends as may be received until reasonable time has been allowed to the transferee to execute & duly lodge such documents for verification & registration: & that, when an official certificate of registration of such shares or stock has been issued, the committee of the Stock Exchange will not, unless bad faith is alleged against the seller, take cognisance of any subsequent dispute as to title, until the legal issue has been decided, [is] a reasonable rule.—*SMITH v. 356. Proof of tender of price—Tender to broker—Purchaser failing to object.]—In an action for non-delivery of shares sold by deft.'s broker, deft. pleaded that no tender of the price had been made, & issue was joined thereon. It appeared that deft. was informed that a tender of the price had been made to his broker; & deft. in reply without objecting that the broker was not his agent, said he would endeavour to make an arrangement for the delivery of the shares:—Held: this was sufficient evidence to prove the tender.

Qu.: whether a tender to a broker is good.—JACKSON v. JACOB (1837), 3 Bing. N. C. 869; 3 Hodg. 219; 5 Scott. 79; 6 L. J. C. P. 315; 1 Jur. 262; 132 E. R. 645.

357. Authority of broker to receive payment.]—G., a stockbroker, who was one of three trustees & acted as broker to the trust, proposed to his co-trustees to sell B. stock belonging to the trust & re-invest in N. E. stock. The three trustees then, on Jan. 27, 1882, executed a transfer of the B. stock for a nominal consideration to two persons who were officers of a bank of which G. was a customer. G. gave the transfer to the bank as security for a loan by them to him, & the transfer was registered. G. in Feb. 1882, paid off the loan, & Feb. 15 the bank transferred the stock to purchasers from G., & without giving any notice to G.'s co-trustees, allowed him to receive the purchase-money. He invested it in N. E. stock in his own name. In 1883 he sold the N. E. stock & misappropriated the proceeds. Shortly after the sale of the B. stock G. had given an account to his co-trustees showing the sale of B. stock & a re-investment in N. E. stock, & in 1881 he rendered another account in which he represented the N. E. stock as still forming part of the trust funds. In 1885 he absconded. The co-trustees remembered hardly anything about the transaction, but admitted the genuineness of their signatures to the deed of transfer:—Held: the bank had occasioned the loss to the trust estate by allowing the purchase-money to come to the hands of G. who had no authority to receive it, & whom they had no sufficient reason for believing to have authority to receive it, & the bank must therefore make it good at the suit of the co-trustees, although the co-trustees had been negligent in not seeing that the N. E. stock was registered in the joint names of the trustees.

If he was authorised as a broker to sell, that must carry with it an authority to receive the purchase-money arising from the sale, since in the ordinary course it is paid to the broker (COTTON, L.J.).—*MAGNUS v. 360. General rule—Seller does not guarantee purchaser's registration.]—(1) Here the purchase of shares in a joint stock banking co. was made at the request of pltf. by a broker on the Stock Exchange in London, & the contract must be considered as made with reference to all the established usages of the Stock Exchange. . . .

According to these usages, the price of the shares is payable on the one broker handing over to the other the transfers & certificates (CAMPBELL, C.J.).

(2) Looking at the subject-matter of the sale, shares in a bank, & the place in which the sale took place, the Stock Exchange, & having regard to the rules & practice of the Stock Exchange, I do not think that the vendor in such a case contracts that the directors shall accept the vendee or a proper person to be admitted a shareholder in the bank (HILL, J.).—STRAY v. RUSSELL (1859), 1 E. & E. 888; 28 L. 361. ———.]—(1) A contract for the sale of shares in a registered co. was made through brokers upon & subject to the rules of the Stock Exchange. In accordance with the practice of the Stock Exchange the transferee of the shares paid the price of them to the vendor upon delivery to him of a duly executed transfer. An application for registration of the transfer being subsequently made to the directors of the co., who were empowered by the arts. of asscn. in their discretion to decline to register a person claiming by transfer of shares, they refused to register the transferee as a member of the co. The transferee thereupon brought an action to recover back the price of the shares from the vendor as money had & received to his use:—Held: the contract for the sale of shares on the Stock Exchange did not import an undertaking by the vendor that the co. would register the transferee, & the action was not maintainable.

According to the rules & usages of the Stock Exchange, the name of the proposed transferee must be given on a certain day to enable the vendor to make out the transfer, & payment is to be made upon the transfer being executed & handed over. All this takes place before the purchaser applies to have his name entered on the register. The fact of the money passing before the application for registration, is strong to show that the obligation to procure the registration is no part of the contract which the vendor has entered into (FRY, L.J.).

(2) In my opinion, the duty of the vendor was to hand over the securities at the time fixed by the rules of the Stock Exchange. He must execute a proper transfer (LOPES, L.J.).—LONDON FOUNDERS ASSOCN. v. CLARKE (1888), 20 Q. B. D. 576; 57 L. J. Q. B. 291; 59 L. T. 93; 36 W. R. 489; 4 T. L. R. 377, C. A.

362. Purchaser to secure own registration.]—Deft., a stockbroker who had undertaken to sell shares of a joint-stock bank for pltf., a shareholder, sold them to a jobber on the Stock Exchange & sent an advice note of such sale to pltf., but in accordance with the custom of the Stock Exchange, the bought & sold notes between deft. & the jobber omitted to state the name of the registered proprietor of the shares as required by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 29, s. 1, by reason of which the contract for sale was void, & the bank having stopped, & an order for its winding-up having been made before the day on which the jobber was entitled to name the person willing to be the purchaser, the contract for sale was repudiated, & pltf. remained the holder of the shares.

All that pltf. had undertaken to do by the contract for sale was to deliver a duly executed transfer of the shares & it would be for the purchaser to get the transfer registered (CORTON, L.J.).—NEILSON v. JAMES (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 546; 51 L. J. Q. B. 369; 46 L. T. 791, C. A.

363. ———.]—Pltf. transferred shares of his in a registered co. to A. B. on an agreement between them that if A. B. was accepted as shareholder by the co. the shares should be taken by him at their market value in reduction of a debt due to him from pltf. The consideration was stated in the transfer to be only the sum of 5s., & the transfer was brought to the co. for registration without any notice of the said agreement between pltf. & A. B. The co. refused to register, on the ground that pltf. was indebted to them, but on its being established after an interval of eighteen months, that pltf. was not so indebted, the co. registered the transfer. In an action against the co. for wrongfully refusing to register, pltf. sought to recover as damages the loss in the market value of the shares between the time when the transfer was brought to the co. to be registered & the time when it was in fact registered:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover only nominal damages, as the contract between pltf. & A. B. was a special one, of which the co. had had no notice, & the ordinary contract on the sale of registered shares was only that the seller should give to the purchaser a valid transfer & do all required to enable the purchaser to be registered as member in respect of such shares, the duty of the purchaser, which has not been altered by Companies Act, 1867 (c. 131), s. 26, being to get himself registered as such member.—SKINNER v. CITY OF LONDON MARINE INSURANCE CORPN. 365. Right of broker to retain—In repayment of advance.]—To an action against acceptors of a bill of exchange for £419 2s. damages being laid at £500, defts. pleaded, first, as to £4 18s. parcel, etc., payment of £5 into ct., & secondly, “as to the residue of the sum mentioned in the declaration,” that plffs. were the brokers of C. I. H., & sold certain property for him for £415 12s. 6d., payable on a day which would arrive before the bill would become due, & that he applied to plffs. to advance him the amount, which they agreed to do, if C. I. H. would procure defts. to accept a bill for £419 2s. & that plffs. agreed to appropriate the purchase-money, when received by them, towards the payment of the bill; & that, thereupon, defts. for the accommodation of C. Defts. sold the stock for £970, with which, less commission, they credited X. in his general account with them. The account between X. & defts. was ultimately balanced by subsequent entries, including two bills drawn by X. & accepted & paid by defts. but no payment expressly on account of the sale of Consols. The fact of the sale of the stock was not discovered by C. for several months, when X. was insolvent; & no part of the proceeds of sale was received by C.:—Held: defts. were not relieved by the transactions between them & X., or by the fact that C. was a foreign principal, from liability; & judgment given for the proceeds of the stock with interest at 4 per cent.

It was [the duty of] defts. to pay the amount less their commission, to plff. or to some person authorised by him to receive it, & if defts. paid to any such authorised person & if with that person they had other private dealings, they were bound, as between themselves & plff. to pay that authorised person in cash, & not in account between them. Breach by broker—Measure of damages.]—L. ordered deft. to buy for him rupee paper; deft. sold rupee paper of his own to L., whilst he fraudulently led L. to believe that it belonged to third persons. The value of rupee paper afterwards became considerably less, but L. held for many months what deft. had sold to him, & ultimately re-sold it at a loss of £43,000:—Held: the measure of damages was not the amount of the loss ultimately sustained by L., but the difference between the price which he paid for the rupee paper & the price which he would have received, if he had resold it in the market forthwith after purchasing it.—*WADDELL v. Before the settling day arrived they closed pltf.'s account without instructions by selling the stocks. Upon being informed of the closing of his account, pltf. gave defts. notice that he should insist on performance by them of their contract when the settling day arrived. At the time when defts. closed pltf.'s account the prices of the stocks were falling, but shortly afterwards they rose again, & they were higher at the end of May settlement, having been still higher during the interval between the closing of pltf.'s account & the end of May settlement. In an action brought by pltf. against defts. after the end of May settlement for non-performance of their contract to carry over the stocks, defts. contended that the damages ought to be assessed with reference to the prices of the stocks when defts. closed pltf.'s account, & that so assessed they would be nominal:—Held: defts.' contention was incorrect, & pltf. was entitled to insist on performance of defts.' contract at the end of May settlement, & to measure his damages with reference to the prices of the stock at that date.

The broker contracted with L. for the stock, & received the price from the customer as for himself & his deceased partner. He did not pay L. for the stock, but allowed him interest for three months, & applied the money to his own purposes. Immediately before his adjudication of bkpcy., he sold a debenture of the co. to A. for the amount due upon it, without requiring any money for the four years' interest which was also due, & with the money paid L. part of the money the price of the stock; & gave him a bill for the remainder, & L. then transferred the stock to the customer. The broker had previously privately appropriated this debenture to the safety of the customer, & when he sold it had no authority from the customer for so doing. The broker became bkpt. upon a trader debtor summons, issued by the official manager of the co., & received from one of the cours. a first class certificate, with protection; but, upon appeal, the Lords Justices, for the above & other misconduct, discharged the order & suspended the certificate for five years, without protection for seven weeks, both from the date of the judgment.—*Re BOYD, Ex p. (2) A member of the Stock Exchange was indebted to debts. He became a defaulter on the Stock Exchange, & the liquidation of his affairs was undertaken by pltf., as official assignee, under the above-mentioned rules. For the purposes of the liquidation he was authorised by pltf. to sell, & accordingly sold, certain shares standing in his name to debts., who were not members of the Stock Exchange, but who knew his position & that of pltf. as official assignee. parties.]—The rules of the Stock Exchange operate to effect an assignment of all the assets of a member of the Stock Exchange declared a defaulter to the official assignee of the Stock Exchange; & that assignment, unless invalidated in bkpcy. proceedings against the defaulter, is valid as against persons who are not, as well as those who are, members of the Stock Exchange.—*LOMAS v. 408. — Whether amounting to act of bankruptcy.]—(1) The rules of the Stock Exchange as to defaulting members of the body are the rules of a domestic forum, which have no influence on the rights of those who are not amenable, as members, to the jurisdiction of that body. They cannot, therefore, govern the rights of the general creditors of a defaulting member. C. was a member of the Stock Exchange; he became unable to meet his Stock Exchange engagements, & he gave notice thereof to the secretary. In such a circumstance the rules of the Stock Exchange prescribe the course to be followed. The defaulter ceases to be a member of the body. Two members of the body act as official assignees of the defaulter, a meeting of the creditors is called, the defaulter, as he is required to do, makes his statement, & the assembled creditors having decided what is to be done, these official assignees carry the decision into execution. The Committee of the Stock Exchange has the power to re-admit the defaulter or to refuse him re-admission. C. made his statement at the first meeting, declaring, at that time, that he had no debts outside the Stock Exchange. His Stock Exchange creditors then consented to accept a composition, & to provide for a part of it, he, at the demand of the official assignees, gave them a cheque for £5,000 then standing to his credit in the Bank of England. The official assignees obtained the money & apportioned it among his Stock Exchange creditors. He afterwards confessed to owing debts to a large amount to outside creditors, & was declared a bkpt. The trustee in bkpcy. on behalf of the general creditors, claimed from the official assignees of the Stock Exchange the £5,000:—Held: he was entitled to claim it; for what was done by C. amounted to a cessio bonorum, & constituted an act of bkpcy.

(2) The money was voluntarily paid with the view to give the Stock Exchange creditors an undue preference.

(3) In R. 167 of the Stock Exchange, that the assignees shall collect & pay "the assets" to their joint account at a banker's, the word "assets" means the whole of the defaulter's available property; & under r. 153 these assets are to be distributed exclusively to those creditors whose claims arise out of Stock Exchange transactions.—*TOMKINS v. will be cognisable in cts. of law in respect to contracts between members of the Stock Exchange for the sale & purchase of such dividends

Hence, if a broker, employed to sell prospective dividends on shares by a person holding or whom he has no reason to believe does not hold such shares, sell to a jobber, he will be personally liable to the jobber, & may pay the amount for which he is liable, although forbidden to do so by his principal, & may recover from his principal the amount so paid.—*MARTEN v. really carried out as contemplated, but from unforeseen causes come to be settled by differences. But if, in contemplation of the parties, they are at their inception intended to be speculative transactions, to be settled by adjustment of prices according to the rise or fall of the market, & not by the delivery of the subjects bought or sold, they become gambling transactions.—

the broker knows that his principal is a mere speculator, & wholly unable to pay for the actual stocks bought, or to deliver those sold.

Deft. desiring to speculate on the Stock Exchange, employed pltf. a stockbroker, to buy & sell stocks & shares for him. Deft. did not expect or intend to have to accept actual delivery of what pltf. bought, or to deliver what pltf. sold for him, but knowingly ran the risk of so having to accept delivery or to deliver, in the hope & expectation that pltf. would be able to arrange his sales & purchases so as to render nothing but differences actually payable or receivable by deft. Pltf. accordingly made large purchases & sale of stock under contracts between himself & various stock jobbers.

Pltf. in making the contracts, knew that deft. would be wholly unable to pay for the stock purchased, or to deliver that sold. In an action by pltf. to recover commission & money paid by him for differences:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover.

The transaction was to be completed on the next settling day. The Rules of the Stock Exchange in such cases are similar to those in the case of loans on deposit. M. did not take up the shares on the day appointed, but the difference of the value was paid & the transaction carried on to the next settling day, as a purchase, at the market price of the then settling day, & so on from time to time. The shares remained with the vendor, but the dividends were accounted for to M. Some months after the original contract X. bought back 20 of the shares & accounted to M. for the price, & the contract was carried on for the remaining 80 only. On M.'s being declared a defaulter, X. took to the 80 shares, which were worth less than the price agreed upon in the last continuation of the contract, & sought to prove for the difference :—Held : looking at all the circumstances, & especially at the repurchase of part of the shares the transaction must be considered to have been a bonâ fide contract of sale, & not a scheme to cover a wagering bargain for payment of differences, & the proof, therefore, must be admitted.—*Re MORGAN, Ex p. The stock jobber did, however, offer to deliver certain shares & stock :—Held : although the parties may have contemplated that, as a whole, there would be a mere payment of differences between them, yet inasmuch as the actual contracts entered into involved the liability for the actual delivery of the stock dealt with, they were not gaming or wagering transactions within Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 18.—*UNIVERSAL STOCK EXCHANGE v. Pltf. paid to deft. a subscription of £20 upon the terms of the circular, & at the end of the ninety days there accrued a profit upon the prices of the stocks. Pltf. also paid to deft. a subscription of £20 in respect of a similar trust, which resulted in a loss. Deft. repaid to pltf. the amount of his subscription in respect of the first-named trust. In an action to recover the amount of the profit less 10 per cent. in respect of the first-named trust & the £20 subscription in respect of the second trust:—Held: though the subscriber was, under the terms of the circular, in any event not to lose his subscription, yet, inasmuch as he would lose interest upon the amount of the subscription, there was a sufficient loss to make the contracts gaming or wagering contracts within Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 18, & pltf. was not entitled to recover.—*RICHARDS v. 455. ——— Unappropriated deposit.—(1) Gaming contracts between a stockbroker & his client for differences on the sale & purchase of stocks & shares resulted in a balance in favour of the client. It was agreed that the broker should sell certain stock to the client which he would accept in payment of the balance due to him & in pursuance of this agreement a contract note was forwarded by the broker. The stock was not delivered & the client sought to prove in bkpcy. against the estate of the broker for damages for non-delivery of the stock:—Held: as the balance resulting from the gambling transactions could not have been recovered from the broker there was no consideration for the promise to deliver the stock, & no proof could be admitted in respect of the non-delivery.

(2) The client had deposited money with the broker as cover to secure him against loss on the gaming transactions which had resulted in a balance in favour of the client:—Held: the money deposited not having been used for the purpose for which it was deposited proof in respect of the amount was admissible.—*Re CRONMIRE, Ex p. SECT. 3.—RIGGING THE MARKET.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

459. Action on market rigging contract—Not maintainable.—Pltf. brought an action against defts. who were stockbrokers, through whom he had purchased shares in a projected co., to obtain rescission of the contract for the purchase of such shares, & to recover back the purchase-money which he had paid in respect of them to defts., on the ground that defts., while acting as pltf.'s brokers, had delivered their own shares to him instead of purchasing them upon the Stock Exchange. At the trial it appeared upon pltf.'s own case that the money sought to be recovered has been paid by pltf. in pursuance of an agreement between him & one of defts. by which such deft. was with the money to purchase upon the Stock Exchange a number of shares in the projected co. at a premium with the sole object of inducing the public to believe that there was a real market for the shares & that they were at a real premium, which, in fact, as pltf. & defts. well knew, they were not:—Held: the action was based upon an illegal contract, & could not be maintained.—SCOTT v. BROWN, DOERING, McNAB & Co., SLAUGHTER & MAY v. BROWN, DOERING, McNAB & Co., [1892] 2 Q. B. 724; 61 L. J. Q. B. 738; 67 L. T. 782; 57 J. P. 213; 41

460. Question for jury.—In an action for money had & received by an allottee against a managing committeeman of a railway, it appeared that two days before the last day for paying deposits, & three before that on which pltf. paid his deposit, the shares of the co. were bought up in the market, by order of the committee, to a large extent, & that deft. drew cheques for such purchases after pltf. paid his deposits, & before he executed the deeds. It also appeared that of the £150,000 required by way of deposit, only £14,600 was paid in on Nov. 14:—Held: it was for the jury to say whether the shares had been bought with a view to rigging the market, & so to induce the allottees to register, or honestly to keep up their value, & whether the directors had done any act calculated to mislead pltf., or had suppressed information as to the position of the co. which ought to have been communicated to the shareholders before the deed was presented to him for his signature.—*LANDON v. Powell, [1921] 2 K. B. 51.

462. — — —.]—By his statement of claim pltf. alleged that defts., who were the promoters of a co., conspired to make & made false & fraudulent representations to the directors of the co. by which the bulk of the shares in the co. were allotted to the nominees of defts., instead of to the public as the directors were induced to believe, & also by false & fraudulent representations to the committee of the Stock Exchange obtained from them a settling day; & that the object of defts. was to gain control of the market in the shares of the co. & to cause a belief that allotment had been bond fide made to the public, & to induce the public to make contracts for selling such shares, & so to compel such members of the public as had entered into such contracts to purchase shares from defts. at such prices as defts. should choose to fix. Pltf. was one of the members of the public who was thus induced to make contracts for the sale of shares in the co., & in order to fulfil his contracts was compelled to purchase shares at a greatly enhanced price, & suffered damage thereby:—Held: no cause of action was disclosed.

We know one right that a man has as against a stranger, which is this: That a stranger should not make a false statement to him with the intent that he should act upon it; & if he does act upon it & suffers damage, then the one having done that which the other had a right to insist that he should not do, he could maintain an action. Now, what other right is it alleged that pltf. had as against these defts? The first seems to be that he had a right, not that defts. should tell him the truth or should not tell him what was false, but that he had a right that deft. should not tell some one else an untruth. I protest that there is no such right that I know of known to the law of England. I have tried to put my views of the matter in broad language, & I say there is no such right that I know of in the law of England. Then pltf. says: "I have this further right, that the people who have nothing to do with me may not agree together to do something, & do that which results in an injury to me." I do not know of any such right. If by something which they do, which is no breach of any right which pltf. has, he has suffered damage it cannot be helped. There is no legal remedy for it, & there is no infringement of any legal right (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—SALAMAN v. WARNER (1891), as reported in 65 L. T. 132; 7 T. L. R. 484, C. A.

The judge having granted an injunction until the trial of the action, the Ct. of Appeal refused to grant an injunction unless within a week pltf. gave security to certain of defts.—ROBERTSON v. HEFFER (1893), 9 T. L. R. 622, C. A.

See Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), ss. 21-23; Public Health Acts, 1875 (c. 55), s. 171; 1925 (c. 71), s. 68; Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1907 (c. 53), ss. 78, 88; Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 78; Metropolitan Police Act, 1839 (c. 47), ss. 51-54, 59; Metropolitan Streets Acts, 1867 (c. 134), ss. 3, 4, 10-13, 22, 24; 1885 (c. 18), s. 2; Metropolitan Public Carriage Act, 1869 (c. 115), s. 14; Ministry of Transport Act, 1919 (c. 50); London Traffic Act, 1924 (c. 34); Statutory Rules & Orders, 1924, No. 1015; 1925, Nos. 179, 322, 549, 648, 805, 806, 892, 906, 907; 1927, Nos. 101, 351, 804, 1078.

1. "Driving" & "conducting" cattle—Cattle conveyed by van—Construction of local Act.]—A local Act for a parish, in which was a large cattle market, enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any drover or other person to conduct or drive through any of the streets in the parish any oxen, sheep, or other cattle, during Sunday:—Held: a person driving a van with horses, in which were calves being conveyed to the market, was not "driving" or "conducting" cattle within the statute.—TRIGGS v. LESTER (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 259; 13 L. T. 701; 30 J. P. 228; 14 W. R. 279.

2. Powers of Commissioners of Police—To give direction to constables—Metropolitan Police Act, 1839 (c. 47), s. 52.]—The Comrs. of Police gave directions, under above sect. to constables to turn empty cabs that were being driven at a walk out of the Strand into the side streets, in order to prevent obstruction. The driver of an empty cab, upon being directed by a constable, refused to turn out of the Strand, & an obstruction was caused thereby. Upon an information for a penalty against the cabdriver, under London Hackney Carriages Act, 1843 (c. 86), s. 33, for causing an obstruction in the Strand by wilful misbehaviour, the magistrate found that the cabdriver knew of the directions, & that the Strand on the day in question was liable to be obstructed, & that the directions were lawful & reasonable for preventing obstruction. He accordingly convicted the driver:—Held: in the circumstances the Comrs. had power to give the directions under sect. 52 of the Act of 1839, though no regulations were made & published under Metropolitan Streets Act, 1867 (c. 134), s. 11; & therefore, the driver was liable to be convicted for causing an obstruction by wilful misbehaviour.—R. v. LUSHINGTON, Ex p. KEEN (1899), 15 T. L. R. 388, D. C.

3. —To make orders for preventing obstruction—Whether confined to extraordinary occasions—Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89).]—Under above Act, s. 21, which provides that "the Comrs. may from time to time make orders . . . for preventing obstruction of the streets within the limits of the special Act in all times of public processions, rejoicings, or illuminations, & in any case when the streets are thronged or liable to be obstructed," the powers of Comrs. are not confined to making orders dealing with extraordinary occasions of obstruction. Where particular streets are normally thronged so that their liability to obstruction is chronic they may make orders for the prevention of obstruction in such streets applicable to every day of the week.—TEALE v. WILLIAMS, [1914] 3 K. B. 395; 83 L. J. K. B. 1413; 111 L. T. 285; 78 J. P. 383; 12 L. G. R. 958; 24 Cox C. C. 283, D. C.

4. Authorised regulation by constable—Disregard of constable's signals.]—Under Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 21, which enabled the Comrs. to make orders for preventing obstruction of the streets & to give directions to the constables for keeping order & preventing any obstruction of the streets, & imposed a penalty "for every wilful breach of any such order," an urban authority made an order for regulating the traffic which, after reciting that certain scheduled streets were at certain times thronged & liable to be obstructed, provided that the constables stationed at certain crossings should direct the drivers of vehicular traffic approaching any of such crossings by word or signal to stop or to come on:—Held: the driver of a vehicle who disregarded the direction of the constable stationed at a crossing for the regulation of the traffic, & drove on in disobedience to the signal of the constable to stop, committed a breach of the order made by the authority, & was properly convicted of an offence under Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 21.—DUDDERIDGE v. RAWLINGS (1912), 108 L. T. 802; 77 J. P. 167; 11 L. G. R. 513; 23 Cox C. C. 366, D. C.

5. Restricted streets in Metropolis—London Traffic Act, 1924 (c. 34)—Constitution of advisory committee—Whether additional members sit.]—On a reference to the advisory committee by the Minister of Transport of a question of declaring a street to be a restricted street under above Act, s. 7 (1), the additional members do not sit.—MAY v. BEATTIE, [1927] 2 K. B. 353; 96 L. J. K. B. 680; 137 L. T. 382; 91 J. P. 78; 43 T. L. R. 411; 25 L. G. R. 201, D. C.

SECT. 2.—THE RULE OF THE ROAD.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

6. Statement of rule.]—(1) There are three customary rules, or directions for driving, in meeting, each party shall bear to the left; in passing, the foremost person, bearing to the left, the other shall pass on the off side. But the driver of a carriage is not bound, under all circumstances, to pass another carriage on the off side; he may, if the street be very broad, go on the near side. In crossing, the driver should bear to the left hand, & pass behind the other carriage.

(2) In case for negligent driving, the law or usage of the road is not the criterion of the negligence. Therefore where deft.'s carriage was on the wrong side of the road, & in attempting to pass on the near, instead of the off side, pltf. sustained damages:—Held: it was for the jury to decide the question of negligence, without regard to the law of the road.—WAYDE v. CARR (LADY) (1823), 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 255; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 63.

centre line of a street is not negligence per se, even though the rule of the road in this country is to keep to the right.—OSBORNE v. LANDIS (Alta.)

10. Alternative courses available—Choice of hazardous course—Observance of rule of road no defence.—If the driver of a carriage upon a public road may adopt either of two courses, one of which is safe, & the other hazardous, & he elects the latter, he is responsible for the mischief which ensues, & he cannot, in such case, insist upon the fact that he kept to his own side of the road. —MAYHEW v. BOYCE (1816), 1 Stark. 423; 171 E. R. 517, N. P.

11. Regulation under local Act—Inflicting penalty for contravention—Notice essential to validity.—A local statute provided that regulations might be made by the M. corpn. requiring the drivers of heavy & slow moving vehicles to keep their vehicles to a particular portion of the street, & that "any person who shall contravene any such regulation after warning" should be liable to a penalty:—Held: any regulations which inflicted a penalty for driving in the middle of the road in the absence of warning would be ultra vires, & there could be no penalty inflicted inless a person had so driven after he had been warned. —v. A driver drove his lorry along a street in the borough so that the near wheels of the lorry were about 10 feet from the kerbstone, the off wheels being a few inches from the centre of the road, but never over the centre line of the road:—Held: the driver had not contravened the bye-law.—BOLTON v. The rule does afford an evidential test as to the negligence of the one or the other driver which may be decisive in many cases in fixing responsibility, but it does not justify a driver in taking the risk of a collision which he might easily avoid under circumstances which would indicate to a man of ordinary prudence that an accident was likely to occur.—CARTER v. 23. ———.]—Salford Improvement Act, 1862, s. 258 provides that "every person who, when driving or having the care or conduct of any cart or carriage . . . shall . . . by negligence or misbehaviour, prevent hinder or interrupt the free passage of any person, carriage, cart or animal . . . in the street, or shall not keep his cart or carriage . . . on the left or near side of the road for the purpose of allowing such passage . . . shall . . . be liable to a penalty . . ."

Applt. was charged under the above sect., that he, being a person driving a certain cart, did by negligence interrupt the free passage of a certain carriage. Applt. was driving a one horse lorry along the near tram lines, leaving a space of about ten feet between him & the kerb on the near side of the road. He was told by a police officer to keep to the near side. He did so for a few yards & then he turned on to the tram lines again, & proceeded along the same at a trotting pace. By going to the middle of the road, applt. obstructed three motor vehicles which overtook him, & in passing him they had to go on the offside of the road. There was no evidence to show that there was any vehicle or obstruction on the off tram lines or elsewhere on the offside of the road to prevent the vehicles passing applt. The justices convicted applt. of the offence charged:—Held: there was no evidence to show that applt. obstructed the free passage of the vehicles, & the appeal must be allowed.—SLEITH v. GODFREY (1920), 90 L. J. K. B. 193; 124 L. T. 152; 85 J. P. 46; 18 L. G. R. 727; 26 Cox, C. C. 655, D. C.

24. ——— Question of fact.]—Although the driver of a carriage is bound to leave sufficient room on the left hand side of the road for other carriages to pass he is only bound to keep it so as to leave sufficient room, it is matter of evidence whether sufficient room is left or not, in case any accident happens.—WORDSWORTH v. WILLAN (1805), 5 Esp. 273; 170 E. R. 809, N. P.

25. Tramlines near to kerb—Vehicles unable to pass between lines & kerb.]—The single lines of a tramway constructed under an Act of Parliament were at one place on a road, on an incline some 250 or 300 yards long, so placed that there was no room for a vehicle to pass between a tramcar & the kerb on one side of the road. At the top & at the bottom of the incline were loops which would enable a tram to pass another vehicle on that side of the road. There was ample room for a vehicle to pass a tramcar on the other side of the road. A dray coming down the incline proceeding on its near or left side of the highway met an electric tramcar which was lawfully running on the said lines, proceeding up the hill. As there was no room to pass, both vehicles stopped, & remained facing each other for fifty minutes, at the end of which time the tramcar backed to the loop at the bottom of the incline. The driver of the dray had been instructed by his employers not to cross over the tramlines on to his wrong side to make way for tramcars. A summons was taken out under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 50, against the drayman for wilfully obstructing the tramcar. The justices dismissed the summons, saying that they were of opinion that the drayman had not acted unlawfully in maintaining his right to drive on his left or customary driving side, & that consequently there had been no wilful obstruction on the part of resp. They consented to state is not necessary for the one overtaken to turn so as to be altogether to the right of the centre of the highway where the person overtaking him has on the left both ample space in which to pass & a sufficiently good road-bed.—*BOGAERT v. a case :—Held : as there was a doubt as to whether the justices meant that the drayman had an absolute right to continue on his left-hand side or merely that, owing to the action of the tramcar driver, the drayman's obstruction was not wilful, the case must be remitted to the justices to decide whether there had been wilful obstruction on the part of the drayman, with the direction that the drayman had no absolute right to maintain his course on the left, putting the tramcar driver to any amount of inconvenience, & the tramcar driver had no absolute right to make all other vehicles get out of his way, if, by acting reasonably, he could avoid inconvenience to them. 40. Obstruction by passenger—Riding outside omnibus—Contrary to regulation.]—The E. Corpn., who had statutory authority to run motor omnibuses, made regulation prohibiting on one section of a particular route passengers riding on the top of the omnibuses. The regulation was made for the safety of passengers in view of the camber of the road, & notice thereof was exhibited on the top of the omnibuses, but attention was not drawn thereto on passengers' tickets. Applt. who had previous knowledge of the regulation, was an outside passenger on an omnibus on the particular route & had paid the fare entitling him to travel over the section to which the regulation applied. When the omnibuses reached the beginning of that section he refused to come down from the top although his attention was again called to the notice by the conductor & an inspector, applt. stating that he had got his ticket & intended riding on the top to the terminus. The inspector declined to allow the omnibus to proceed while applt. remained on the top, & it was thereby delayed 20 minutes. Applt. having been convicted of a breach of the corpn.'s bye-law which provided that "No passenger or other person shall wilfully obstruct or impede any officer or servant of the council in the execution of his duty upon or in connection with any motor omnibus":—Held: applt. was not entitled to be carried on the top of the omnibus on the part of the route to which the regulation applied inasmuch as the corpn. had not, in respect of that part of the route, held themselves out as common carriers of passengers on the top of their omnibuses, or contracted to carry applt. on the top of the omnibus; applt.'s conduct amounted to wilful obstruction of the conductor & inspector within the meaning of the bye-law; & therefore, the conviction was right.—*BAKER v. 43. Criminal liability—Furious driving—Action against constables for wrongful arrest—Commission of offence to be within view of constables.]—Metropolitan Police Act, 1839 (c. 47), s. 51, imposes a penalty not exceeding 40s. for, amongst other things, "furious driving" in a thoroughfare; & s. 63 empowers any constable of the metropolitan police district to take into custody, without warrant, any person who, within view of such constable, shall offend in any manner against the Act. In an action in a county ct. against constables for a tort in taking pltf. into custody on a false & unfounded charge of furiously driving a horse & gig, to the danger of the passengers in a public highway, pltf., in stating his case, admitted that he had been taken before two justices, convicted, & fined 20s., & that he had paid the penalty, & had not taken any steps to unpeach the validity of the conviction. The judge thereupon asked defts. if they could prove the conviction; & they accordingly put in an examined copy, which stated the offence, but did not allege that it was committed "within view of the constables." The judge, being of opinion, that, "under the circumstances, the conviction was an answer to pltf.'s claim for damages," directed the jury to find for defts.:—Held: a misdirection.—*JUSTICE v. The projection was substantially built, & contained a door & shop front supported by wooden pilasters with large glass windows, & the plinths of the pilasters extended one and a half inches over the footway. For this he was convicted in a penalty under the bye-law:—Held: the specific offences enumerated were matters of temporary obstruction only; the general words at the end of the bye-law must be restricted to matters eiusdem generis with the offences specifically enumerated; on the facts deft. had made an obstruction of a permanent character; & therefore, the conviction was wrong.—*R. v. 49. Repair of carriage in highway—Exception in cases of accident—City Police Act, 1839 (c. xciv), s. 35.]—By above sect. a person is subjected to a penalty who in any public thoroughfare to the annoyance of the inhabitants or passengers repairs any part of any carriage “except in cases of accident where repair on the spot is necessary.”

A motor omnibus broke down about 10.30 a.m. in a street & was unable to proceed by its own mechanism, but had been pushed out of the traffic into a side street. About two hours afterwards applt., a mechanical fitter in the employment of the owners of the omnibus, arrived, & finding that the breakdown was easily remedied, he proceeded to repair the mechanism, which he did in about half an hour. The breakdown was due to an accident, & the repair in the thoroughfare was necessary to permit of the omnibus proceeding under its own mechanism, the time taken for the repair being reasonable. A magistrate having convicted applt. under above sect.:—Held: the conviction was right; (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J. & BUCKNILL, J.) on the ground that as it had been found that the omnibus could have been removed by other means than its own mechanism, its repair in the thoroughfare was not “necessary” within the meaning of the Act; (DARLING, J.) on the ground that the repair to come within the exception must be a repair “on the spot”—that is, where the accident happened, & as the repair was not done “on the spot,” but was done in a street to which the omnibus was dragged, an offence was committed.—*CHAPMAN v. 50. Promenade made under local Acts—Promotion of motor races by corporation—Ultra vires.]—By a local Act, passed in 1865, the corp. of Blackpool were authorised to make & maintain a carriage drive & a promenade, called “the parade,” by the sea. It was provided by sect. 13 of the Act that the carriage drive should be a public highway, by sect. 17 that the parade should not be a public highway, & by sect. 18 that the parade should be “kept & used exclusively for the purposes of recreation by persons on foot, & with or without carriages, in respect of which toll is authorised to be taken.” Sect. 19 authorised a toll of twopence for every bath-chair, etc., or like carriage driven by human power. By a later Act, passed in 1899, additional works were authorised, including a new carriage-way, absorbing the original parade, a new road with a tramway thereon alongside the said carriage-way, & a new parade alongside the tramroad. By sect. 7 it was provided that the corp. might appropriate the whole or such part of the new parade as they might think fit for the exclusive use of foot passengers, & by sect. 8 it was provided that the new road should be for the exclusive purpose of the tramways laid thereon. The parade was, in fact, used exclusively for foot passengers & bath-chairs, etc. The corp., in 1906, gave their approval to motor car races being held on the parade, & gave permission for part of the tramway road to be used for the purpose of cars returning to the starting point. They also undertook to keep the portion of the parade over which the races were to be run clear of traffic, & to erect a barrier & provide the necessary police control. This action was brought by the A.-G., at the relation of a ratepayer, for an injunction to restrain the corp. from organising or promoting motor races on the sea front:—Held: the corp. were in the position of trustees of the parade for limited public purposes, namely, for the purpose of use by foot passengers, perambulators, invalid carriages, & similar vehicles, & that it was an abuse of the parade to allow it to be used for either horses or motor cars, & a fortiori motor races.—*A.-G. v. 51. Validity of Board of Trade Regulation.]—A tramway co. were convicted before justices of the breach of a regulation of the Board of Trade, made under a local Act, relative to lamps being placed & lighted in a conspicuous position on the front of a tramway engine:—Held: the regulation was not invalid as a regulation, & its subject-matter need not have been dealt with by a bye-law; the offence being stated in the words of the regulation was sufficiently described, & the co. were responsible for the personal neglect of their engine driver.—ST. HELEN'S DISTRICT TRAMWAYS CO. v. WOOD (1891), 60 L. J. M. C. 141; 56 J. P. 70, D. C.

52. Validity of bye-law.]—A bye-law made by the county council of Warwickshire under Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), s. 16, was as follows: "Lights on Vehicles. A person driving or having charge of any vehicle . . . shall from the end of the first hour after sunset to 2 o'clock a.m., except during such part, if any, of that period as shall be between the rising & the setting of the moon, carry attached to such vehicle a lighted lamp or lighted lamps, which shall be so constructed or placed as to exhibit a light in the direction in which he is proceeding, & so as to prove adequate means of signalling the approach or position of the vehicle . . . provided also that where such vehicle is carrying timber, such person shall also carry attached at the end thereof a lamp or lamps so constructed as to exhibit a light or lights visible to persons overtaking such vehicle." Resp., a carter, was summoned for driving a waggon laden with timber during the prohibited hours without proper lights, contrary to the bye-law. The charge was dismissed on the ground that the bye-law was invalid as being unreasonable:—Held: the bye-law was valid.—WALKER v. STRETTON (1896), 60 J. P. 313; 44 W. R. 525; 12 T. L. 53. —.]—A bye-law made by a county council provided that "no person shall drive or cause to be driven any timber carriage over any main road or other highway in the county between sunset & sunrise unless it has lamps showing a bright & adequate light both to the front & rear of the carriage":—Held: the bye-law was reasonable & therefore valid.—*WILLIAMS v. A tramcar running on tramway rails in a highway is a "carriage" within the meaning of the above order, & therefore a motor car, when passing a tramcar proceeding in the same direction, must pass it on the right or off side thereof.—BURTON

PART IV. SECT. 1.

56 i. "Stage carriage."—A stage carriage within Carriages Act, 1890, is a vehicle running regularly on some defined route between definite termini, inviting persons to travel therein, each passenger paying a separate & distinct fare for his seat, accordingly a motor bus conveying passengers for hire on a particular day, or days only, between two places is not a "stage carriage."—*PARKIN v. 67. Personal privilege.]—An information was laid by an inspector against deft. for unlawfully driving a stage coach without having obtained a licence from the Improvement Comrs. of Llandudno. Deft. was in the employ of a carriage proprietor as a stage coach driver. The licencing committee appointed by the comrs. passed a resolution requiring drivers who desired their licences renewed to apply to the committee in person. The manager of the carriage proprietor applied to the licencing committee for a renewal of, amongst others, deft.'s licence. The committee refused to consider any application unless appets. attended personally. No complaint was made against deft. personally. Deft. subsequently acted as a driver without a licence. The justices held that deft. had failed to obtain a licence in consequence of the committee refusing to hear his application, although they had no complaint against him, & that under those circumstances the charge was trivial, & they accordingly dismissed it. The inspector who preferred the information appealed:—Held: the justices were wrong & should have convicted, for there had been a breach of the law, & the comrs. had a right to insist on the personal attendance of appets., the possession of a driver's licence being a personal privilege.—*BANTON v. A declaration in case stated, that pltf. obtained a driver's licence under the Act; that he was employed by deft., a proprietor of a hackney carriage, & under the provisions of the Act delivered the licence to him; & that, whilst the licence remained in deft.'s possession, the latter "wrongfully & unjustly wrote in ink upon the licence certain words purporting, & then being intended by deft., to give a character of pltf., as an unfit & improper person to act as a driver of hackney carriages, that is to say," etc., etc.; by reason whereof the licence became defaced & wholly useless to pltf., & pltf. was thereby hindered & prevented from obtaining employment as a driver, etc.:—Held: the action was maintainable, case was the proper form, & the declaration was sufficient.—HURRELL v. ELLIS (1845), 2 C. B. 295; 15 L. J. C. P. 18; 6 L. T. O. S. 128; 9 Jur. 1013; 135 E. R. 958.

70. — Reasons for discharge.]—The employer of a conductor of a metropolitan stage carriage is not justified in indorsing upon such conductor's licence, which has been deposited with him pursuant to London Hackney Carriage Act, 1843 (c. 86), s. 8, the reason for which he discharges him from his service. A declaration stated that pltf. had duly obtained a licence to act as a conductor of metropolitan stage carriages, under London Hackney Carriage Act, 1850 (c. 7); that deft., a proprietor of a metropolitan stage carriage employed him to act as conductor; that pltf., on entering on such employment delivered his licence to deft. under the provisions of London Hackney Carriage Act, 1843 (c. 86), s. 8, to be retained by him whilst pltf. remained in his service; & that deft. wrongfully & maliciously wrote in ink on the licence before he re-delivered the same to pltf. on his quitting such service, the words "discharged for being 1s. 4d. short. A. M." to signify that pltf. had been dismissed as being dishonest & that, by reason thereof, the licence became defaced, damaged, & useless to pltf., & he had been prevented from obtaining employment under it:—Held: the declaration disclosed a sufficient cause of action.—ROGERS v. MACNAMARA (1853), 14 C. B. 27; 2 C. L. R. 569; 23 L. J. C. P. 1; 17 Jur. 1166; 2 W. R. 19; 139 E. R. 12.

Annotation:—Apld. Norris v. Birch, [1895] 1 Q. B. 639.

71. — — —.]—To entitle deft. to notice of action under a statute, he must honestly intend to put the law into motion, & really believe in the existence of a state of facts which if they existed would have justified him in doing as he did. London Hackney Carriage Act, 1843 (c. 86), s. 24, empowers the proprietor of a cab, if he has any complaint against his driver, to summon him before a magistrate, who may indorse on his licence the nature of the offence; & s. 47 provides that a notice of action shall be given where a party is sued for anything done under the authority of the Act:—Held: a cab proprietor who, without summoning the driver before a magistrate, defaced his licence by writing on it that he had been dismissed for damaging his cab & bringing home no money, was not entitled to a notice of action, inasmuch as he could not have honestly intended to put the law into motion, or really believe that he was acting under the authority of the statute.—*HEATH v. The effect of these entries was found to be to prejudice the driver with other cab proprietors, to the knowledge of the foreman who made the entries. At the hearing of a summons against the proprietor for defacing the licence, the driver called two cab proprietors who said that they should refuse to employ a driver producing a licence so marked; but no evidence was given that he had actually asked for employment & been refused it:—Held: the entries were not made in compliance with above Act, s. 8, but amounted to

75. Tramcar.—Applts., the Blackpool & Fleetwood Co., were convicted before justices of having used a tramcar as a hackney carriage without having obtained from the local authority a licence for the carriage to ply for hire, contrary to the [local] Act of 1896:—Held: (1) the powers granted to the Board of Trade by virtue of the Act of 1896 were not inconsistent with those granted to the local authority by virtue of Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 48, & Parts II. & III. of that Act were incorporated with the Act of 1896; (2) the tramcar was a hackney carriage within Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 38, & as there was nothing in Town Police Clauses Act, 1889 (c. 14), s. 3, which prevented the operation of Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 48, upon the tramcar as a hackney carriage, the penalty provided by Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 49), s. 45, for plying for hire without a licence was rightly inflicted upon applts. by the justices.—BLACKPOOL & FLEETWOOD TRAMROAD CO. v. BAILEY, [1920] 1 K. B. 380; 89 L. J. K. B. 784; 122 L. T. 275; 84 J. P. 1; 17 L. G. R. 749, D. C.

76. Omnibus—Plying for hire within prescribed distance.—An omnibus co. ran a motor omnibus service between Birmingham & Walsall without their vehicles being licensed by the borough of Walsall, the licensing authority under Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), & Town Police Clauses Act, 1889 (c. 14). On an information against the co. for unlawfully permitting an omnibus to be used as a hackney carriage standing & plying for hire within the borough, without having a licence, the justices found that the omnibus was not used in standing or plying for hire in any street within the prescribed distance in the borough of Walsall; but that it was used in standing or plying for hire within the prescribed distance, & they convicted deft. co.:—Held: the conviction was right, & the appeal should be dismissed.

Since the Town Police Clauses Act, 1889 (c. Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 45, is not to be read as limited to the case of a hackney carriage which, within sect. 38, is standing or plying for hire in a street. By the later Act an omnibus becomes a hackney carriage for any of the purposes of the earlier Act, & if it plies for hire within the prescribed distance without a licence, it is within sect. 45, although it does not stand or ply for hire in a street.—*BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND MOTOR OMNIBUS CO. v. Waiting to take up passengers—On railway company's premises.—A carriage while on the premises of a railway co., under a contract with them to await the arrival of their trains, for the conveyance of any passenger by railway who chooses to hire it, is "plying for hire" within Metropolitan Public Carriage Act, 1869 (c. 115), s. 4, & is therefore a hackney carriage & must be licensed.—*CLARKE v. He also paid 9s. a week for the exclusive use of a strip of ground inside the station, opposite another strip, also inside the station, where certain hackney & private carriages were allowed to wait for passengers arriving by rail. On the portion exclusively used by him, C. kept landaus & broughams ready horsed for the convenience of travellers who might wish for vehicles of a superior class. The driver, who was the other applt., had orders not to solicit custom, but to direct any person who wished to hire him to the office, where a ticket was obtained, filled up with the name of the hirer, the date, etc. No licence having been obtained by appls., a summons was taken out under Metropolitan Public Carriage Act, 1869 (c. 115), against C., as the owner of an unlicensed hackney carriage plying for hire, & against L., as the driver of the same:—Held: defts. were properly convicted.—*FOINETT v. 82. ———.]—Resp., who was the owner of a motor omnibus for which he had no licence to ply for hire within a certain area, permitted the omnibus to be used in conveying passengers for reward between a private yard within the area & places outside the area. The occupier of the yard was a jobmaster who gave resp. permission to use the yard in return for payment. By resp.'s instructions the driver of the omnibus did not invite or seek for passengers while it was passing along the streets of the area in question. Resp. was summoned under Town Police (Clauses Acts, 1847 (c. 89), s. 45, & 1889 (c. 14), s. 3, for permitting the omnibus to be used as an omnibus plying for hire within the prescribed distance without a licence.

The magistrate dismissed the summons on the ground that, as passengers were taken up only in the private yard & not in the streets, there had been no plying for hire within the prescribed distance:—Held: under the above provisions an omnibus was required to have a licence when plying for hire anywhere within the prescribed distance, whether in a public street or not, & the case must be remitted to the magistrate with a direction to convict.—CRACK v. HOLT (1927), 136 L. T. 511; 91 J. P. 36; 43 T. L. R. 231; 25 L. G. R. 114; 28 Cox, C. C. 319, D. C.

the highway near the E. Hotel at M. W. The omnibus sometimes stood & waited on the highway near the E. Hotel & sometimes commenced the return journey towards L. immediately, & where it so stood & waited passengers entered the carriage for the purpose of the journey towards L. Signs outside the omnibus indicated the destination thereof, & intending passengers, on inquiry, were informed of its destination. Threepence was charged from S. road or W. to M. W. & twopence from the boundary between the urban district of M. W. & L. to S. road or W. No charge was made from M. W. to the boundary or to any point within the urban district:—Held: there was evidence that the omnibus was standing & plying for hire within the urban district of M. W.—R. v. FLETCHER, Ex p. ANSONIA (1908), 98 L. T. 740; 72 J. P. 249; 6 L. G. R. 583; 21 Cox, C. C. 578, D. C.

85. ——— Passengers having return tickets.—Return journey by omnibus belonging to different proprietor.]—Applt. was the driver of an omnibus, which was not licensed to ply for hire within the borough of Gateshead. While the omnibus was standing within that borough three passengers entered it with return tickets issued to them at Chester-le-Street entitling them to travel from Chester-le-Street to Newcastle-upon-Tyne & back either on the day of issue or at any future time. The tickets entitled the holders to leave or to join the omnibus at any point on its journey. The owner of the omnibus was a member of an assocn. of omnibus proprietors whose vehicles ran regularly & frequently between Chester-le-Street & Newcastle-upon-Tyne. The return tickets were available for return by any omnibus belonging to a member of the assocn., & not merely by one belonging to that member by whom the ticket was originally issued. Separate fares were charged for each passenger, & the assocn. made their own arrangements & adjustments to ensure that each member received the earnings of his own vehicles:—Held: inasmuch as the omnibus was being used in Gateshead for the collection & reception of passengers out of the large unknown & indeterminate class of persons who possessed return tickets it was plying for hire within the prescribed limits of the borough of Gateshead, & therefore applt. was properly convicted of an offence under Town Police (Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 45.—ARMSTRONG v. OGLE, [1926] 2 K. B. 438; 95 L. J. K. B. 908; 135 L. T. 118; 90 J. P. 146; 42 T. L. R. 553; 21 L. G. R. 398; 28 Cox, C. C. 253, D. C.

Applt. entered one of the omnibuses in a terminal district & took a return ticket for a place within the district for licensing of owners of livery stables & of horses, etc., for hire. A bye-law passed thereunder required every person owning or keeping a livery stable or letting out horses, etc., for hire to pay a licence fee. Deft. was convicted under this bye-law, for that he did keep horses, etc., for hire "without having paid the licence fee:—Held: the conviction was in conformity with both statute & bye-law.—R. v. SWALWELL (1886), 12 O. R. 391.—CAN. p. Restrictions as to soliciting passengers]—A person licensed to keep a livery stable at a particular locality under a bye-law made by the board of police comrs. for a city, pursuant to Municipal Act, s. 436, but not having a cab license, for which under a separate bye-law other & larger fees were payable, is not at liberty to stand with his cabs & solicit passengers at places, though owned by him, other than at the place mentioned in his licence.—R. v. GURR (1892), 21 O. R. 499.—CAN.

q. Vehicles waiting for hire.—Standing in streets.—Engagement by hotel company for nominal consideration.]—An hotel co. engaged three vehicles from a liveryman to keep standing at which the omnibuses were not licenced, the ticket being available for return by any of the omnibuses. On arrival within the latter district applt. left that omnibus, & shortly afterwards she was there received as a passenger in another of the omnibuses, by which she was conveyed back to the district from which she had come:—Held: the latter omnibus was not, by reason of applt. having been received therein as a passenger for the return journey, “plying for hire” within Town Police Clauses Acts 1847 (c. 89) & 1889 (c. 14).—LEONARD v. WESTERN SERVICES, LTD., [1927] 1 K. B. 702; 96 L. J. K. B. 213; 136 L. T. 308; 91 J. P. 18; 43 T. L. R. 131; 25 L. G. R. 55; 28 Cox, C. C. 294, D. C.

87. No fare charged—Voluntary contributions invited.—Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 45, incorporated in the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), provides that if the proprietor of any carriage permits the same to be used as a hackney carriage plying for hire within a prescribed distance without obtaining a licence he shall be liable to a penalty. By Town Police Clauses Act of 1889 (c. 14), s. 4 “hackney carriage” is to include an omnibus.

Two ordinary omnibuses were run in the following way: It was intimated by several notices upon the omnibuses that the omnibuses were placed at the disposal of the public free of charge, & also notices stating that voluntary contributions to support the omnibuses would be welcomed. There was a conductor on each of the omnibuses to supply change. Many persons using the omnibuses placed money in the boxes, but some did not.

The magistrates upon an information laid before them, held that this was not a “plying for hire” within the meaning of the statute under which the proceedings were taken:—Held: this was an attempt to evade the statute, there was a “plying for hire” within the meaning of the statute, & the case must be remitted to the magistrates to rehear & convict.—COCKS v. MAYNER (1893), 70 L. T. 403; 58 J. P. 101; 10 T. L. R. 138; 38 Sol. Jo. 100; 17 Cox, C. C. 745; 10 R. 467, D. C.

On June 17, 1899, he drove a landau, licenced as a hackney carriage, to a cabstand opposite the pier at Harwich. A party of nine people wished to drive together, but there was no hackney carriage standing there licenced to carry more than five. Applt. informed them he had a waggonette at his stables which would hold them all. The party went to his stables & there got into an unlicenced waggonette & were driven out by applt.:—Held: there was no plying for hire with the waggonette by applt. within the Act.—*CAVILL v. their doors constantly ready for immediate use by guests of the hotel, the hotel co. paying one cent per hour from time of attendance until dismissed or engaged for use by a guest; the hotel becoming responsible for the payment by the guests of the fees charged for such service.—Held: the liveryman did not commit a breach of a municipal bye-law which provided that no cab should stand upon any street while waiting for hire or engagement, by keeping these vehicles waiting on the street for the use of the guests

Resps. advertised charabanc excursions to Brighton. Passengers purchased tickets before the time of departure at the offices of resps.’ agents, & arranged at the same time where they were to be picked up. After the number of passengers was ascertained resps. hired a charabanc, the driver of which proceeded to pick up the passengers holding tickets at the places, being public streets, previously arranged as above. He was not authorised to & did not pick up any other persons en route:—Held: the charabanc was not plying for hire within para. 17 (2) of the Order (Statutory Rules & Orders (1917—No. 426)), dated May 1, applying the provisions of s. 7 of Metropolitan Public Carriage Act, 1869 (c. 115), which enacts that if an unlicenced stage carriage “plies for hire” there shall be a penalty.—*SALES v. 91. — Tickets not necessarily issued before commencement of journey.—A motor coach which belonged to applts. & carried passengers between London & Bristol, but was not licenced to ply for hire in the Metropolitan Police District, picked up, at certain points within the Metropolitan Police District, passengers who, before the arrival of the coach at those points, but after its departure from the place where it began its journey, had obtained tickets entitling them to travel to destinations outside the Metropolitan Police District. Applts. had exhibited posters in which it was stated that passengers entering a coach in London must obtain tickets at least ten minutes before the arrival of the coach at the booking office:—Held: as applts. clearly had contemplated that the coach might start on its journey with vacant seats all or some of which might be filled within the Metropolitan Police District by persons who had not taken tickets before its departure on its journey, it was plying for hire within the Metropolitan Police District within Metropolitan Public Carriage Act, 1869 (c. 115), s. 7, which imposed a penalty on the owner of an unlicenced stage carriage which plies for hire.

Applts. solicited passengers partly by the posters, which contained time-tables & fares, as well as the notice referred to, & partly by the fact that their coaches were seen to pass along the route every day at fixed times.—*GREYHOUND MOTORS, LTD. v. within the prescribed distance, advertising the times of departure of the charabancs. Tickets could be purchased at the office up to ten minutes before the advertised time, but not afterwards. At 8.45 a.m. on Apr. 10, 1928, there being then no charabanc of resp. co. in the garage adjoining the office two police-sergeants purchased return tickets to London. At 9.10 a.m. a charabanc was driven by resp. A. into the yard of the garage & was entered by the police officers & nineteen other passengers, all of whom had previously taken tickets at the office. No tickets were issued on the charabanc, which proceeded to London:—Held: the co. had permitted the charabanc to be used for "plying for hire" & the driver had "plied for hire" with the charabanc.—*GRIFFIN v. Private carriages were allowed to stand there, but no hackney or public carriages, except those of applt.; applt., by agreement with the co., having the sole right of standing carriages there for the purpose of plying for hire. Applt. having been convicted in a penalty for allowing his carriage to ply there for hire without a licence:—Held: the place was not a "street" within Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 3, for the places included by that sect. in the word "street" were places over which the public had a right of passage; & the conviction was therefore wrong.—*CURTIS v. The watch committee of the council recommended that of eight charabanc licences, which they thought desirable, four should be granted to applts. The council, however, refused the application for the charabanc licences, & granted the eight licences to the existing co. A rule having been obtained for a mandamus, directed to the council, requiring them to hear & determine the application according to law upon the ground that the council had not properly exercised its discretion under Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89):—Held: as to the omnibus licences that there being nothing in the evidence to show that the council had not exercised a judicial discretion, the rule must be discharged; but as to the charabanc licences, the evidence showed that the council had been influenced by extra judicial & extraneous considerations which had no bearing upon the application, or by reasons not appearing at all, & the rule must be made absolute.—*R. v. An order made by the Minister under this sub-sect. shall be final & not subject to appeal to any ct., & shall, on the application of the Minister, be enforceable by writ of mandamus. . . ."

An omnibus co., desiring to extend to the centre of a city a service which they were running from another town to the tramway terminus in the city, applied to the city licencing authority, which was itself the owner of the tramways, for licences for 100 omnibuses. The licencing authority refused the licences on the ground of the congestion of traffic in the centre of the city & the fact that over part of the proposed route there was no space for an omnibus to pass between the outside tramway rail & the kerb, but did not suggest that competition with their tramways was a ground for refusing the licences. The co. appealed to the Minister of Transport, & he made an order that the licencing authority should issue eighteen licences on an undertaking by the co. to carry only through traffic & not to interfere with the tramways. The licencing authority refused to comply with the order, & the Minister obtained a rule nisi for a mandamus:—Held: though the sub-sect. meant, not that a mandamus should issue as of course, but only that in a proper case it might be granted, yet, as it would be open to the licencing authority & to the Minister to refuse the renewal of the licence, if there should be a breach of the undertaking, the rule must be made absolute.—*R. v. By Town Police Clauses Act, 1889 (c. 14), s. 4, various sects. of Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), with regard to the licencing of hackney carriages are made to apply to the licencing of omnibuses; Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 68, giving power to fix rates or fares is, however, not incorporated. Under Town Police Clauses Act, 1889 (c. 14), s. 6, the local authority has power to make a bye-law to provide for the exhibition on some conspicuous part of every omnibus of a statement in legible letters & figures of the fares to be demanded & received from the persons using or carried for hire in such omnibus:—Held: a local authority in considering an application for licences for omnibuses to ply for hire in its district is not entitled to take into consideration the fares charged by the proprietors of the omnibuses, & therefore is not entitled to refuse to grant the licences on the ground that the fares charged are excessive.—*R. v. 101. — — — — ——A co. ran omnibuses along a route from the centre of a city to a place outside of it. The corpn. of the city ran tramways along a portion of the route within the city. The corpn. refused to licence the omnibuses unless the co. would give an undertaking to charge upon the common portion of the routes a fare higher than the tramway fare. The co. appealed under the Roads Act, 1920 (c. 72), s. 14 (3), to the Minister of Transport, who made an order in effect affirming the decision of the corpn. on the same grounds—namely, that it was in the public interest that the undertaking should be given, inasmuch as it would prevent the long distance passengers by the omnibuses from being excluded therefrom by the short distance passengers who were sufficiently provided for by the corpn. tramway, & would also prevent the revenue of that tramway from being unnecessarily diminished. 111. Whether entry in register conclusive as to ownership.]—A licence for a taxicab was applied for & issued to deft. as the managing director of a limited co., & his name & address were entered in the register of licences of hackney carriages, kept at Scotland Yard, under the headings "Name of Proprietor" & "Address" with the addition of the words "Managing Director" & the name & address of the co. Pltf., a member of the public, was injured by, as he alleged, the negligent driving of the cab, & he brought an action against deft. to recover damages. At the trial pltf. put in a certified copy of the entry in the register for the purpose of proving that deft. being registered as the proprietor of the cab, was liable for the acts of the driver. Deft. tendered evidence to show that he was not the owner or part owner of the cab, & was therefore not liable. The judge rejected the evidence upon the ground that the entry in the register was conclusive as to the liability of deft. as proprietor for the acts of the driver:—Held: the register was not conclusive & the evidence was wrongly rejected.—*KEMP v. 112. Number of passengers—Meaning of stage carriage—Tramcar.]—A tramway car, as used under the Metropolitan Street Tramways Acts, 1869 (c. xciv.) & 1870 (c. clxxiii.), is a stage carriage within the meaning of Hackney & Stage Carriage Acts, & a penalty is incurred by the conductor for allowing a greater number of passengers to be carried than are allowed by the regulations within Railway Passenger Duty Act, 1842 (c. 79), s. 15. The conductor of a tramway car who allows persons beside himself to ride in the end of the car, between the covered compartment & the extreme end, is liable to a penalty under London Hackney Carriages Act (c. 86), s. 33, such being "the place provided for the conductor" within the meaning of that enactment.—ODELL v. MEE (1872), 36 J. P. 102.

113. ———.]—By Stage Carriages Act, 1832 (c. 120), s. 5, the term "stage carriage" shall not be deemed to extend to or include any carriage used or employed wholly upon any railway:—Held: this means a railway in the ordinary sense of the term, & a tramcar is not excluded from the definition of stage carriage.—BRIAN v. AYLWARD (1902), 18 T. L. R. 371, D. C.

114. ———.]—Resp. was summoned under Railway Passenger Duty Act, 1842 (c. 79), s. 15, for unlawfully conveying in, upon, or about a tramcar, of which he was conductor, a number of passengers in excess of the number which the car was licenced to carry. The car was licenced to carry thirty passengers in the lower compartment & forty-four in the upper compartment. On the occasion complained of the number of passengers in the upper compartment was forty-eight. Both the upper & the lower compartments were covered in. It was admitted that the day in respect of which resp. was summoned was a special occasion within London County Council (Tramways & Improvements) Act, 1913 (c. cii), s. 27. The magistrate held that the word "inside" in that sect. referred both to the lower & upper compartments of a tramcar & accordingly dismissed the summons:—Held: the magistrate was wrong & the case must be remitted to him with directions to convict. The upper compartment was no doubt part of the inside of the tramcar so far as related to protection from the weather, but reading the Acts of 1842 & 1913 together it was necessary to treat the inside of a tramcar as correlative with the lower compartment & the outside as correlative with the upper portion. The fact that s. 27 of the Act of 1913 referred to the inside showed that the legislature still contemplated the existence of an outside.—PIRESSE v. FISHER, [1915] 1 K. B. 572; 84 L. J. K. B. 277; 112 L. T. 462; 79 J. P. 174; 31 T. L. R. 65; 13 L. G. R. 269, D. C.

115. ——— Motor omnibus below prescribed weight.]—Stage Carriages Act, 1832 (c. 120), s. 5, contained a definition of "stage carriage" which did not extend to any carriage impelled otherwise than by animal power. Railway Passenger Duty Act, 1842 (c. 79), s. 13, provides that no stage carriage shall carry at one time more than a limited number of passengers. In 1869, sect. 5 of the Act of 1832 was repealed.

The Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (c. 36), s. 1 (1), provides that certain vehicles propelled by mechanical power & under a certain weight (subsequently increased by statutory Orders) are to be light locomotives; & by clause (b) of that sub-sect. a light locomotive is to be deemed to be a carriage within the meaning of any Act, & if used as a carriage of any particular class it is to be deemed to be a carriage of that class, & the law relating to carriages of that class is to apply accordingly:—Held: under these provisions of the Act of 1896, a motor omnibus below the prescribed limit of weight plying by a fixed route between fixed points was a light locomotive, it was to be deemed to be a carriage within any other Act, & inasmuch as it was used as a carriage of the particular class known as a stage carriage, the law relating to carriages of that class applied to it; & consequently, it should not carry a greater number of passengers than was allowed by sect. 13 of the Act of 1842.—DENNIS v. MILES, [1924] 2 K. B. 399; 93 L. J. K. B. 1115; 131 L. T. 146; 88 J. P. 105; 40 T. L. R. 613; 68 Sol. Jo. 755; 22 L. G. R. 489; 27 Cox, C. C. 649, D. C.

Meaning of omnibus.]—The bye-laws of an urban district council with respect to omnibuses were made in 1877, before motor vehicles had come into use. The earlier part of bye-law 14 contained a provision that no greater number of persons should be conveyed in "any omnibus" than was there indicated; while the subsequent part of that bye-law & certain other of the bye-laws contained references to horse omnibuses. On a day in 1927 resp., who was the driver of a motor omnibus plying within the district, carried in his omnibus a greater number of passengers than was authorised by the provision in the earlier part of bye-law 14:—Held: that provision applied to motor omnibuses as well as to horse omnibuses, & resp. was liable for a contravention of the bye-law.—NEAL v. GUY, [1928] 2 K. B. 451; 97 L. J. K. B. 644; 139 L. T. 237; 92 J. P. 119; 44 T. L. R. 578; 72 Sol. Jo. 368; 26 L. G. R. 452, D. C.

117. — Validity of bye-law — Confirmation of quarter sessions.—Appls. were summoned for having suffered a greater number of passengers to be conveyed than would allow sitting accommodation to each passenger of eighteen inches. The Local Government Board had approved the bye-laws made by the local board to that effect, but they had not been approved by the quarter sessions. The justices convicted, & held the regulations had been properly made in accordance with the general Tramway Act, but the co. contended they were invalid without approval by the quarter sessions or a judge:—Held: the justices were wrong, & the confirmation of quarter sessions was necessary.—WALLASEY TRAMWAY CO. v. KIPPINS, [1897] 1 Q. B. 1; 66 L. J. Q. B. 95; 75 L. T. 421; 60 J. P. 791; 45 W. R. 188; 13 T. L. R. 34; 18 Cox, C. C. 459, D. C.

122. Who is a "person wishing to hire."—Applt. who was the driver of a hackney carriage standing on a stand for hackney carriages, was asked by one B., a driver in the employment of a firm of livery stable proprietors who had received an order which they could not execute, to drive his hackney carriage to a certain place within the prescribed distance in the borough of Bournemouth in order to take a fare to the railway station. The driver of the hackney carriage, however, refused to go, & the justices found that he had no reasonable excuse for refusing to drive to the place to which he was directed to drive:—Held: there was evidence upon which the justices could come to the conclusion that B. was the person hiring, or wishing to hire, applt.'s hackney carriage, & as applt. had refused without reasonable excuse to drive to the place to which he was directed by B. to drive, he had committed an offence under Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 53.—*SHEPHERD v. Where justices, on an information in writing, made an order that debt. should pay a fare & costs, & that in case of non-payment he should be imprisoned in default of a sufficient distress:—Held: the order was bad, because the fare was "a sum of money claimed to be due & recoverable on complaint to a ct. of summary jurisdiction" within Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 6, & was therefore recoverable only in the manner in which "civil debts" are recoverable in a ct. of summary jurisdiction under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 35.—*R. v. Applt. was convicted by the Salford stipendiary of taking as a fare a sum greater than that authorised by the bye laws:—Held: the conviction must be quashed, on the grounds that if there was any offence, it was committed at the arrival point, which was outside the stipendiary's jurisdiction, & the Act conferred no power to make bye-laws covering a distance of more than three miles beyond the borough boundary.—*ELY v. 131. ——— Powers of Home Secretary—Validity of order authorising indefinite number of scales of charge.]—Metropolitan Public Carriage Act, 1869 (c. 115), impowers the Home Secretary to licence hackney carriages in such manner & in such form & subject to such conditions as he may by order prescribe; & also to make regulations for, amongst other things, fixing the rates of fares & for securing the due publication thereof. In pursuance of the power thus conferred upon him, the Home Secretary made an order prescribing a form of licence, which was to contain the rate to be charged for the hire of each carriage per mile & per hour. The order further required that the application for a licence should specify the sums which appct. desired to have inserted in the licence as the rates at which the carriage should ply for hire; that the carriage should be inspected prior to the licence being issued; & that, before plying for hire, the proprietor should affix to the top of the carriage a metal flag with the rates to be charged in accordance with the licence. Penalties were imposed by the Act for breach of the order. Upon a summons against the proprietor of a hackney carriage for non-compliance with the order in respect of the affixing a flag with the fares, the magistrate refused to convict deft., on the ground that the order was not a sufficient compliance with the Act; inasmuch as the Secretary of State had no power to authorise an indefinite number of scales of charge for hackney carriages, but only one scale binding upon all hirers & all proprietors. The ct. reversed his decision.—BOCKING v. JONES (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 29; 40 L. J. M. C. 19; 23 L. T. 739; 35 J. P. 56; 19 W. R. 227, D. C.

135. ————.]—A power given by a local Act to the vestrymen of a parish, to "direct & regulate such stands for hackney coaches & chairs as they, in their discretion, shall think fit" within its limits, is not superseded by London Hackney Carriage Act, 1831 (c. 22), although such stands be within the distance of 5 miles from the General Post Office.

The local Act empowers the vestrymen of the parish of St. Marylebone to direct & regulate stands for hackney coaches within that parish. Metropolitan Paving Act, 1817 (c. xxix), s. 65, enacts, that "if any person shall set out, lay or place any coach, cart, wain, wagon, dray, wheelbarrow, handbarrow, sledge, truck, or other carriage, upon any carriage way, except such coaches & chairs as shall be hereafter licenced by the comrs. for regulating & licencing hackney coaches, chariots & chairs, & which stood for hire according to the statutes & bye-laws made for those purposes, it shall be lawful for persons appointed by the comrs., or trustees or other persons having the control of the pavements in any parochial or other districts, without any warrant or other authority than this Act, to seize such coach, etc." By sect. 137 it is declared that the powers conferred by this Act on comrs. & trustees extend to vestrymen and others having the control of the pavements. Pltf. was the licenced proprietor of a cabriolet & horse, which were standing for hire at a stand prohibited by the rules & regulations for the standing of hackney coaches in Oxford Street, set forth & ordered by the vestrymen of St. Marylebone, who have the control of the pavements in that parish. Defts., acting under the employment of the vestrymen, seized the cabriolet & horse:—Held: by virtue of the provisions of these Acts they were justified in so doing.—*FROST v. 136. ———— Fixing position of stands—Indication from time to time by notice—Validity of bye-law.—By an Order in Council, the entire area, places, & parts of places comprised within the boundaries of the township of L. were constituted a "district," for the purposes of "Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63)." Blackpool Improvement Act, 1853, s. 48, empowered the Local Board from time to time to make bye-laws for, amongst other purposes, regulating the conduct of the drivers of hackney carriages, animals, etc., plying within the district, & for fixing the stands of such hackney carriages & animals. The local board made the following bye-laws:—"That the several places in the district where painted boards shall from time to time be placed by the said local board to distinguish them as stands, shall be the stands for such number of carriages, horses, asses & mules, etc., as shall be mentioned on such boards; & no driver of any such carriage, etc., shall place the same on any other than some one of such stands, or shall ply for hire in any of the streets or places within the said district, except on one of such stands, under a penalty not exceeding 40s." A licenced driver was convicted of "plying for hire" off a stand. On appeal the justices stated that it was proved to their satisfaction that applt. was driving a licenced carriage on the beach within the district; that he got off & spoke to some people & took them up, having then passed a stand:—Held: (1) the bye-law was valid, although it did not on the face of it specify the exact localities where the stands were to be; (2) applt. was properly convicted of "plying for hire" off a stand.—*BLACKPOOL LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH v. 143. Concealment of number plate.]—A bye-law made under the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), provided that “every proprietor of a hackney carriage” should cause the number of the licence granted to him in respect of that carriage to be marked on a plate fixed on the outside of the carriage, & should not cause or suffer the plate to be concealed from public view “while such carriage may stand, ply, or be driven for hire.” By sect. 38 of the Act every wheeled carriage “used in standing or plying for hire in any street” shall be deemed to be a hackney carriage within the meaning of the Act.

The proprietor of a hackney carriage licenced under the Act, having received an order for a carriage to take a person from his house to a railway station, sent the licenced carriage direct from the yard with the number plate concealed from view by a board placed over it, & in that condition the carriage was driven from the house of the person who had given the order to the railway station along a street within the district to which the bye-law applied. The proprietor having been convicted by justices of an offence against the bye-law:—Held: the carriage, whilst it was so being driven along the street, was a “hackney carriage.”—*HAWKINS v. 144. Touting in public thoroughfare—While standing on private land.]—By a bye-law it was provided: “A person shall not in any public thoroughfare in the district tout for a hackney carriage.”

Resp. stood on a triangular piece of land at a street corner touting for hackney carriages, having received permission from the owners of the piece of land to stand on it for the purpose of his business. The land where resp. stood was always open for the public to pass over, & the street, including the triangular piece of land, was made by the Corp'n. of B. & had been declared a public highway:—Held: the fact that the title to the piece of land on which he stood belonged to private persons did not prevent resp. from infringing the bye-law.—DERHAM v. STRICKLAND (1911), 104 L. T. 820; 9 L. G. R. 528; sub nom. DERHAM v. STRICKLAND, 75 J. P. 300, D. C.

146. Omnibuses run by corporation—Without requisite consent of Minister of Transport—Injunction.]—The Stockton-on-Tees corp'n. in their Act of 1919 were authorised to run omnibuses both within & without the borough. In the latter case, however, under s. 36 of the Act the consent of the Board of Trade, now the Minister of Transport & the local road authority, was necessary. One of such outside routes was between Port Clarence & West Hartlepool, & for this the necessary consents were obtained, which expired on Feb. 14, 1927. Prior to this, application was made to the Minister for a renewal of his consent, & a local inquiry was ordered, as a result of which such consent was refused.

The corp'n., however, believing that such consent being once given could not be withheld, continued to run their omnibuses on this route. This action was then commenced by the railway whose line ran near to this route, & pltf. now moved for an interlocutory injunction to restrain the corp'n. from continuing to run omnibuses thereon or on

*o. Right to arrest for breach of bye-law.]—*A breach of a city bye-law for driving an omnibus without the licence required thereby, does not justify the summary arrest of the offender, even though the officer arresting may have believed that he was acting legally & in the discharge any other route in respect of which the consent of the Minister had not been obtained:—Held: inasmuch as under s. 36 of the Act of 1919 the consent of the Minister of Transport was necessary to enable the corpⁿ. to run their omnibuses, the running of buses upon the route in question after the expiration of such consent, was an infringement of the sect.

In these circumstances it was the duty of the ct. to give effect to the sect. & to say that an injunction must be granted.—A.-G. v. STOCKTON-ON-TEES CORPN. (1927), 91 J. P. 172; 25 L. G. R. 489, C. A.

There was no smoke, nor escape of steam into the air, nor anything to indicate that it was being worked by steam, nor anything which could frighten horses, or cause danger to the public using the highway beyond any ordinary tricycle. The weight was about two hundredweight, & the tires of the wheels about one & a half inches in width. The tires being of indianrubber, no injury would be done to the surface of the road by working the machine on it:—Held: the tricycle was a "locomotive" within the definition in Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 38, & was therefore subject to the rules & regulations for the use of locomotives on highways prescribed by sects. 28 & 29 of that Act, by Locomotives Act, 1861 (c. 70), s. 12, & Locomotives Act, 1865 (c. 83), ss. 3, 4, 7.—*PARKYNS v. wagon to such locomotive, & a person in the rear of such wagons to signal to the driver to stop, etc., involving the employment of three men in the case of one, & six men in the case of two locomotives so travelling is applicable to locomotive plough engines when two of them & their gear are closely following one another on a highway, in which case the proviso to sect. 5 (1) of the Act allows the employment of five men altogether, two in driving each engine & one to accompany them & give assistance. Seemle, the set of scuffles which travel on three wheels & the set of harrows which travel on four wheels, & are drawn by a plough engine along a highway are, when on wheels, severally vehicles, & fall within the definition "wagon" in sect. 17 of the Act.—*WILLIAMS v. The night soil was given by the Nottingham corpn. to applts. who sold it to the farmers at prices varying according to the distance it had to be taken. The traction engine was not licenced by the county council & the prescribed fee had not been paid by applts.:—Held: although applts. were acting as sellers of the night soil & as haulage contractors, the traction engine was nevertheless being used by them for an “agricultural purpose,” & was therefore exempt from being licenced under Locomotives Act 1898 (c. 29), s. 9 (1).

It is the use to which the locomotive is put that is the real test as to whether it should be exempt from licence.—COLE BROTHERS v. HARROP (1915), 85 L. J. K. B. 494; 113 L. T. 1013; 79 J. P. 519; 31 T. L. R. 599; 13 L. G. R. 1223, D. C.

156. — Steam tramway engines.]—The steam engines authorised by statute to be used on tramways are not locomotives within Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 32, & therefore, do not require to be licenced by the county authority.—BELL v. STOCKTON, ETC. TRAMWAY CO. (1887), 51 J. P. 801; 3 T. L. R. 511, D. C.

157. — Locomotive used for agricultural purposes—Locomotive let out for hire.]—A locomotive which is sometimes let out by its owner to farmers for the purpose of carrying straw & manure for use in farming operations, & which is sometimes used by the owner himself for the purpose of carrying for hire straw & manure to be used exclusively on farms, & is not used for any other purpose, is within the exemption in Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 32, as being “a locomotive used solely for agricultural purposes,” & may be so used without a licence from the county authority.—ELLIS & CO. v. HULSE (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 24; 58 L. J. M. C. 91; 60 L. T. 836; 53 J. P. 598, D. C.

158. — Traction engine drawing threshing machine.]—M. was the owner of a locomotive traction engine, which was drawing a threshing machine used on one farm along the highway to another farm, where it was also to be used, & he claimed exemption from licence duty on the ground that the traction engine was used “solely for agricultural purposes”:—Held: the justices were wrong in convicting, & M. was within the exemption, & was not using the locomotive as a common carrier.—MURCH v. BAKER (1891), 55 J. P. 583, D. C.

159. — Threshing engine hauling wheat to mill.]—A threshing engine was let out on hire by applts. to a farmer to thresh wheat & to haul the wheat, when threshed, in trucks to a mill to be ground. There was no evidence as to whether the farmer had sold the wheat or whether it was to be returned to the farm when ground. The trucks were the property of applts.:—Held: the engine, when being used for hauling the wheat to the mill, was not being used for an agricultural purpose, & was therefore at the time not an agricultural locomotive within the exemption in Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 9 (1).—HODDELL v. PARKER, [1910] 2 K. B. 323; 79 L. J. K. B. 759; 103 L. T. 42; 74 J. P. 315; 8 L. G. R. 690, D. C.

160. — Locomotive drawing produce to market.]—By Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 9 (1), every locomotive shall be licenced by a county council, provided that this enactment is not to apply to, among other things, any agricultural locomotive. By sect. 17 the expression “agricultural locomotive” includes any locomotive the property of one or more owners or occupiers of agricultural land employed solely “for the purposes of their farms,” & not let out on hire:—Held: a locomotive drawing to market trollies laden with farm produce intended for sale was employed for the purpose of a farm within the meaning of sect. 17.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. LEE, [1914] 3 K. B. 255; 83 L. J. K. B. 1373; 111 L. T. 569; 78 J. P. 396; 30 T. L. R. 525; 12 L. G. R. 733; 24 Cox, C. C. 388, D. C.

161. — Traction engine hauling manure for sale to farmers.]—COLE BROTHERS v. HARROP, No. 155, ante.

162. — Locomotive intended for agricultural use.]—A locomotive, which had previously been used for haulage purposes, was purchased by a person who intended to use it solely for agricultural purposes. It could not however be used therefore without alteration. The locomotive was driven by applt. along a highway from the place where it was purchased to the purchaser's premises without being licenced. It was not on that occasion being used for haulage purposes. Applt. was convicted of using on a highway a locomotive without being licenced:—Held: any locomotive which was actually being used or which was intended by the owner to be used for any of the excepted purposes set out in Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 9 (1), did not require to be licenced under that sect., & that therefore applt. had been wrongly convicted.—DOBSON v. JENNINGS, [1920] 1 K. B. 242; 89 L. J. K. B. 281; 122 L. T. 62; 83 J. P. 259; 17 L. G. R. 769, D. C.

r. Validity of bye-law—Authorising alteration by agreement of rates fixed by statute.]—A bye-law passed of a heavy locomotive under steam, drawing behind it another heavy locomotive along a highway. No licence or permit under Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 9 had been taken out in the county. The locomotive under steam was one that belonged to resp.'s father, who had used it for twenty years solely for agricultural purposes. The locomotive that was being hauled had been used on a farm for agricultural purposes & had been purchased by resp., & he intended to use it solely for agricultural purposes, but it was out of repair, & when the alleged offence took place, was being hauled to a place where it could be repaired. On a summons against resp. under Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 9, for using the locomotive under steam on a highway without a licence, the justices, without finding whether resp. was or was not a farmer, found that resp.'s locomotive was an agricultural locomotive, & that the locomotive under steam was being used solely for an agricultural purpose when it was hauling resp.'s agricultural locomotive to be repaired, & they dismissed the summons. Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 9 (1), exempts agricultural locomotives from requiring to have a licence, & by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 17 (1), "The expression 'agricultural locomotive' includes (a) any locomotive used solely for threshing, ploughing, or any other agricultural purpose, (b) any locomotive, the property of one or more owners or occupiers of agricultural land, employed solely for the purposes of their farms, & not let out on hire":—Held: even if resp. was not a farmer, the locomotive under steam was being used for an agricultural purpose as it was being used to take an agricultural locomotive to be repaired, & the justices' decision must be affirmed.—WILLIAMS v. MORGAN (1921), 125 L. T. 543; 85 J. P. 191; 19 L. G. R. 409; 27 Cox, C. C. 37, D. C.

164. Construction of bye-law — User within county — Steam roller passing through.—Highways & Locomotives Act, 1878 (c. 29), s. 32, provides that "A county authority may . . . make . . . bye-laws for granting annual licences to locomotives used within their county." By a bye-law made by the London County Council under that section it was provided that "No locomotive shall be used on any highway within the county of London until an annual licence for the use of the same shall have been obtained from the council by the owner thereof":—Held: a steam roller which was not at the time being employed in road making, but was merely passing through the county to a destination outside, was being "used within the county" within the meaning of the sect. & the bye-law.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. WOOD, [1897] 2 Q. B. 482; 66 L. J. Q. B. 712; 77 L. T. 312; 61 J. P. 567; 46 W. R. 143; 13 T. L. R. 559; 41 Sol. Jo. 739; 18 Cox, C. C. 639, D. C.

165. Construction of wheels—Shoes—Whether bearing surface must be continuous.—By Locomotive Act, 1861 (c. 70), s. 3, every locomotive used on a highway & drawing any wagon, shall have the wheels cylindrical & smooth soled, or used with shoes or other bearing surface of a width not less than 9 inches. An engine was so used, which had its wheels fitted with shoes 4½ inches broad, placed parallel to one another, & 3 inches apart, & bolted obliquely across the whole breadth of the wheel; so that when a length of less than 9 inches of one shoe was in contact with the ground the deficiency was made up by the length of contact of the next shoe with the ground:—Held: the bearing surface not being continuous, the engine was not in conformity with the Act.—STRINGER v. SYKES (1877), 2 Ex. D. 240; 46 L. J. M. C. 139; 36 L. T. 152; 41 J. P. 296; 25 W. R. 273.

166. —————A locomotive was used on a highway, having the tires of the two driving wheels 18 inches wide. Upon the tires were strips or shoes 9½ inches in width, measured across the tire parallel to the axis of the wheel, & 3 inches broad & 1 inch thick. The shoes were placed alternately on each edge of the tire, and in the centre they touched & overlapped one another by about 1½ inch. There was thus always a bearing surface of at least 9 inches in width on the road:—Held: no shoes or bearing surface would comply with the statute unless they were similar to the tires of the wheels prescribed, viz., uniform smooth-surface bands of the width of 9 inches at least round the whole circumference of the wheels; these bands must be continuous & unbroken, save in so far as the joints of the material used might render perfect continuity impossible, & the engine in question did not comply with Locomotive Act, 1861 (c. 70), s. 3.—*BODY v. —Applts. were charged by resp. with using motor engines on a highway which did not consume so far as practicable their own smoke, contrary to Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 30. The motor engines had emitted an excessive quantity of smoke & steam while in charge of applts. on a highway. Evidence was given that the motor engines were so constructed that no smoke or visible vapour was emitted therefrom except from some temporary or accidental cause, & this evidence was not contradicted on the part of resp. The justices were of opinion that the excessive emission of smoke & steam from the motor engines was due not only to the carelessness of applts., but also to the fact that the motor engines did not consume so far as practicable their own smoke; & further, they were not satisfied that such emission was due to any temporary or accidental cause within Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (c. 36), s. 1:—Held: as the justices had not found as a fact that the motor engines were so constructed that no smoke or visible vapour was emitted therefrom except from any temporary or accidental cause, Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (c. 36), s. 1, did not apply, & applts. were properly convicted under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 30.—*HINDLE & PALMER v. By Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 5 (1), two men had to be employed in attending to such a locomotive, & a third man had to accompany it in order to assist persons with horses. By a local bye-law made in 1913 under Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 6 (1), "A person in charge of a locomotive drawing two or more unloaded wagons shall not cause or suffer the locomotive to travel on any highway without having (a) a cord or other efficient means of communication extending from the rearmost wagon to such locomotive, & (b) a person who shall . . . travel in the rear of such wagons. Such last-mentioned person shall signal to the driver of such locomotive to stop or drive to the side of the highway when it shall be necessary. . . ." Local Government (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1916 (c. 12), s. 11 (1), substituted for Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 5 (1), sect. 25 (1) of Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1908 (c. 62). Applt. was convicted of infringing the bye-law by having no cord or other efficient means of communication from the rearmost wagon to the locomotive:—Held: although by the Act of 1908, as the locomotive was not drawing more than three wagons, applt. was not bound to have a third man at the rear, yet, as the duties of a third man could now be performed by the second man & as the first part of the bye-law was severable from the second part & was not repugnant to the Act of 1908 & was not unreasonable, that part of the bye-law was valid, & applt. was rightly convicted, whether the second part of the bye-law was or was not ultra vires.—*MORGAN v. A petrol motor omnibus belonging to applts., while being driven along the highway by applt.'s driver, was emitting considerable quantities of smoke smelling of burnt oil. The omnibus exceeded 2 tons in weight, but was under 5 tons in weight unladen; its engine was a smokeless engine, & the smoke so emitted was not made by the locomotive engine, but was caused through the negligence of the driver in supplying an excessive quantity of lubricating oil to the working parts of the machinery, & no smoke or visible vapour could be emitted from the engine except by reason of the driver's negligence. Upon a summons against applts. under Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 30, for using on the highway a locomotive which did not consume, so far as practicable, its own smoke:—Held: as the motor omnibus was under 5 tons in weight, & the engine was a smokeless engine & was so constructed that no smoke or visible vapour could be emitted therefrom except by reason of the driver's negligence, the omnibus was a light

184. — Weight under seven tons—"Heavy motor car."] —By Article 4, clause 5, of the Heavy Motor Car Order, 1904, which came into operation on Mar. 1, 1905, a heavy motor car, the weight of which unladen exceeds 5 tons but does not exceed 7 tons, which has been registered before Sept. 1, 1904, & which was in use at the commencement of the regulations, may on complying with the procedure prescribed in the Article be registered anew.

A vehicle which was propelled by other than animal power, & which in fact weighed 6 tons 18 cwts., was in Dec. 1903 improperly registered as a motor car under the Motor Car (Registration & Licensing) Order, 1903; it was in use at the commencement of the regulations in the Heavy Motor Car Order, 1904, & it was registered anew under that order, but more than six months after the commencement of the same. It was being used on a highway, drawing a trailer, the combined unladen weight of both being 9 tons. Upon an information charging that the vehicle was a "locomotive" & was not licenced as such under Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 39), s. 9:—Held: clause 5 of Article 4 deals with the car only & not with the trailer, & the effect of the clause was that a heavy motor car up to 7 tons in weight unladen may be re-registered under the Article if it fulfils the conditions that it was registered before Sept. 1, 1904, it was in use at the commencement of the regulations, & it has been re-registered either within or after the expiration of six months from the commencement of the regulations, & consequently the vehicle in question was properly re-registered as a heavy motor-car & was not a "locomotive."—*PILGRIM v. Consequently the vehicle must be registered under the Act & the driver of the vehicle must be licenced.—ELIENSON v. PARKER (1917), 117 L. T. 276; 81 J. P. 265; 33 T. L. R. 380; 61 Sol. The only efficient brake other than the reversible engine was applied by means of a band which was brought to bear upon the periphery of the fly wheel of the engine, the braking power being transmitted from the fly wheel through the piston crank shaft & driving chain of the car to the back axle, & when the engine was out of gear, or if there happened to be a breakage of any of the machinery common to the fly-wheel brake & the engine, the fly-wheel brake could not operate as a brake nor could the engine be reversed so as to operate as a brake. Appl. having been convicted of causing the motor car to be used on the highway without having a brake independent of the engine:—Held: the conviction was right inasmuch as the motor car did not have two independent brakes within the meaning of Motor Cars (Use & Construction) Orders, 1904, 1911, 1913, for if anything went wrong with one brake the other would be put out of action. The Orders required that there should be two independent brakes in the sense that one should work notwithstanding that the other could not, & that each should be able to work regardless of the other.—*CANNON v. a trailer along the highway, had two brakes, a hand brake & a foot brake, which could be operated by the driver simultaneously without losing control of the steering wheel. The trailer was fitted with a brake which was not in any way connected with the brakes of the tractor, but which could be operated by a person occupying the driving seat of the tractor, independently of the brakes of the latter, by a special handle, but no person other than the driver of the tractor was employed anywhere upon either vehicle to operate the brake of the trailer. The driver of the tractor could, without leaving hold of the steering wheel, apply simultaneously the hand brake of the trailer & the foot brake of the tractor, but he could not apply simultaneously the hand brake of the tractor & the hand brake of the trailer without losing control of the steering wheel:—Held: applts. had contravened the provisions of Motor Cars (Use & Construction) Order, 1904, Article III (3), because no person competent to apply the trailer brake efficiently was carried upon either the tractor or the trailer. — *ROBINSONS, LTD. v. Speed exceeded outside speed limit laws.

Evidence of one

s. 9, for driving a motor car on a public highway at a speed exceeding twenty miles an hour, a police sergeant proved that he placed a police constable at a certain point on the road & stationed himself on the same road at a distance of a quarter of a mile from the constable; that, when the motor car passed the constable, the constable signalled to him & he immediately started the second hand of his stop watch & stopped the same when the car passed him; & that the time taken by the car between the two points as shown by his stop watch was $31\frac{1}{2}$ seconds, or at the rate of twenty-eight miles an hour.

The stop watch was produced in ct. & not objected to. The only evidence as to the rate of speed was that of the police sergeant, who gave evidence of the time as shown by his stop watch. Deft. having been convicted:—Held: the evidence of the police sergeant was not evidence of his "opinion" merely, but was evidence of the fact recorded by his stop watch as to the time taken in travelling over the distance, & therefore deft. was not convicted "merely on the opinion of one witness as to the rate of speed" within Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 9 (1).—PLANCQ v. MARKS (1906), 94 L. T. 577; 70 J. P. 216; 22 T. L. R. 432; 50 Sol. Jo. 377; 4 L. G. R. 503; 21 Cox, C. C. 157, D. C.

200. Evidence of identity of driver—Person driving at end of "trap."—(1) Deft. was convicted under Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 9 (1), of having driven a motor car at a speed exceeding the legal limit of twenty miles an hour. The evidence was to the effect that two constables were stationed at the seventh milestone & two other constables at the third milestone from St. Albans, at which latter milestone the car was stopped, which deft. was then driving, the chauffeur sitting beside him. Deft. held a licence for driving. The car traversed the distance between the two milestones at the rate of twenty-eight miles an hour. Deft. did not give evidence:—Held: there was evidence that deft. had driven the car over the whole distance as alleged, upon which the justices could convict him.

(2) The notice under s. 9 (2) of the Act, of the intended prosecution alleged the offence to have been committed between Markyate & St. Albans, two places which were between ten & twenty miles apart:—Held: as deft. was not misled by it, the notice was valid.—BERESFORD v. ST. ALBANS J.J. (1905), 22 T. L. R. 1; sub nom. Ex p. BERESFORD, 69 J. P. Jo. 520, D. C.

201. Notice of intended prosecution—Necessity for—Offence by heavy motor car.—Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 9 (2), only requires warning or notice of an intended prosecution to be given in the case of an offence against that sect. itself. To drive a heavy motor car at a speed exceeding twelve miles an hour is an offence, not against Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 9 (2), but against the regulations contained in the Heavy Motor Car Order, 1904, as subsequently amended; which regulations were made under Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (c. 36), s. 6, as extended by Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 12 (2). It follows that no warning of an intended prosecution for such an offence is required.—STAUNTON v. COATES (1924), 94 L. J. K. B. 95; 132 L. T. 199; 88 J. P. 193; 41 T. L. R. 33; 69 Sol. CLARKE* (1908), 99 L. T. 28; 72 J. P. 358; 24 T. L. R. 672; 6 L. G. R. 686, D. C.

204. — — — Notice of intention to report for driving dangerously.—Applt., when he was driving a motor cycle along a public highway at twenty-eight miles an hour, was stopped & was informed by a police officer that he was driving too fast & would be reported for driving to the danger of the public. This is an offence under Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 1. No further warning was given to applt. either orally or in writing. On an information against applt. under sect. 9 (1) of the Act for driving at a speed exceeding twenty miles an hour, he contended that he had received no warning or notice as required by sect. 9 (2). The justices held that the warning given to applt. at the time when he was stopped was sufficient, & they convicted him:—Held: there was no warning of an intended prosecution as required by sect. 9 (2), & the conviction must be quashed.—PARKES v. COLE (1922), 127 L. T. 152; 86 J. P. 122; 20 L. G. R. 463; 27 Cox, C. C. 218, D. C.

The officer told the porter the purpose of the notice:—Held: there was some evidence upon which the justices could find that notice of intended prosecution had been sent to the driver within s. 9 (2) of the Act.—MARTIN v. BROOMAN (1909), 73 J. P. 484; 25 T. L. R. 783, D. C.

l. When non-observance of speed limit justified.—In the case of a motor car, it may sometimes be not only desirable, but essential for the purposes of avoiding civil liability temporarily to exceed a speed of 20 miles an hour to go upon what is, prima facie, the wrong side of the road. To do so may sometimes afford the only

m. Whether powers of council restricted by statute.—The general powers of a borough council to regulate the speed of motor cars while travelling on the streets of the borough were not restricted by the provisions regarding the speed limit contained in Motor Regulation Act, 1906, s. 9 (re-enacted in 1908 Act, s. 91).—*WESTON v. Resp. gave a warning of this fact to approaching cars, which then slackened speed. There was no evidence that resp. was acting in concert with any of the drivers of the cars, or that any car when the warning was given was going at an illegal pace:—Held: resp. was not guilty of the offence of obstructing the constables when in the execution of their duty within Prevention of Crimes Amendment Act, 1885 (c. 75), s. 2.—*BASTABLE v. For that purpose they had measured a certain distance along the road. The deft. warned the drivers of cars which were approaching the measured distance of the presence of the constables & the purpose for which they were there. There was evidence that at the time the warning was given the cars were being driven at an illegal speed, & the drivers upon receipt of the warning slackened their speed & proceeded over the measured distance at a lawful speed, whereby the constables, as deft. intended, were prevented from obtaining such evidence as would be accepted as sufficient in a police ct. that the drivers of the cars were committing an offence:—Held: deft. had wilfully obstructed the constables in the execution of their duty within the meaning of Prevention of Crimes (Amendment) Act, 1885 (c. 75).

In my opinion a man who, finding that a car is breaking the law, warns the driver, so that the speed of the car is slackened, & the police are thereby prevented from ascertaining the speed & so are prevented from obtaining the only evidence upon which, according to our experience, cts. will act with confidence, is obstructing the police in the execution of their duty. . . . However, nothing that I now say must be construed to mean that the mere giving of a warning to a passing car that the driver must look out as there is a police trap ahead will amount to an obstruction of the police in the execution of their duty in the absence of evidence that the car was going at an illegal speed at the time of the warning given (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).—*BETTS v. 208. What may be taken into consideration—Traffic on highway.]—By Light Locomotives on Highways Order, 1896, Article 4 (1), no person shall drive a light locomotive at any speed that is greater than is reasonable & proper, having regard to the traffic on the highway. Applt. drove his motor tricycle at a speed from 18 to 20 miles an hour along a highway, but there was no direct evidence that any traffic was interrupted, interfered with, incommoded, or affected. The justices found that the speed was excessive, having regard to the traffic on the highway:—Held: the justices were right in convicting, as the words “Having regard to the traffic on the highway” meant having regard to the traffic on the road, & not to the traffic in the immediate vicinity of the motor.—SMITH v. BOON (1901), 84 L. T. 593; 65 J. P. 486; 49 W. R. 480; 17 T. L. R. 472; 45 Sol. Jo. 485; 19 Cox, C. C. 698, D. C.

Applts. were charged under Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 1 (1), with having driven in a manner dangerous to the public having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the nature, condition & use of the highway, & to the amount of traffic which actually was at the time, or which might reasonably be expected to be, on the highway. Applts. were convicted:—Held: there was evidence to support the conviction, notwithstanding that the evidence showed that applts. might also have committed the offence of driving at a speed which was dangerous to the public.—*BERESFORD v. He was then charged on a second information with driving his car at a speed exceeding 20 miles an hour, contrary to Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 9:—Held: as the question of speed had been taken into consideration on the conviction under sect. 1, the conviction was a bar to a conviction under sect. 9 for driving at a speed exceeding 20 miles an hour.—*WELTON v. 222. Aiding & abetting commission of offence—Person in control of car.]—A person who has aided & abetted the commission of an offence punishable on summary conviction may, under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 5, be convicted upon an information which charges him with having committed the offence as principal offender.

Applt. appealed to quarter sessions against a conviction for unlawfully driving his motor car at a speed dangerous to the public. At the hearing of the appeal there was a conflict of evidence as to whether the car was being driven by applt. or by a lady seated by his side in the car. The quarter sessions, without deciding whether applt. was himself driving the car, dismissed the appeal, finding as facts that if the lady was driving she was doing so with the consent & approval of applt., who must have known that the speed was dangerous, & who, being in control of the car, could, & ought to, have prevented it:—Held: there was evidence on which applt. could be convicted of aiding & abetting the commission of the offence.—*DU CROS v. 223. Criminal intent unnecessary—Liability of owner for act of servant.]—Appls., a limited co., who were motor cab proprietors, were convicted before a magistrate of aiding & abetting a driver in their service in using a motor cab in contravention of Art. 11 of the Motor Car (Registration & Licencing) Order, 1903 on the following facts: The driver was using a motor cab more than one hour after sunset having a lamp, which was lighted, hanging too low to illuminate the identification plate. The motor cab was fitted with a proper & permanent bracket on which to hang the lamp. Appls. had in their service a foreman, who was charged by them with the duty of seeing that the cabs left their premises in such a condition as to comply in all respects with the Motor Car Acts, 1896 (c. 36) & 1903 (c. 36) & the regulations of the Board of Trade made thereunder. The magistrate found that appls. were careless in not seeing to it that a proper lamp was fixed on the cab.—Held: there was evidence on which appls. might be convicted of aiding & abetting their driver in committing a breach of the above regulation.—*PROVINCIAL MOTOR CAB CO., LTD. v. The justices dismissed the charge:—Held: (1) resp. should have been convicted, as the offence of which he had been convicted was an offence under Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36); (2) it was also “an offence in connection with the driving of a motor car.”—*BROWN v. 232. Failure to keep record of use of general identification mark—Use by employee without authority.—Article XII. of the Motor Car Registration & Licensing Order 1903, provides that on every occasion on which the general identification mark (which by Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 2 (4) (b), may be assigned to a manufacturer of motor cars) is used, the manufacturer shall keep a record of the distinguishing number on the identification plate & of the name & address of the person driving the car.

Appls. were manufacturers of motor cycles to whom a general identification mark had been assigned. Their stock of motor cycles was placed by them under the charge of a man in their employment. This man took out one of their motor cycles without their knowledge or authority & used it for his own private purposes. No record as required by Article XII. was kept on the occasion of this user of the motor cycle, & applts. were in consequence charged with the offence of a breach of Article XII. :—Held : as the user of the motor cycle was unauthorised by & unknown to applts. the failure to keep a record did not render them guilty of the offence charged.—*PIELON & MOORE, LTD. v. Summons—Time for service—What is reasonable time.]—On Apr. 30 a constable told C., who was a chauffeur, that he would be summoned for driving a motor car contrary to Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 1, on that date. On May 2 C. left his lodgings at Newtown, taking his motor car to Coventry on his master's business. Before leaving he told his landlady to take in the summons if it came for him. On May 4 the summons, returnable on May 7, was left with his landlady, & on May 7 he was convicted in his absence & without his knowledge of an offence under Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 1. On May 9 C. returned to Newtown. It appeared that the justices were under the impression that the summons had actually reached C.

The ct. made absolute a rule for certiorari to bring up & quash the conviction on the ground that if the justices had known that the summons did not reach C. they might well have formed a different conclusion as to whether there had been a reasonable time between the service & the hearing of the summons.—*R. v. Annotation—Consd. Martin v. White, [1910] 1 K. B. 665.

250. ———.]—Appl. Lionel Walker Birch Martin, of Ryder Street Chambers, St. James's Street, London, who held a licence to drive a motor car issued by the London County Council & numbered 5080, was in 1909 convicted by a ct. of summary jurisdiction of driving a motor car on a public highway at a speed exceeding 20 miles an hour contrary to Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 9. It was then proved that the driver of a motor car of the name of Lionel Martin & of the same address as applt. had been convicted of a similar offence in 1907; & that a person having the same four names & of the same address as applt. had held a licence from the London County Council from a date before 1907 continuously down to the present time, that the licence was numbered 5080, & that no one having a London address could have that number except the person having those four names & that address.

or damage is sustained by any person by reason of a motor vehicle on the highway, does not relieve the judge or the jury from the task of weighing the evidence & coming to a conclusion upon it; it means that the burden of disproving his negligence now falls as heavily upon deft. as that of proving negligence would fall upon pltf. but for the sect. The effect of the sect. is not merely to alter the procedure at the trial; but, so soon as it is proved that the damage was sustained by reason of the motor vehicle on the highway, the owner is rendered liable unless he can prove that he was not negligent. In doing so, every defence which he might otherwise raise is still open to him; but he is, nevertheless, at that stage, prima facie liable.—WHITTEN v. BURTWELL (1920), 47 O. L. R. 210; 18 O. W. N.

A police constable gave evidence that he stopped the motor car upon the occasion in 1907, & the driver upon demand produced to him a licence which was issued by the London County Council & numbered 5080. No notice to produce the licence was given. It was next proved by the production of a certified copy of the conviction that a person with the same four names & of the same address as applt. was convicted of a similar offence in 1908. Appl., who was represented by counsel at the hearing, absented himself from the ct. & was not called as a witness. The justices found upon the above evidence that applt. was the person who had been convicted on both the former occasions, & they imposed a fine of £20, & ordered his licence to be indorsed:—Held: with regard to the conviction in 1907, the evidence of the police constable as to the contents of the licence produced to him on the occasion when the offence was committed was admissible as evidence of the identity of applt. with the person who was then convicted, & no notice to produce the licence was necessary; with regard to the conviction in 1908, the identity of the names & of the address was some evidence of the identity of applt. with the person who was then convicted; & the justices were entitled to have regard to applt.'s wilful absence & conclude that he was the person who was convicted on both those occasions & to order his licence to be indorsed.—MARTIN v. WHITE, [1910] 1 K. B. 665; 79 L. J. K. B. 553; 102 L. T. 23; 74 J. P. 106; 26 T. L. R. 218; 8 L. G. R. 218; 22 Cox, C. C. 236, D. C.

252. ——— By police officer—Whether ground for quashing conviction—Where offer of adjournment refused by defendant.]—An information was preferred by resp. against applt. under Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 1 (1), for driving a motor car at a speed which was dangerous to the public having regard to all the circumstances of the case. Appl. appeared before the justices with his solr. at the hearing of the information, but resp. was not present either personally or by counsel or solr.

A police officer, who was one of the witnesses for the prosecution, examined the other witnesses for the prosecution, & during the course of the case applt.'s solr. requested the justices' clerk to make a note of the police officer's name. The justices thereupon announced that the case was adjourned. Appl.'s solr., however, said that he preferred that the case should proceed. Accordingly the hearing proceeded & applt. was convicted:—Held: the offer to adjourn having been declined by applt.'s solr. neither the absence of resp. nor the fact that the police officer, although a witness, conducted the examination of the other witnesses for the prosecution invalidated the conviction.—*MAY v. 253. Ground of appeal—Misreception of evidence—Statements made but not taken into consideration.]—A summons set out that deft. was charged with driving a motor car on a public highway at a speed which was dangerous to the public having regard to all the circumstances of the case, "the same being his second offence," & deft. was so charged at petty sessions by the clerk of the ct. In the course of the hearing, whilst giving evidence, two constables mentioned that deft.'s licence was indorsed when they saw it, on the car being stopped. Objection to these statements was made, & the ct. took no written note of them, the chairman of the justices deleting a note he had made, & stating that the bench would take no notice of the statements. Deft. was convicted:—Held: there had been no misreception of evidence, & the conviction must be upheld.—CHOLERTON v. COPPING (1906), 70 J. P. 484, D. C.

255. Whether appeal lies to quarter sessions—Conviction under Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36)—Fine exceeding twenty shillings—Costs not included.]—By Motor Car Act, 1903 (c. 36), s. 11 (1), a person guilty of an offence under that Act for which no special penalty is provided is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £20; & by sub-sect. 2, an appeal to quarter sessions is given to any person adjudged to pay a fine exceeding 20s.

A person convicted under sect. 9 of the Act of driving a motor car at a speed exceeding twenty miles an hour was fined 20s. & the conviction adjudged him to pay to the clerk of the peace the sum of £1, & also pay to the informant the sum of 18s. for costs. An appeal to quarter sessions was dismissed on the ground that there was no right of appeal under the Act:—Held: a "fine" under sect. 11 (2) of the Act did not include the costs which deft. was ordered to pay, & therefore, no appeal lay to quarter sessions.—*Ex p. They accordingly made a bye-law forbidding, under a penalty, any person (inter alia) to ride a bicycle on a footpath. By Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), s. 85, the provisions of certain Acts, "& all other provisions of any public or private Acts, in so far as they give power to any local authority to make bye-laws for regulating the use of bicycles, tricycles, velocipedes, & other similar machines" were repealed, & bicycles, tricycles, velocipedes, & other similar machines were thereby declared to be carriages within the meaning of Highway Acts. Part I.—Definitions.

See Telegraph Acts, 1863 (c. 112), s. 3; 1869 (c. 73), s. 3; 1878 (c. 96), s. 2; 1892 (c. 59), s. 3; 1908 (c. 33), s. 9 (1).

1. Telegram — Telephone communication.] — Edison's telephone, for which patents were granted in 1877 & 1878, consists of a transmitter, a wire, & a receiver. When sounds are spoken into the transmitter, electric currents of varying intensity pass along the wire, so that corresponding or equivalent sounds are heard at the receiver, & two persons at a distance can thus converse with one another. A co. leased these telephones to subscribers at yearly rents which produced a profit to the co., & arranged the wires so that subscribers could converse with one another when put into communication by a servant of the co.:—Held: (1) Edison's telephone was a "telegraph" within Telegraph Act, 1863 (c. 112), & Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 73), although the telephone was not invented or contemplated in 1869; (2) a conversation through the telephone was a "message," or at all events a "communication transmitted by a telegraph," & therefore a "telegram" within the meaning of those Acts; & that since the co. made a profit out of the rents, conversations held by subscribers through their telephones were infringements of the exclusive privilege of transmitting telegrams granted to the Postmaster-

General by Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 73), & were not within the exceptions mentioned in Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 73), s. 5.

In simpler language, the Postmaster-General is to have the exclusive privilege of transmitting messages or other communications by any wire & apparatus connected therewith used for telegraphic communication, or by any other apparatus for transmitting messages or other communications by means of electric signals. The result of the definition seems to be that any apparatus for transmitting messages by electric signals is a telegraph, whether a wire is used or not, & that any apparatus, of which a wire used for telegraphic communication is an essential part, is a telegraph, whether the communication is made by electricity or not. It would include, on the one hand, electric signals made, if such a thing were possible, from place to place, through the earth or the air: & on the other, a set of common bells, worked by wires pulled by the hand, if they were so arranged as to constitute a code of signals (STEPHEN. J.).—A.-G. v. EDISON TELEPHONE CO. OF LONDON (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 244; 50 L. J. Q. B. 145; 43 L. T. 697; 29 W. R. 428.

(2) Unlicensed electric signals, where no telephone is used, of the kind described in the second schedule to the special case are not excepted from the Postmaster-General's monopoly.

(3) A point was made that the transmission of a signal, as described in the second schedule, does not amount to the transmission of a telegram within Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 73). I think the point is untenable in view of the definition clause

11. Whether licence confers monopoly.]—Defts. were a co. incorporated under Companies Act, 1862 (c. 89), & licenced by the Postmaster-General under Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 73), s. 5, to establish telegraphs within the limits of their districts, which included the London Stock Exchange, for the purpose of simultaneously transmitting news to their subscribers. This news consisted, amongst other things, of current fluctuations of prices on the Stock Exchange, & was by the permission of the Stock Exchange collected there by defts.' agents & distributed from defts.' offices to the offices of their subscribers by means of tape-recording instruments supplied by defts. Pltf. was not a member of the Stock Exchange, & was in the habit of advertising for business. Defts. had entered into three separate contracts with pltf. by which they undertook to supply him with three of their instruments. By the rules of the Stock Exchange its members were not allowed to advertise, & the Stock Exchange having required defts. to cease supplying outside brokers who advertised with the special information collected in the building, defts. disconnected the three instruments from the supply of that class of news :—Held : the licence of defts. was neither a monopoly at common law nor part of the monopoly conferred on the Postmaster-General by Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 73), & therefore there was no duty imposed by the licence for the non-performance of which pltf. could sue defts.—COCHRANE v. EXCHANGE TELEGRAPH CO., LTD. 14. Licence strictly construed—Full powers of Postmaster-General not inferred.]—By Telegraph Act, 1863 (c. 112), s. 6 (1), the Postmaster-General has power to place a telegraph under any public road, & by sub-sect. 4 he can place a telegraph over or across a railway. By sect. 32 of that Act he must not place any work over or across a railway without the consent of the directors thereof; but by the proviso to that sect. he is not restricted from placing any work in a public road because the road crosses a railway. But sect. 32 does not say that in such a case the work shall be deemed not to be carried across a railway. Therefore a licence by the Postmaster-General which empowers a telephone co. to exercise his powers of executing works other than works under, in, upon, over, along or across any railway does not authorise them to lay a cable in a public road on a bridge which crosses a railway without the consent of the railway co. who are owners of & liable to repair the bridge but do not repair the road.—SOUTH EASTERN RY. Part III.—Construction and Maintenance of Telegraphs.

See Telegraph Act, 1863 (c. 112).

15. Erection of telegraph in highway—Consent of body in control of highway—Whether necessary—Company not authorised by special Act.]—Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 96, does not confer upon a vestry or a board of works, constituted under that statute, such a property in the streets situate within their district, as to entitle them to maintain an action for an injunction against the erection of a telephone wire across a street, the telephone wire being erected at a great height & causing no appreciable danger to the public or to the traffic in the street. Notwithstanding Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 73), s. 3, a telephone co. registered under Companies Act, 1862 (c. 89), & not incorporated under any special Act, does not fall within the phrase "the co." used in the Telegraph Act, 1863 (c. 112), & therefore is not forbidden by Telegraph Act, 1863 (c. 112),

m. ——— ——— ———.]—A telephone co. having permission by its Act of incorporation to erect poles on the streets of towns & incorporated villages, so as not to interfere with the public right of travel, is not relieved from liability for damages when it plants the poles on the highway in

Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), s. 3, for their consent to the erection of certain telephone wires on poles in & along certain public roads within the borough refused their consent. The difference was referred under Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), s. 4, to the county ct. judge of the district who decided that such wires should be erected overhead as proposed by the Postmaster-General, the corpn. thereupon applied to the Railway Comrs. The substantial objections of the corpn. were (a) that overhead wires lowered the value of house property in the roads where they were erected; (b) that they disfigured such roads; (c) that they were dangerous in times of storm; (d) that their vibration was a nuisance; (e) that they obstructed traffic:—Held: the overhead wires as proposed by the Postmaster-General should be allowed, but if the corpn. should within one month give notice that they would bear the extra cost of laying any line underground in any street such line should be placed underground accordingly.—*CROYDON CORPN. v. 19. ———— Owners of soil—Highway not taken over by local authority.—By Telegraph Act, 1863 (c. 112), s. 12, "the co," now the Postmaster-General, "shall not place a telegraph over, along, or across a street or public road, or a post in or upon a street or public road, except with the consent of the body having the control of such street or public road."

The Postmaster-General, being desirous of placing telegraph posts & wires in, along, & across a street or public road in an urban district, being a public highway not repairable by the inhabitants at large, required the urban district council to give their consent thereto under Telegraph Act, 1863 (c. 112), s. 12. It was admitted that the highway was a "street" which the urban district council could require the frontagers to make good under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150:—Held: the urban district council, not being liable to repair the road, were not the body "having the control of" it within Telegraph Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 12, & that streets which have not been taken over by the local authority remain under the control of the owners of the soil over which they are made.—*POSTMASTER-GENERAL v. Defts. carried their wires & pipes across plffs.' railway, at a place where it crossed the public highway on a level, by carrying their wires, etc., under plffs.' rails, & through the ballast & soil of the line, & as plffs. alleged, "after & by reason of the wrongs complained of, the repair & renovation of part of the soil & ballast of plffs.' railway became in some measure less easy & convenient, by reason of the necessity of avoiding or interfering with the wires & pipes":—Held: in such case, defts. were not empowered, under the preceding sect. to carry their wires, etc., across the railway in the manner they had adopted, as they had thereby interfered with the railway.

Semble: the telegraph co. could not, in any case, carry their wires, etc., under a railway within the meaning of that term as used in sect. 37.

The question, turns upon the meaning of the word "across." Looking at the words in the same clause, which expressly give them the power to go under public roads, while the proviso confines them, in the case of railways & canals, to going directly across, it seems to me that the true construction of the proviso is, that in such cases they are excluded from going under (PARKE, J.).—SOUTH EASTERN RY. 25. Power to construct telegraph—Agreement for free transport of men & stores—Extent of agreement.—By an agreement the Postmaster-General acquired the right to construct & maintain a line of telegraph wires along the railway belonging to the A. & B. Railway Co. A clause in the agreement provided for the free carriage of stores & men employed by the Postmaster-General "in the construction maintenance or repair of the lines of telegraph of the Postmaster-General":—Held: the telegraph lines in question must be limited to those the subject-matter of the agreement.—METROPOLITAN RY. CO. v. POSTMASTER-GENERAL (1916), 85 L. J. K. B. 1541; 115 L. T. 842; 32 T. L. R. 682.

26. Acquisition of undertaking by Postmaster-General—Railway telegraph—Interest of railway company.—By Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), s. 7, any railway co. possessed of a telegraph open to the use of the public on Jan. 1, 1868, for transmitting messages for money, or possessing any beneficial interest in such telegraph, may require the Postmaster-General to purchase the right of such railway co. to transmit such messages or other beneficial interest. By Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 73), s. 10, any telegraph co. with which the Postmaster-General may not come to an agreement with respect to the amount of compensation to be paid to them for their undertaking, may have such amount settled by arbn. in manner provided by Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18). By an agreement with a telegraph co., under which the telegraph co. erected & placed their telegraphic apparatus on the Cowes & Newport Railway Cos.' line, the railway co. took the exclusive use of one wire during the continuance of the agreement, for messages of their own relating to the business of the co., but were prohibited from using the wire for public use or for profit, or for any other purpose than the transmission of the railway co.'s own messages, & at the end of the agreement which was to be in force for twenty-one years, the telegraph co. were to remove their telegraphic apparatus:—Held: the railway co. had no such interest in the telegraph as to entitle them to require the Postmaster-General to purchase it under Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), & Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 73).—COWES & NEWPORT RY. Pltfs. sent a message to defts.' office, to be transmitted by their telegraph to a vessel lying off Exmouth, requiring the master to proceed with her to Hull. The message was received by defts., subject, amongst others, to the following condition, "The co. will not be responsible for mistakes in the transmission of unrepeatd messages, from whatever cause they may arise." In the transmission of the message, which was an unrepeatd one, "Southampton" was by mistake substituted for "Hull," in consequence of which the vessel went to the former place, & pltfs. sustained loss in the sale of the cargo, oranges, at a bad market:—Held: the above condition was a reasonable one within sect. 66 of the Act, & afforded an answer to the action.—*MACANDREW v. 34. Lease of cable—Lessor covenanting to repair on notice—Failure to repair through unfavourable weather.]—Pltf. co. in 1912 leased certain cables to deft. co. for ninety nine years. The lease contained a covenant by pltf. co. to repair the cables & to effect such repairs with the greatest possible dispatch after receiving notice from deft. co. that the same were necessary & it was provided that in case of any breach of the covenant to effect repairs with the greatest possible dispatch or in the event of interruption in through communication continuing for more than eighteen months, deft. co. should have power to give notice determining the lease. In 1917 a break occurred & was not repaired within eighteen months, & deft. co. gave notice to determine the lease. A cable ship was employed jointly by pltf. & deft. co., as the latter co. desired to repair a cable owned by them. On the two cos. being unable to agree which cable should be first repaired the Admty. ordered the repair of deft. co.'s own cable to be made first on the ground that it was the cable of the greater capacity. The Admty. also gave orders that the cable ship should recoil at a certain station & twice ordered its return owing to submarine perils. During the latter part of the operations of the cable ship, there was an unexpected duration of unfavourable weather. Pltf. co., in these circumstances, claimed relief under the provisions of Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1917 (c. 25), s. 2, & Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1919 (c. 64), s. 1 (1) (a), & (b), against the exercise by deft. co. of their power to determine the lease:—Held: pltf. co. were not entitled to relief under Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1917 (c. 25), s. 2 as the repair was not restricted by virtue of an enactment relating to the Defence of the Realm or a regulation made thereunder, & the orders of the Admty. were not an interference with pltf. co.'s rights of property, but were given for the purpose of assisting & not restricting pltf. co.'s endeavours to repair their cable, neither could pltf. co. be said to have incurred a forfeiture in respect of the failure to repair; the immediate cause of the delay in repairing was the unfavourable weather experienced.—*DIRECT UNITED STATES CABLE CO. v. 35. Consent of road authority—Consent made subject to conditions—Conditions unreasonable.]—The Corpn. of London, as successors of the Comrs. of Sewers of the City of London, on being applied to by the Postmaster-General under Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), s. 3, for their consent to the placing & maintaining of a line of lines of underground telegraphs under certain streets in the City of London, refused their consent, except on condition that the said line or lines of telegraphs should not be "laid for the use of the National Telephone co., unless the telephone co. were prepared to provide an improved service at a reduced cost." This difference, after having been referred to the judge of the City of London Ct., was, in accordance with Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), s. 4, brought before the Railway Comrs.:—Held: the following words in Telegraph Act, 1863 (c. 112), s. 5, "any consent may be given on such pecuniary or other terms or conditions, being in themselves lawful, as the person or body giving consent thinks fit," only entitled street authorities in withholding such consent to raise objections of a kind which concerned them as a street authority; & the objection raised by the corpn. was an unreasonable one, inasmuch as it did not apply to the public at large & did not affect the corpn.'s interests as a street authority at all.

It was contrary to the general principles of common law & contrary, therefore, to the probable intention of this enactment that they, the mere street authority, should have the right to exclude any portion of the public whatever. Any objections which they may raise must be objections affecting, prima facie at any rate, the whole of the public, the whole of the persons who may be concerned in the matter. This objection does not apply to the whole of the public (WRIGHT, J.).—POSTMASTER-GENERAL v. LONDON CORPN. (1898), 78 L. T. 120; 62 J. P. 390; 14 T. L. R. 222; 10 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 231.

The Postmaster-General admitted that the wires when laid would be used by the National Telephone co. as junction lines with the Post Office trunk lines, & stated that this would be done in pursuance of a Treasury Minute which had been laid before Parliament:—Held: (1) the Postmaster-General was carrying out a definite policy sanctioned by the legislature, & must be assumed to be acting in the public interest in providing facilities for the telephone co.; & the corpn. were not entitled to make it a condition of their consent that the Postmaster-General should not permit his wires to be used in a particular manner authorised by the law; (2) the Comrs. under Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), s. 3, as "the authority by whom the difference is to be determined, may . . . give their consent either unconditionally or subject to such pecuniary or other terms, conditions & stipulations as they may think just," & therefore may fix pecuniary terms where such terms are no part of the original difference.—POSTMASTER-GENERAL v. GLASGOW CORPN. (1900), 10 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 238.

38. — — —.]—Where the Postmaster-General desires to carry telegraph wires along roads which have been dedicated to the public but have not been built on & have not been taken over by the local authority, but are public roads within Telegraph Acts, a condition should not be imposed that the Postmaster-General shall pay to the owner of the soil of the roads a rental which has no relation to the actual damage but is in the nature of a payment for use & occupation.

The owner of the soil of roads which had been dedicated to the public but had not been taken over by the local authorities attached to his consent to certain telegraphic lines being placed under & over the roads a condition that the Postmaster-General should make a payment of a rent of £10 a year so long as the telegraphic lines were maintained, & upon the Postmaster-General objecting to the condition a county ct. judge imposed a rent of £5 a year. The parties being dissatisfied with the decision of the county ct. judge:—Held: the condition, being inconsistent with the true character, & capacity of the person having the control of the public roads, ought not to have been imposed, & the Postmaster-General was entitled to be relieved from the obligation to pay the rent.—POSTMASTER-GENERAL v. HUTCHINGS, [1916] 1 K. B. 774; 85 L. J. K. B. 1008; 115 L. T. 78; 80 J. P. 246; 32 T. L. R. 296; 14 L. G. R. 554.

The difference was referred under Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), s. 4, to the county ct. judge of the district who decided that the telephone lines should be laid underground. The Postmaster-General then brought the difference before the Railway Comrs. The substantial objection of the District Council was that the 6 or 7 posts on which the wires would be carried overhead would be an obstruction to foot passengers using the pavement. 42. ————.]—The Postmaster-General under Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), s. 4, appealed to the Railway Comrs. from so much of a decision of the stipendiary magistrate for Borough of Woolwich as required the Postmaster-General to erect certain telegraphic lines on painted iron poles & to place certain other telegraph lines underground. The Postmaster-General asked for the Comrs.' consent to placing telegraphic lines overhead on painted wooden poles in certain streets which consisted mainly of artisans' dwellings.

The streets in which the magistrate ordered the wires to be placed underground consisted of artisans' dwellings of a superior character, all built upon the Corbett Estate. Most of the houses were purchased & owned by the best class of artisans. There were no overhead wires on the Corbett Estate, but underground wires on part of it, & the Postmaster-General wished to extend the telegraphic system overhead by bringing it up from the underground trench. The Comrs. after hearing evidence & viewing the streets allowed painted wooden poles to be erected instead of painted iron ones but as to the streets in the Corbett Estate, decided that it would be unreasonable under the circumstances to allow overhead wires.—Re POSTMASTER-GENERAL & WOOLWICH BOROUGH COUNCIL (1908), 72 J. 43. ————.]—Application by licencees.—Under the Telegraph Acts the Postmaster-General delegated certain powers to the N. T. co. The co. thereupon entered into an agreement with the mayor, etc., of T. W. for the exercise of certain powers within their district.

By that agreement, with the exception of certain work mentioned in the schedule, it was provided that the co. should not exercise any of the powers conferred on the Postmaster-General by the Telegraph Acts, 1863 (c. 112), & 1878 (c. 76), in respect of which the consent of the corpn. was required without obtaining a further consent in writing from the corpn. It was further provided that if any dispute or difference arose concerning the premises or the rights & liabilities of the parties, such dispute or difference should be referred to arbn.

Upon the corpn. refusing their consent to some further works beyond those mentioned in the schedule, the N. T. co. applied to the county ct. judge as arbitrator under Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), ss. 3, 4:—Held: the county ct. judge had no jurisdiction as the co., being only the delegates of powers from the Postmaster-General, could not proceed under Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 112), ss. 3, 4, but only under the arbn. clause in their agreement.—TUNBRIDGE WELLS CORPN. v. NATIONAL TELEPHONE CO. 45. ————.]—Objection to overhead wires.—Upon a reference to the Railway & Canal Comrs. of a difference between a local authority & the Postmaster-General arising from the refusal of consent by the local authority to the placing of telephone lines in certain streets:—Held: where it appears that the cost of laying the wires underground, as compared with that of carrying them overhead, would be excessive, the extra burden of the former method will not be imposed upon the taxpayers; but inasmuch as the circumstance that the locality in which the wires were to be placed was a residential district, & admirably kept by the local authority with a view to its being residential, & that overhead wires would be a disfigurement to the streets, the objection to such wires was considered to be a very real objection, & an opportunity was given to the objectors to find the necessary funds for defraying the extra cost of laying the wires underground in all or any of the streets in question.—CROYDON CORPN. v. POSTMASTER-GENERAL (1910), 74 J. 46. ————.]—An Urban District Council having refused their consent to the placing of an overhead telegraph wire on poles for a distance of a quarter of a mile along a road in their district & the county ct. judge for the district having found that their refusal was reasonable, the Postmaster-General applied to the Railway Comrs.

The District Council had expended £6,000 in altering their own overhead wires to underground wires & in laying new underground wires. In 1897 the Postmaster-General had applied for the consent of the district council to lay underground wires in the road in question which had been granted & the wires had been laid accordingly:—Held: under the circumstances of the case the wires should be laid underground on the district council undertaking to do the work of excavation, laying the pipes & filling the trenches for £50.—Re POSTMASTER-GENERAL & TOTTENHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1910), 74 J. 49. Consent of owner of private land—Refusal of consent—Difference referred to Commissioners.—(1) Where, under Telegraph (Construction) Act, 1916 (c. 40), s. 1, the owner, lessee, or occupier of private land refuses or fails to give his consent to the placing of a telegraphic line on or across his land within two months after being required to do so by notice from the Postmaster-General, the difference thereby arising between the Postmaster-General & the owner, lessee, or occupier, must be referred direct to the Railway & Canal Commission. A stipendiary magistrate or county ct. judge has no jurisdiction to entertain that question.

(2) If the convenient user or enjoyment of private land is interfered with by the placing thereon of a telegraphic line, or if the land has any special advantages which the placing of the line thereon will, or may reasonably be expected to injure, the Railway & Canal Commission may have regard to these circumstances in considering, under Telegraph (Construction) Act, 1916 (c. 40), s. 1, what terms to impose on the Postmaster-General. It is reasonable, when compensation is directed to be made by the Postmaster-General, to order the payment of an annual sum & not of a lump sum.—POSTMASTER-GENERAL v. BROOKS, [1922] 2 K. 51. Decision of Commissioners—Whether appeal lies.]—By an agreement under seal made in 1905 a telephone co. agreed to sell to the Postmaster-General all the plant in use by the co., on Dec. 31, 1911, & any dispute as to the value of the plant was to be referred to the Railway & Canal Commission, if they should be authorised to determine it. Telegraph (Arbitration) Act, 1909 (c. 20), s. 1, enacted that any difference between the Postmaster-General & any body or person under any agreement relating to telephones should, if the parties agreed, be referred to the Railway & Canal Commission, who were bound to determine it; & sect. 2, that all proceedings relating thereto should be conducted by the Commission in the same manner as any other proceeding was conducted by them under the Railway & Canal Traffic Acts, 1873 & 1888, & that any order of the Commission on any such difference should be enforceable as any other order of the Commission, provided (inter alia) that any such matter of difference might, in certain events, be heard & determined by the two appointed Comrs. A difference having arisen as to the value of the plant, the Commission, at the request of the parties, fixed & determined the value:—Held: the reference to the Commission under the Telegraph (Arbitration) Act, 1909 (c. 30), was a reference to them as a ct. of record & not as arbitrators, & an appeal lay from their decision on a point of law to the Ct. of Appeal.—*NATIONAL TELEPHONE CO., LTD. v. Part IX.—Compensation.

52. Acquisition of undertaking by Postmaster-General—Compensation for loss of office—Telegraph officers of railway company.]—(1) Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), s. 8 (7), applies only to the three telegraph cos. named at the beginning of sect. 8; & therefore, the telegraph superintendent of a railway co. is not entitled to compensation for the loss of his office, when the telegraphic business of the co. is acquired by the Postmaster-General.

(2) The superintendent of one of the three named telegraph cos. was held entitled to compensation in respect of profits on allowance for expenses while travelling on the co.'s service.—R. v. POSTMASTER-GENERAL (1875), 32 L. T. 559; subsequent proceedings (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 428, C. A.

53. ——— Assessment of compensation—Emoluments.]—The Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), enables the Postmaster-General to purchase the undertakings of telegraph cos. By s. 8 (7), every officer & clerk of any co., the undertakings of which may be so purchased, who has been not less than five years in the service of the telegraph cos. & in the receipt of a yearly salary, or who has been not less than seven years in the service of telegraph cos. & is in receipt of remuneration at a rate of not less than £50 a year, shall, if he receives no offer of an appointment by the Postmaster-General in the telegraphic department, etc., receive during his life from the Postmaster-General by way of compensation for the loss of his office from the time at which the govt. takes possession of the co.'s telegraph, an annuity payable half yearly, equal, if he shall have been in the service of telegraph cos. twenty years, to two-thirds of the annual emolument derived by him from his office on June 24, 1868.

Mandamus to the Postmaster-General to assess compensation to S., an officer of a telegraph co., in respect of the expenses allowed him as a part of the emolument of his office. Return that it was the duty of S. from time to time, when required, to travel upon the co.'s business, & that the co. had agreed with him upon rates of allowances, as an indemnity against the extra personal expenditure incurred, or assumed to be incurred, by him while travelling on the business of the co., beyond his ordinary expenditure, namely, 12s. 6d. for twenty-four hours' absence from headquarters, & 5s. for twelve hours' like absence, when such last-mentioned absence did not oblige him to stop away from home, & that the allowances so made did not form any part of his yearly salary or remuneration, but were made for the purpose of indemnifying him against extra personal expenditure, & that the refusal to assess compensation was only so far as regarded these allowances. Plea, that the allowances were not made as an indemnity, but were made to the co.'s officers when travelling, whether extra expense was incurred by them or not, & were fixed payments; that the co.'s officers when travelling received the allowances, & saved a large part of the money which they would otherwise have expended at home for board & lodging, & that the allowances were part of the annual emoluments of the officers:—Held: anything which S.'s allowance enabled him to save from his ordinary expenses was an "emolument," & therefore a subject for compensation.—R. v. POSTMASTER-GENERAL (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 428; 47 L. J. Q. B. 435; 38 L. T. 89; 26 W. R. 322, C. A.

54. ——— Right of owners to compensation—Where "beneficial interest" already disposed of.]—By Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), s. 7, a railway co. possessing a beneficial interest in a telegraph open to the use of the public on Jan. 1, 1868, may, under certain circumstances, require the Postmaster-General to purchase such interest upon terms to be settled, failing agreement by arbn. By Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), s. 9 (11), an umpire is, in default of appointment by the arbitrators, to be nominated by the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. The S. & D. Railway Co., which connected two portions of the London & South Western Railway, entered into an agreement in 1866, by which they undertook to complete all the works, including the telegraphs, & then to hand over, for the term of one thousand years, their line to the South Western, who undertook to pay them 45 per cent. of the "gross receipts from traffic conveyed by the railway." At the date of this agreement the S. & D. Railway had two telegraph wires along their line. In 1865 the South Western had made an agreement with the Electric Telegraph Co., by which the latter were to have the exclusive right of transmitting messages along the lines which the South Western then had or might afterwards acquire. After the passing of Telegraph Acts, the Postmaster-General acquired these telegraphs & paid compensation in respect thereof to the South Western. The S. & D. Railway Co. then applied for compensation in respect of their telegraph & afterwards requested the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas to appoint an umpire, which he declined to do, on the ground that the S. & D. Co. had no "beneficial interest" in a telegraph within Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), s. 7. On motion to make a rule absolute for a mandamus to compel such appointment to be made:—Held: the S. & D. Railway have under the agreement with the South Western parted with the "beneficial interest" in their telegraph, that messages sent by the telegraph formed no part of "traffic conveyed by the railway," & consequently they were not entitled to compensation under Telegraph Acts.—R. v. COLERIDGE (LORD) (1876), 45 L. J. Q. B. 649; 31 L. T. 752.

55. — Compensation in respect of future losses.—By Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), s. 9 (6), the Postmaster-General shall pay railway cos. by way of compensation, clause D., such sums as shall be settled by arbn. in respect of the loss by such railway co. of the privilege of granting other wayleaves & making future arrangements with telegraph or other cos., & in respect of granting a monopoly to the Postmaster-General for the conveyance of telegraphs over their railways. By clause II. of the same sub-sect., on acquisition of the telegraphs, the Postmaster-General shall have a perpetual right of way for his poles & wires over the whole of the railway co.'s system, & in consideration thereof he shall pay to the railway co. such sum per mile per wire over the whole of the said system by way of yearly rent as shall be fixed by arbn. The arbitrator, in determining the amounts to be paid to the railway co. under this Act, shall have regard to the agreements which subsist between the railway co. & any telegraph co., & also to a compulsory sale being required from the railway co.; & in estimating the amount to be paid under any one part of this sect. shall have regard to the advantages to be obtained & the disadvantages to be sustained by the railway co. under any other part of this sect. By sub-sect. 8 of the same sect., to the railway co. is reserved power to erect & work private telegraphs for annual rent or payment for wayleave from traders. An arbitrator had awarded a certain lump sum to defts. as & by way of compensation in pursuance of the provisions of Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), s. 9 (6), but had made no allusion in his award to any yearly rent under clause II. of that sect.:—Held: defts. were precluded from any further compensation for extra poles or wires which the Postmaster-General might in future require to be erected upon their railway system.—R. v. METROPOLITAN RY. CO. (1883), 50 L. T. 6, C. A.

By Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), s. 2, "The expression 'telegraphic line' means telegraphs, posts, . . . & also any . . . apparatus . . . used for the purpose of transmitting telegraphic messages."

Defts.' servant while driving their motor lorry along a public highway caused it, without any negligence on his part, to come into collision with a fire alarm post belonging to the Postmaster-General & thereby injured the post. In an action by the Postmaster-General under Telegraph Act, 1878 (c. 76), s. 8 to recover the expenses of making good the injury:—Held: the word "person" must be read, not as limited to persons who had special statutory rights in the highway which might come into conflict with the corresponding rights of the Postmaster-General, but in its natural & unrestricted sense as including all persons exercising their common law right of passage; & defts. were liable to make good the damage done. —*POSTMASTER-GENERAL v. Replication that defts. had the means of knowledge of the existence & locality of the cable & neglected to make use of such means of knowledge. There was also a new assignment, being an argumentive traverse of the plea:—Held: the declaration was good, although notice of the existence of the cable was not alleged; that the plea was good, as putting in issue the negligence charged & the replication was good.—*SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH CO. v. 74. Assessment.]—A vestry applied by mandamus to compel the Postmaster-General to pay poor rates upon the rateable value of telegraph posts & wires, as fixed by an assessment committee. The Postmaster-General had tendered a smaller amount, proportionate to an assessment fixed by the Comrs. of the Treasury, which the vestry had refused:—Held: by Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), & Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 73), no duty is cast upon the Postmaster-General to pay the rates imposed by those Acts; & there is no remedy by mandamus against him to enforce the payment of rates fixed by an assessment committee.—R. v. POSTMASTER-GENERAL (1873), 28 L. T. 337; sub nom. MARYLEBONE, VESTRY v. POSTMASTER-GENERAL, 37 J. P. 196; 21 W. R. 459.

75. —.]—Telegraph Act, 1868 (c. 110), empowers the Postmaster-General to purchase, for the purposes of the Act, the undertaking, including land & property, of any telegraph co., & sect. 22 provides that all land, property & undertakings so purchased shall be assessable & rateable to parochial rates at sums not exceeding the rateable value at which such land, property & undertakings were properly assessed at the time of such purchase. In 1870 the Postmaster-General purchased the undertaking of a telegraph co., including a house held by the co. under a lease for twenty-one years from Sept. 1867. At the time of the purchase a portion of the house was subject to an underlease granted by the co. to H. for the remainder of the term less one day, & containing a covenant by the co. to pay all parochial rates. The Postmaster-General occupied & used for telegraphic purposes only, the portion of the house not comprised in the underlease until the year 1878, when he demised that portion to others, & thenceforth no part of the house was occupied or used for telegraphic purposes. The rateable annual value at which the portion comprised in the underlease could properly have been assessed as a separate tenement at the time of the purchase was £108. In 1880 the assessment committee of the district separately assessed that portion in respect of parochial rates at the rateable annual value of £334:—Held: sect. 22 applied notwithstanding that all use of the house for telegraphic purposes had ceased, & therefore the occupier of the premises comprised in the underlease was not liable to be assessed in any sum exceeding the rateable value at which these premises could have been properly assessed at the time of the purchase.—*ST. 76. Foreign cable company—Exercising trade in United Kingdom.]—Appls., a foreign co. domiciled in Copenhagen, had three marine cables in connection with Aberdeen & Newcastle, communicating with the telegraph lines of the Post Office in the United Kingdom. They had also work rooms with clerks in London, Newcastle, & Aberdeen. Messages from this country were forwarded over the lines of the Post Office & the cables of applts. to Denmark, & thence by their wires & the wires of foreign govts. to Russia, China, Japan, & India. The total charges paid for transmitting such messages were collected by the Post Office, & after deducting their dues, handed to applts., who retained the amount due to them for the transmission of messages over their cables & lines, & paid the residue to the various govts. & cos. respectively entitled to it. No profits were made by applts. from the transmission of messages over the land lines in the United Kingdom:—Held: applts. must be taken to exercise a trade in the United Kingdom under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 31, s. 2, sched. D., & they were chargeable to income tax on the balance of profits or gains from their receipts in this country from the transmission of messages.—ERICHSEN v. LAST (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 414; 51 L. J. 74 i Assessment.]—In assessing for purposes of taxation the poles, wires, conduits, & cables of a telephone co., the cost of construction, or the value as part of a going concern, is not the test: they must be valued, in the assessment division in which they happen to be, just as materials which, if sold or taken in payment of a just debt from a solvent debtor, would have to be removed & taken away by the purchaser or creditor.—Re BELL TELEPHONE CO. & HAMILTON CORPN. (1898), 25 A. Part XVI.—Telegraphic Addresses and Codes.

77. Property in telegraphic address—Where in cypher.]—Pltfs., a telegram co. in London, made an arrangement with defts., being two individuals in Australia, for the transmission of messages, in which certain words were used as short expressions of the names & addresses of the principal customers; & defts. were described as pltfs.' agents. In a little time the parties quarrelled, & one of defts. came to England to carry on an independent telegram business with his partner in Australia, & sent circulars to pltfs.' customers, mentioning that he had their cyphers. On motion to restrain him from using the cyphers:—Held: there was nothing confidential in the cyphers, & he was entitled to use them.—REUTER'S TELEGRAM CO. v. BYRON (1874), 43 L. J. Ch. 661.

78. ———.]—The short address, "Street London" was used for many years in sending telegrams from abroad to Street & Co., of Cornhill. A bank adopted by arrangement with the Post Office the phrase "Street London," as a cypher address for telegrams from abroad to themselves:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction to restrain the bank from using such cypher address.—STREET v. UNION BANK OF SPAIN & ENGLAND (1885), 30 Ch. D. 156; 55 L. J. Ch. 31; 53 L. T. 262; 33 W. R. 901; 1 T. L. R. 554.

79. Property in code.]—Pltf. published "The Standard Telegram Code," a book of words selected from eight languages, for use in telegraphic transmissions of messages, & it was accompanied by figure cyphers for reference or private interpretation. The book was registered under Copyright Act, 1842 (c. 45). Defts. bought a copy of the book, & compiled for their own use with its aid a new & independent work, as alleged, which was their own private telegraph code, & they distributed copies of their book amongst their agents at home & abroad, but they had not printed their book for sale or exportation:—Held: defts. had infringed the copyright of pltf., & a perpetual injunction must be granted.—AGER v. PENINSULAR & ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION CO. (1884), 20 Ch. D. 637; 53 L. J. Ch. 589; 50 L. T. 477; 33 W. R. 116.

80. ———.]—Pltf. had published "The Standard Telegram Code," a book of words selected from eight languages, for use in telegraphic transmissions of messages, with the addition of figure cyphers for reference or private interpretation, which was registered under Copyright Act. Defts. had printed a book containing some 70,000 of the words comprised in pltf.'s book, with the addition of interpretations suited to the purposes of a certain trade, for the use of themselves & their correspondents:—Held: defts. had infringed pltf.'s copyright, & a perpetual injunction must be granted.—AGER v. COLLINGRIDGE (1886), 2 T. L. R. 291.

Annotation:—Apld. Anderson v. Lieber Code Co., [1917] 2 K. B. 469

81. ———.]—A person in the employment of pltfs. under a contract of service compiled in the course of his employment a telegraphic code consisting of words of five letters, each word differing from every other word in at least two letters, & being pronounceable but meaningless in itself. The code consisted of 100,000 words, which the compiler selected from an original list of 450,000 words on certain principles, which were based on the requirements of telegraphic & cable cos. Pltfs. went through the formalities necessary to copyright the work. Subsequently defts. published a code, in which was reproduced a substantial part of pltfs.' code:—Held: pltfs.' code was a proper subject of copyright, for the infringement of which by defts., pltfs. were entitled to recover.—ANDERSON & CO., LTD. v. LIEBER CODE CO., [1917] 2 K. B. 469; 86 L. J. K. B. 1220; 117 L. T. 361; 33 T. L. R. 420; 61 Sol. Jo. 515.

SECT. 1.—LICENCES OR LETTERS PATENT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—NECESSITY FOR.

See Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68), s. 2.

1. House or other place of public resort—Had or kept for public performance of stage plays—What amounts to house or other place—Booth-theatre.]—A booth-theatre, which is taken to pieces & carried from place to place for theatrical performances, is not a “house or other place of public resort for the public performance of stage plays” within Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68), s. 2.—DAVYS v. DOUGLAS (1859), 4 H. & N. 180; 28 L. J. M. C. 193; 32 L. T. O. S. 283; 23 J. P. 135; 157 E. R. 806; sub nom. DAVIS v. DOUGLAS, 7 W. R. 327.

*Annotations:—Consd. Fredericks v. Payne (1862), 32 L. J. M. C. 11. Distd. Tarling v. Fredericks (1873), 28 L. T. 814. Refd. Sewell v. Taylor (1859), 23 J. P. 792; Fredericks v. Howle (1862), 6 L. T. 544.

2. ————.]—A booth, consisting of two caravans or wagons, having painted on it “Olympic Theatre,” drawn from place to place by horses & when supported by poles resting on the ground formed a temporary booth with a stage thereon, in which certain stage plays were acted, & which booth was moved from place to place for theatrical performances:—Held: the acting stage plays for hire in such booth, not being a patent theatre or duly licenced as a theatre, is acting in a “place” within Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68), s. 11, & for which the manager is liable to the penalty thereby imposed.

Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68), s. 11, certainly includes the case of this applt. The “acting was for hire,” whether payment was made at the door or any other place (BRAMWELL, B.).—FREDERICKS v. PAYNE (1862), 1 H. & C. 584; 32 L. J. M. C. 14; 7 L. T. 329; 27 J. P. 104; 8 Jur. N. S. 1109; 11 W. R. 36; 158 E. R. 1016; sub nom. PAYNE v. FREDERICKS, 1 New Rep. 32.

3. ————.]—TARLING v. FREDERICKS, No. 14, post.

4. ———— What amounts to having or keeping—Hiring public room for short period.]—A person who hires an unlicenced public room for six nights, & publicly performs stage plays in it, is not liable to be convicted under Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68), s. 2, for “having & keeping” a place of public resort for the public performance of stage plays without a licence.—R. v. STRUGNELL (1865), 1 L. R. 1 Q. B. 93; 7 B. & S. 124; 35 L. J. M. C. 78; 13 L. T. 433; 14 W. R. 193; sub nom. R. v. ROSENTHAL, R. v. STRUGNELL, 30 J. P. 101; 12 Jur. N. S. 269.

5. ———— Permitting use on few occasions for benefit of charity.]—Applt. was the owner & occupier of a building which he gratuitously allowed to be used on a few occasions for the performance of stage plays, to which the public were admitted on payment, for the benefit of a charity. Applt. had no licence for the performance of stage plays in such building:—Held: he was rightly convicted of having or keeping a house for the public performance of stage plays without a licence, under Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68), s. 2.—SHELLEY v. BETHELL (1883), 12 Q. B. D. 11; 53 L. J. M. C. 16; 49 L. T. 779; 48 J. P. 244; 32 W. R. 276, D. C.

6. ———— What amounts to “letters patent”—Albert Hall charters.]—The charters of 1867 & 1888 under which the Royal Albert Hall was incorporated, which give power to hold theatrical entertainments in the small hall, are not “letters patent” within Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68); &, therefore a licence under sect. 2 of that Act is necessary for the performance of stage plays therein.—ROYAL ALBERT HALL v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL (1911), 104 L. T. 894; 75 J. P. 337; 27 T. L. R. 362; 9 L. G. R. 626, D. C.

7. Music & dancing licence insufficient.]—Neither Letters Patent from the Crown, nor a licence from the Lord Chamberlain, can be granted for any dramatic performances, within 10 Geo. 2, c. 28, except in Westminster, or some place where Her Majesty may be residing; & a sessions licence under 28 Geo. 3, c. 30, which is the only other authority for such performances, cannot be granted for them, unless at a place not within twenty miles of London or Westminster. Dramatic performances therefore within twenty miles of London or Westminster, & not in Westminster or in the place of Her Majesty's residence, cannot be rendered legal by any authority whatever, for Disorderly Houses Act, 1751 (c. 36), extends only to music & dancing.—*LEVY v. 8. Application for grant of letters patent—What must be shown.]—(1) The ct. refused to seal a patent for representing Italian Operas; because the provisions for carrying it on were by agreement with the Lord Chamberlain, his exors. & administrators; & the right to the patent was not sufficiently connected with the property in the House. Not sufficient for the party applying merely to answer objections; but he must lay a proper case. Upon such application the ct. will take care, that the King is not deceived, nor his object disappointed; & will represent the whole to the King; but will not decide upon the merits of various claimants. Ct. will not sign a patent, which does not put the parties under some control; though there is no caveat.

The proprietors had also access to the box, but not the right of occupying it during the performance; & they were entitled & bound to perform the repairs upon it:—Held: the lessee was rateable to the poor for the occupation of the box, under an Act which authorised the making rates on all persons who should inhabit, hold, occupy, possess or enjoy any land, house, shop, wharf, warehouse, or any other building, tenement or hereditament. Although the co. of proprietors were rated for the theatre generally.—R. v. St. MARTIN'S IN THE FIELDS (INHABITANTS) (1842), 3 Q. B. 204; 2 Gal. & Dav. 426; 11 L. J. M. C. 112; 6 J. 27. — Right of proprietor to enter.]—The lease of a theatre contained a covenant on the part of the lessee not to convert the theatre, or any part thereof, to any other use than for acting or performing of operas, plays, concerts, balls, masquerades, assemblies, & such theatrical & other purposes as had been usually given therein. The lessee, for valuable consideration, sub-demised certain boxes & pit stalls, together with free & uninterrupted admission into, & egress & regress to & from, & the full use & enjoyment of such boxes & stalls during all such nights as the theatre should be open for the reception of audience or co. to any public performance or exhibition of any opera or any entertainment whatsoever of or upon the stage, except balls or masquerades, to pltf. for a term of years, reserving full right of access to the boxes & stalls for the purposes of repair. The underlease contained a covenant for quiet enjoyment of the demised premises; but no covenant on the part of the grantor of the underlease to observe or perform the covenants of the original lease. Afterwards the lessee of the theatre agreed to let it for a term of three months for the purpose of holding religious meetings. In order that the theatre might be converted into a convenient place for holding such meetings, the divisions between the boxes were removed, & the pit, including the site of pltf.'s stalls, was boarded over; but these alterations were not permanent,

& the parties disclaimed any intention of using the theatre for religious services beyond the three months:—Held: without pltf.'s consent the theatre could not be converted to other than theatrical purposes, nor could the original lessee, or any person claiming under him, enter on pltf.'s boxes or stalls; but under the circumstances, the proper remedy was in damages, & not by way of injunction.—*LEADER v. 28. — Owner of reversion obtaining lease & property of theatre—Effect of winding-up order.]—Where the owner of the reversion of a theatre having by an order in a winding-up of a co. obtained the lease & property of the theatre, the lessee of property boxes & stalls brought an action, asking for an injunction to restrain the reversioner from preventing pltf. from having access to his boxes & stalls:—Held: the order in the winding-up did not affect the rights of third parties; deft. could only exclude pltf. by action for the recovery of land where third parties would have notice & an opportunity of appearing.—LEADER v. HAYES (1886), 54 L. T. 204.

29. Grant or reservation of right to free admission—Nature of right—Licence.]—A., in 1792, grants a lease of a theatre to B., B. covenanting not to grant rights of admission, except 250 free admissions, without the consent of A.; & in case of any of the covenants being broken, the lease to be void. B. then assigns his interest to trustees, to receive the profits & pay the debts, etc., who leave B. in the management & direction of the concern, in the course of which, in 1799, B. grants a ticket of admission to C. for twenty-one years. In 1800, the trustees take possession of the theatre, but suffer C. to exercise his privilege of admission till 1814, when the ticket is stopped, on the ground that B. had no right to make such a grant:—Held: (1) the covenant by B. with A., not to grant rights of admission, supposing it to have been broken, did not avoid the grant to C.; (2) as the trustees had left B. in the management of the theatre, they must be taken to have authorised the grant, & could not afterwards disavow it; (3) this was not an interest in land, but a licence to C. to enjoy the privilege of admission, & therefore it was not necessary that it should pass by deed, or that B. should have been authorised by the trustees in writing to make such a grant.—*TAYLER v. ing date in 1839, made for valuable consideration, covenanted to confirm to debenture holders the privilege of free admission to the theatre. Petitioner was entitled to the benefits of the deed of 1839, but subsequently lost his debenture. In 1851, resp. became lessee of the theatre, with notice of the deed of 1839:—Held: petitioner assignee of the theatre.—FLIGHT v. GLOSSOPP (1835), 2 Bing. N. C. 125; 2 Scott, 220; 1 Hodg. 263; 4 L. J. C. P. 268; 132 E. R. 50.

31. ————.]—A licence is determined by an assignment of the subject matter in respect of which the privilege is to be enjoyed. By lease not under seal, R. & C., trustees on behalf of themselves & the other proprietors of a theatre, demised it to S. for three years, reserving to themselves & the other proprietors free liberty of admission to the theatre. S., by lease not under seal, let the theatre to pltf. for two nights, subject to the terms on which he held the theatre:—Held: the licence was determined, & an action of trespass might be maintained by pltf. against deft., a proprietor, who entered the theatre during his tenancy.—COLEMAN v. FOSTER (1856), 1 H. & N. 37; 4 W. R. 489; 156 E. R. 1108.

32. ————.]—Trustees acting for the shareholders or rentallers of a theatre called the Queen's Theatre & Opera House, who had obtained a feu right to the site, granted in 1858 a disposition of the ground, & buildings to one J. B. subject (inter alia) to the real burden of a perpetual annuity of £2 per share to each rentaller of the said Queen's Theatre & Opera House & to the successors or assignees of them; & it was further declared that each of the said rentallers, or the assignee or successors of such should at all times be entitled (inter alia) to free admission to the auditorium of the said Queen's Theatre & Opera House, also declaring that J. B. should not convert the said theatre to any other use; & that he should keep it open for performance six months in each year. There was no stipulation as to insurance of the theatre or as to the rebuilding of it in case of destruction by fire or otherwise. In 1865 the theatre was entirely destroyed by fire & was rebuilt by J. B.'s trustee & called by another name. In 1875 it was again entirely burnt down & again rebuilt. From 1865 to 1879 the theatre, under the new name, was twice sold, but in each case the conveyance was granted subject to the "real burdens, conditions, provisions, declarations, & others" specified in the original disposition of 1858 & especially under the burden of payment of the annuities to the rentallers & of allowing "these parties the privileges to which they are entitled." The privilege of free admission was enjoyed by the rentallers for fourteen years after the destruction of the first theatre. But in 1879 disputes arose as to the validity of the rentallers' right to (inter alia) the privilege of free admission. The trustees maintained that the rentallers were entitled under the disposition of 1858 & the succeeding conveyances to the same privileges in the new theatre which they had in the first:—Held: the privileges conferred on the rentallers by the original dispositions, other than the payment of the annuities which was constituted a real burden, rested only on the personal obligation of the original disponent, & were confined to the theatre then in existence; & the subsequent deeds to which the rentallers were not parties were not intended to, & did not confer on them any new right.—SCOTT v. HOWARD (1881), 6 App. Cas. 295, H. L.

33. ————.]—Right to specific performance.—A lease of a theatre, with a covenant for renewal, contained a proviso that the lessee should not let any box with the exception of forty-one specified boxes, for more than the season, or than from year to year. On an assignment of the term, the assignor reserved the right for himself & his nominees, during the existing or any renewed lease, to occupy box No. 124, not being one of the excepted boxes. On a renewal being obtained, a similar covenant as to forty-one boxes was inserted in the renewed lease, but they were not specified. The lessee under the renewed lease obtained the renewal by means of the covenant in the old lease & with notice of the reservation as to box No. 124. He granted long leases of forty-one boxes, exclusively of No. 124:—Held: the possibility of a forfeiture being incurred if he performed the agreement as to No. 124, was no defence to a suit for its specific performance.—*HELLING v. 36. Identity of purchaser of ticket concealed—Purchase in another name—Absence of contract.—Pltf. desired to be present at the first performance of a play at a theatre. He knew that, in consequence of his having made certain serious & unfounded charges against some members of the theatre staff, an application for a ticket in his own name would be refused. He therefore obtained a ticket through the agency of a friend who bought the ticket at the theatre without disclosing that it was for pltf. By order of deft., the managing director of the theatre, pltf. was refused admission to the theatre on the night in question. Pltf. claimed damages from deft. for maliciously procuring the proprietors of the theatre to break a contract for the admission of pltf. to the theatre, alleged to have been made by them with pltf. by the sale of the ticket:—Held: the non-disclosure of the fact that the ticket was bought for pltf. prevented the sale of the ticket from constituting a contract as alleged, the identity of pltf. being in the circumstances a material element in the formation of the contract; & that the action therefore failed.—*SAID v. Pltf. visited the place & paid for a ticket for a side show belonging to a concessionaire from defts. & containing a contrivance for throwing a person into the air. The person who was in charge of the contrivance, but who was not a servant of defts., improperly invited pltf. to sit on it in a wrong position & pltf. was injured through being thrown off the contrivance. In an action for damages for negligence:—Held: the position of defts. & pltf. was that of inviters & invitee & as there was no evidence that the performance was intrinsically dangerous & no evidence of negligence by defts. or by any servant of theirs, pltf. could not recover.—*SHREHAN v. The question is one of negligence, & I must request the jury to say yes or no to the question, whether the persons employed by defts. to make the alterations had exercised the necessary skill & caution to effect that object (WIGHTMAN, J.).—*BRAZIER v. Deft., acting on behalf of himself & others interested in certain races, entered into a contract with E., who was a competent person to be so employed, to erect for them a grand stand for the purpose audience at a theatre are perfectly well defined. They may cry down a play or other performance which they dislike, or they may hiss or hoot the actors who depend on their approbation or their caprice. Even that privilege, however, is confined within its limits. They must not break the peace, or act in such a manner as has a tendency to excite terror or disturbance. Their censure or approbation, although it may be noisy, must not be riotous. That censure or approbation must be the expression of the feelings of the moment.

For if it be premeditated by a number of persons confederated beforehand to cry down even a performance, or an actor, it becomes criminal (BUSHE, C.J.).—R. v. FORBES (1823), 2 State Tr. N. S. App. 939.—IR.

The stand was negligently & improperly constructed, but not to the knowledge of deft., & in consequence fell & injured pltf., who was one of the persons so admitted:—Held: pltf. could maintain an action against deft. for the damage sustained, although deft. was personally free from negligence, & had employed a competent person to erect the stand.—*FRANCIS v. 53. — Duty to use reasonable care—That spectator not exposed to unusual danger—Which proprietor knew or ought to have known.]—Deft. was the lessee & manager of a theatre. He had arranged for the performance of a play in his theatre with the manager of a touring theatrical co., who was to provide actors & scenery, deft. providing the theatre, the lighting, & the play bills; each took an agreed proportion of the receipts. Pltf. took & occupied a seat in the theatre; during the performance an actor fired a pistol, which should have contained only a blank cartridge, but in the barrel of which, by some unexplained mischance, there was also a second cartridge of smaller size, which when the pistol was fired struck pltf. on the wrist, inflicting a serious wound. The county ct. judge held that it was an implied term of the contract between pltf. & deft. that all persons connected with the performance of the play should exercise reasonable care so that members of the audience should not be exposed to any danger which could be avoided by the exercise of such reasonable care:—Held: the implied warranty found by the county ct. judge was too wide, that the true relation between pltf. & deft. was that of invitor & invitee, deft. owed pltf. a duty to use reasonable care that she was not exposed to unusual danger, the existence of which deft. either knew or ought to have known, & there must be a new trial to inquire into the supervision exercised over the firearms

& the ammunition for them & into the loading of the pistols.—COX v. COULSON, [1916] 2 K. B. 177; 85 L. J. K. B. 1081; 114 L. T. 599; 32 T. L. R. 406; 60 Sol. Jo. 402, C. A.

59. Performer called upon to resume part—In consequence of illness of another—Celebrity acquired by previous performance—Right to reasonable notice.]—A performer, who is called on to resume, in consequence of the illness of another, a part in which by previous performances she has acquired celebrity, is entitled to reasonable notice previous to the time of performance, such notice to be proportioned to the reputation at stake.

Proprietors of a theatre are perfectly right in having regulations, & enforcing them by the payment of fines. It is a duty which they owe to themselves & the public, for if performers should refuse to appear on the night for which they were advertised the property in the house would be in danger of being injured by the audience; & I am sure that performers will find it to their interest to submit to these fines, if they do not appear when the public have a right to expect them. . . . The jurisdiction of a manager is a very arbitrary one, but in this kingdom all arbitrary jurisdictions have a limitation (BEST, C.J.).—GRADDON v. PRICE (1827), 2 C. & P. 610; 172 E. R. 277, N. might be assigned to her, is not a “servant” of the co. within sect. 98 (1) of the Act, which provides that “the directors of the co. shall be liable to the labourers, servants, & apprentices thereof for all debts not exceeding one year's wages due for services performed by the co. while they are such directors respectively.”—RYAN v. During the run of the piece the principal actress left the theatre & pltf. claimed the right to play the part, which debts. refused. In an action to recover damages for breach of the contract, evidence was given on behalf of debts., that an understudy was not entitled as of right to play the principal's part if the latter was absent:—Held: upon this evidence & upon the true construction of the contract, no right was conferred on pltf. to play the part, the contract merely imposing on pltf. the obligation of playing the part if called upon by the managers to do so.—NEWMAN v. 71. — Engagement to play named part in named play.]—An actress, who had acquired considerable reputation in the United States & was anxious to appear in London in order to add to her popularity, obtained an engagement with the managers of a London theatre to rehearse & play a named part in a named play from a certain date at such times & at such theatres in the West End of London as the managers should from time to time direct at a salary of £100 for every week during the run of the play. By a collateral agreement the managers undertook to advertise the actress's name in a prominent position, & up to the date of the dress rehearsal they duly performed this undertaking. On that date they refused to allow her to appear in the part either on the agreed date or at all. The actress brought an action against the managers claiming damages for breach of contract including damages for injury to her reputation in not being allowed to appear in the part as advertised. Debts. paid the agreed salary up to a certain date, & paid into ct. the balance from that date until the piece ceased to run, & contended that pltf. was not entitled to any further damages:—Held: the contract imposed an express obligation upon debts. to allow pltf. to appear in the part as agreed, & damages for breach of that obligation might properly include such a sum as a jury might reasonably award as compensation for loss of reputation.—MARBE v. GEORGE EDWARDES (DALY'S THEATRE), LTD., [1928] 1 K. B. 269; 96 L. J. K. B. 980; 138 L. T. 51; 43 T. L. R. 809, C. A.

t. Engagement of theatrical performer—Condition that engagement was "subject to theatre being in the occupancy & possession of the management"—Theatre not completed by date of engagement.]—A music hall performer was engaged by a theatre co. to appear at a theatre on a future date, "subject to the said theatre being in the occupancy & possession of the management." At the date of the contract the theatre was in course of erection; & (through no fault of the theatre co.) it was not ready for use at the date specified for the performance. The theatre co. having in consequence cancelled the engagement, the performer brought an action of damages against the co. for breach of contract:—Held: the provision as to the theatre being in the occupancy & possession of the management was a condition of the contract which applied to the circumstance of the theatre not being completed; & accordingly, that defenders, not being in the occupancy & possession of the theatre, fell to be absolved.—HALCROFT v. For the week beginning May 15, S. was engaged to give a week's performance at Liverpool at a salary of £180 per week.

On May 17, a garnishee order nisi was obtained by M. against S.'s employers to attach the proportion of salary alleged to be due to S. for the performances already given by him that week, the affidavit upon which the application was based stating that the garnishees were indebted to S. in the sum of £100 or thereabouts. By the terms of S.'s agreement his engagement was expressed to be for one week commencing May 15, at a salary of £180 per week:—Held: there was no debt due to S. which was liable to attachment until the expiration of his week's engagement.—MAPLESON v. After pltf. had produced the sketch at the music hall for five weeks debts., in consequence of the decision of a magistrate that to erect a proscenium & drop-curtain to fit a stage in debts.' market-hall, in consideration of pltf. having the use of the drop-curtain for advertising purposes for a fixed period:—Held: it was an implied condition of the contract that debts. would, with due regard to their interests as owners of the property, give reasonable facilities for the holding of appropriate public entertainments in the hall during such period.—PHILLIPS v. a somewhat similar sketch was a stage play, & that it was therefore contrary to Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68), s. 11, to present it at a place not licenced as a theatre, gave notice to pltf. cancelling the engagement:—Held: as the sketch was a stage play, & as it could not be legally performed at a music hall, defts. were entitled under the agreement to cancel the engagement.—*GRAY v. 77. Impossibility of performance—Illness of performer.—Pltf. contracted with deft.'s wife, as her husband's agent, that she should play the piano at a concert to be given by pltf. on a specified day. She was, on the day in question, unable to perform through illness. The contract contained no express term as to what was to be done in case of her being too ill to perform. In an action against deft. for breach of this contract:—Held: his wife's illness & consequent incapacity excused him, inasmuch as the contract was in its nature not absolute, but conditional upon her being well enough to perform.—*ROBINSON v. 78. Failure to attend rehearsals.—

Declaration that pltf., a singer, agreed with deft., director of the Italian Opera, in London, that he would undertake the part of first tenor in the theatres, halls, & drawing rooms in the United Kingdom during his engagement, to begin on Mar. 30, 1875, & terminate on July 13, 1875, at a salary of £150 per month. Pltf. should sing in concerts as well as operas, but should not sing anywhere out of the theatre in the United Kingdom from Jan. 1 to Dec. 1, 1875, without the written permission of deft., except at more than 50 miles from London, & out of the season of the theatre. That pltf. agreed to be in London without fail at least six days before the commencement of his engagement for the purpose of rehearsals. Averment that pltf. did not sing anywhere in the United Kingdom from Jan. 1, 1875, to the date of the commencement of the action; that pltf. was prevented by temporary illness from being in London before Mar. 28, 1875, on which day he arrived in London: & that, save as aforesaid, he was & is ready to perform his part of the contract. Breach, that deft. refused to receive pltf. into his service. Plea, that pltf. was not in London six days before the commencement of the engagement ready for rehearsals, as was necessary for him to be, wherefore deft. refused to receive pltf. into his service. Demurrer:—Held: the stipulation as to rehearsals was not a condition precedent: for it did not go to the root of the matter, as pltf. was to sing in concerts at halls & drawing rooms as well as at the theatre, & also to abstain from singing within 50 miles of London from Jan. 1 previous to the commencement of the engagement on Mar. 30; the plea was therefore bad.—BETTINI

79. —.—.— Failure to attend on opening night.—Pltf. agreed in writing with defts. to sing & play in the chief female part in a new opera about to be brought out at defts.' theatre, at a weekly salary of £11 for three months, provided the opera ran for that time, commencing on or about Nov. 14. The first performance was announced for Saturday, Nov. 28, & no objection was raised by pltf. as to this delay. She attended several rehearsals, such attendance, though not expressed in the written engagement, being an implied part of it. Owing to delays of the composer, the music of the latter part of the opera was not in the hands of defts. till a few days before Nov. 28, & the final rehearsals did not take place till the beginning of the last week. Pltf. was taken ill, & was unable to attend any of the rehearsals in that week: & it being uncertain how long her illness might continue, defts.' manager made a provisional engagement with another artiste, Miss L., to study the part & be ready to take it if pltf. was unable. If she was not wanted, Miss L. was to receive a douceur; if she was called on to perform, she was to receive £15 a week till Dec. 25, if the piece ran so long. Pltf. continued too ill to attend the rehearsals or the first performance on Saturday, Nov. 28, or on the first three days of the next week; Miss L. accordingly performed on those days. On Thursday, Dec. 4, pltf. was well enough to perform & tendered her services, which defts. refused to accept; on which she brought an action for wrongful dismissal. The jury found (inter alia) that the employment of Miss L. by defts. under the circumstances was reasonable:—Held: pltf.'s inability to perform on the opening & early performances went to the root of the matter, & justified defts. in rescinding the contract.—*POUSSARD v. Pltf. became too ill to appear, but he provided a substitute. Defts. thereupon alleged that as pltf. could not appear the basis of the contract was gone. In an action for damages for breach of the contract:—Held: pltf. was a principal to whom the clause as to the provision of a deputy applied, & his absence was not a frustration of the contract & he was entitled to damages.—*TERRY v. Pltf. gave notice to transfer a number of dates & defts. then claimed that they were entitled to fix the dates on which pltf. was to perform. In an action by pltf. against defts. for breach of the contract:—Held: under the above clause neither party was entitled to fix the dates, but that while the artist had a right to transfer dates, the new dates were to be fixed by agreement, each party to act reasonably.—TERRY v. 84. Restraint by injunction—Agreement to perform for certain period at particular theatre—Absence of negative covenant restricting performance elsewhere.]—D., an actor, contracted with W., the manager of a theatre, to play at W.'s theatre for twelve consecutive nights, commencing on a certain day, stipulating that he should be at liberty during those nights to perform, among other characters, three which were named; but there was no express condition that D. should not act elsewhere during the twelve nights. On the approach of the day appointed for commencing the engagement, D. declared that he would only act in a piece which could not be produced at W.'s theatre; & when told that was impossible, declared that he would not act at all for W., & advertised himself to act at another theatre on the night appointed for the commencement of his engagement:—Held: an injunction might be granted to prevent D. acting during the twelve nights at any other theatre during the ordinary hours at which W.'s theatre was open for public performance.—WEBSTER v. 88. Measure of damages—Provision for liquidated sum equalling amount of salary—Subsequent arrangement altering basis of salary.]—Before the war deft. agreed to perform twice every evening as a comedian at pltf.'s music hall for one week beginning on Oct. 12, 1914, at a salary of £150. The contract provided that "in case the artist shall, except through illness . . . or accident . . . fail to perform at any performance, he should pay to the management as & for liquidated damages a sum equal to the sum which the artist would have received for such performance, in addition to costs & expenses incurred by the management through the default of the artist." After the outbreak of war an arrangement was come to between the managements of the various music halls & the artists, including deft., that the gross receipts of the halls during the war should be divided into two equal parts, of which the management should take one part & the performers at the hall the other part, sharing that part in the proportion of their respective salaries. Deft. having failed to perform at pltf.'s hall, they brought an action for damages against him:—Held: in order to ascertain the measure of damages the sum fixed in the contract had to be altered in view of the subsequent arrangement, & pltf. were entitled to recover such proportion of the artists' share in the receipts which would probably have been received if deft. had performed his agreement, as deft. would have been entitled to.—GOLDER'S GREEN AMUSEMENT & DEVELOPMENT CO., LTD. v. RELPH (1915), 31 T. L. R. 343.

89. ——— Loss of publicity.]—There is no reason in law why pltf. in an action for breach of contract should not, in an appropriate case, recover damages for loss of publicity caused by deft.'s breach of contract.

Whether damages for loss of publicity can be recovered in any case depends primarily on the nature & true construction of the contract, & secondarily on the special circumstances known to both parties at the time of making the contract.

their music hall for specified periods in four successive years at a weekly salary. The music hall was well known & was regarded as a West End place of entertainment, & approbation by audiences there opened the gateway of London success to the artiste. The contract contained no clause which placed on defts. any express or implied obligation to allow pltf. to appear & perform at their music hall during the contract periods. Pltf. brought an action against defts. for damages for breach of contract, alleging that they had wrongfully repudiated their bargain with her. She claimed damages (a) for loss of salary, (b) for loss of publicity arising from the refusal of defts. to permit her to perform. No evidence was given at the trial that it was the common intent of the parties, at the date of the contract, that enhanced publicity should follow from pltf.'s appearance at defts.' hall, & defts. entered into the contract upon no other basis than the business engagement of an artiste at the salary they agreed to pay, no element of publicity to pltf. entering into their part of the bargain. The jury found that defts. had committed the breach of contract alleged & assessed the damages at £100 for loss of salary, & £100 for loss of publicity:—Held: on the contract & in the circumstances, damages for loss of publicity were not recoverable in law, & there must be judgment for pltf. for £100 only for loss of salary.—*TURPIN v. 100. Contract for exclusive performance—Meaning of "exclusive"—Performance of same nature.—GAIETY THEATRE CO., LTD. v. LOFTUS (1893), Times, Aug. 11.

101. — Not to permit any colourable imitation or version of performance—Reproduction of performance on cinematograph.—Pltfs., who were music hall proprietors, made an agreement with deft. by which it was provided that deft. should give pl'ts. his exclusive services & that he should not permit any colourable imitation, representation, or version of his performance to be given within a certain radius. It was alleged by pl'ts. that def't. permitted the representation of one of his sketches on a cinematograph at certain picture palaces within the prescribed area, & they brought an action against him to restrain him from this alleged breach of the agreement:—Held: on the evidence, def't. had taken no part in the alleged reproduction of his performance, & therefore he was entitled to judgment.—LONDON THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD. v. EVANS (1914), 31 T. L. R. 75, C. A.

102. Contract not to perform elsewhere—During engagement—Meaning of "perform"—Performance on Sunday.—Pl'tf. K., a music hall artiste, entered into contracts with each of the three def't. cos. by which she agreed to perform for ten weeks certain, commencing at a certain date, every evening at the time notified by the management, in "her usual entertainment as mimic" in two of the contracts, "as singer & mimic" in the other, at a salary of £8 per week in respect of each hall, subject to the following conditions (inter alia) viz., "that the said artiste shall not perform before nor during this engagement at any theatre, music hall, club, concert, or place of entertainment within one mile of the said music halls respectively." At the end of the contract was this clause: "In the event of the above-named artiste not observing these conditions in every respect, the co. shall have the option of cancelling this agreement." During the fulfilment of the engagement she went to a smoking concert at a certain club one Sunday evening within a mile of these music halls by invitation. Nobody except members & their guests were admitted to this club, & no admission money was paid. At this concert she sang a song & danced for a few minutes. The following night she performed at the halls, but at one of them the manager asked if she had sung at the club, & she replied she had done so. He told her it was against the rules, & that she must not do it again. The following night a letter was handed her cancelling the three engagements, & signed by the manager of the halls. These actions were then brought by pl'tf. to recover damages for wrongful dismissal & for breach of contract:—Held: the word "engagement" did not include Sundays, that day in such contracts being a dies non; the performance was not within the meaning of the word "perform" as contemplated by the parties, for pl'tf. did not use her powers of mimicry. Although singing was included in one contract, singing before a private audience such as the present case was not a performance.—KELLY v. LONDON PAVILION, LTD., KELLY v. NEW TIVOLI, LTD., KELLY v. THE OXFORD, LTD. (1897), 77 L. T. 215; 13 T. L. R. 584; affd. on other grounds (1898), 14 T. L. R. 234, C. A.

103. ——— Meaning of "engagement"—Sunday not included.—By pl'tf.'s contract of engagement with def'ts. she undertook not to perform elsewhere during the engagement:—Held: this stipulation applied only to the days for which she was engaged by the contract, viz. week days, & did not apply to Sundays.—KELLY v. LONDON PAVILION, LTD., SAME v. THE OXFORD, LTD., SAME v. NEW TIVOLI, LTD. (1898), 14 T. L. R. 234, C. A.

104. ——— For fixed period before completion of engagement—Engagement for different weeks at considerable intervals—Restraint applicable to each week.—LONDON MUSIC HALL, LTD. v. AUSTIN (1908), Times, Dec. 16.

105. Agreement excluding interest in music hall or theatre—Or other place of entertainment—Financial interest in cinematograph companies.—Pl'ts. who were music hall proprietors, in 1914 made with def't., who had been their manager, an agreement whereby he undertook until Sept. 1917, not to be "interested in any music hall, theatre, circus, hippodrome, or other place of entertainment" within a certain area.

During the specified period def't. became financially interested in two cos. which gave cinematograph entertainments within the area in question, & pl'ts. brought an action against him for an injunction to restrain him from being interested therein.—Held: as a cinematograph theatre was a place of entertainment of an entirely different kind from a music hall, the action failed.—LONDON THEATRES OF VARIETIES, LTD. v. GIBBONS (1916), 33 T. L. R. 26.

C. Whether Enforceable by Injunction.

106. Covenant not to perform elsewhere—Positive part of contract unenforceable.—The proprietors of Covent Garden Theatre agreed with an actor that he should act for twenty-four nights, during a certain period of time, at their theatre, & that, in the meantime, he should not act at any other place in London:—Held: the ct. cannot enforce the positive part of the contract, & therefore, it will not restrain by injunction in breach of the negative part.—KEMBLE v. KEAN (1829), 6 Sim. 333; 58 E. R. 619.

107. ————J. W. agreed with B. L. that she, J. W., would sing at B. L.'s theatre during a certain period of time, & would not sing elsewhere without his written authority:—Held: on a bill filed to restrain J. W. from singing for a third party, & granting an injunction for that purpose, the positive & negative stipulations of the agreement formed but one contract, & the ct. would interfere to prevent the violation of the negative stipulation, although it could not enforce the specific performance of the entire contract.—LUMLEY v. WAGNER (1852), 1 De G. M. & G. 604; 21 L. J. Ch. 898; 19 L. T. O. S. 264; 16 Jur. 871; 42 E. R. 687.

108. — "During the year"—Salary not payable beyond end of season.]—An opera singer by agreement dated only as to the year, 1870, agreed to sing at a certain theatre for the whole London season, & nowhere else in the Kingdom of Great Britain, pendant l'annee 1871, without the written consent of the employer. The singer's salary did not extend beyond the season which ended on Aug. 5. On motion for injunction to restrain him singing elsewhere after the season was over but during the year 1871:—Held: the ct. would not under the circumstances of the case grant an injunction on an interlocutory application.—*MAPLESON v. 111. — Agreement subject to rules—Rules prohibiting acting elsewhere.]—Deft., an actor, agreed with pltf., a theatrical manager, to act & to understudy as a member of pltf.'s co. on tour in America for twenty-five weeks, or longer if required, but not more than forty weeks, subject to certain rules, by one of which no member of the co. was allowed to act at any other theatre without permission. Shortly after the beginning of the tour pltf. produced a play in America, in which deft. was not given a part to act, but was called on to understudy. A week later deft. wrote asking pltf. to cancel the engagement, & this being refused deft. returned to England, & entered into an engagement & acted at a theatre in London. Deft. alleged in his affidavit that pltf. had verbally promised that deft. should perform in certain parts, but had not kept such promise.

On an application for an injunction to restrain deft. from acting at any theatre other than where pltf.'s co. played:—Held: the negative stipulation against acting elsewhere could be enforced by injunction, the alleged verbal promise could not, in the absence of any circumstances showing want of good faith on pltf.'s part, be considered in construing the contract, that the allotting of parts to deft. was no part of the consideration, that pltf. had not failed to carry out his part of the contract, & an injunction ought to be granted.

In the present case, what is the obligation on the part of pltf. contained in the contract? Pltf. engages deft. to act & understudy; but that does not mean that he undertakes to provide a part for him in every play that may be produced . . .

a manager cannot be expected to give every actor whom he engages a part in every play which may be produced, & generally to attempt to do so would not be for the benefit of the actor. All that deft. can be entitled to is to have a reasonable opportunity of acting & understudying, having regard to all the circumstances of the case (WILLS, J.).—GRIMSTON v. CUNINGHAM, [1894] 1 Q. B. 125; 10 T. L. R. 81; 38 Sol. Jo. 143, D. C. Annotation:—Consd. Marbe v. George Edwardes (Daly's Theatre), [1928] 1 K. B. 269.

112. — Restraint to continue for six months after end of engagement—Reasonable restraint.]—By an agreement in writing deft. agreed to appear at pltf.'s theatre at Manchester at a salary of £60 per week. The agreement contained the following clause: "Prior to the commencement of this engagement & during its continuance or within six months afterwards, no artist shall perform at any place or entertainment within 20 miles of Manchester . . . without the written consent of the director. . . ." Deft. having been billed to appear at a theatre at Salford, in violation of this agreement & after leave to appear there had been refused her, pltf. brought this action, claiming an injunction:—Held: on the evidence, the restraint was reasonable, & therefore the injunction claimed should be granted.—TIVOLI, MANCHESTER, LTD. v. COLLEY (1904), 52 W. R. 632; 20 T. L. R. 437; 48 Sol. Jo. 417.

113. — Effect of injunction preventing earning of livelihood—Interim injunction not granted.]—The ct. ought not to grant an interim injunction to restrain a person from following his trade or profession if it is satisfied that to do so may prevent such person from earning his livelihood.—PALACE THEATRE, LTD. v. CLENSY & HACKNEY & SHEPHERD'S-BUSH EMPIRE PALACES, LTD. (1909), 26 T. L. R. 28, C. A.

SECT. 8.—THEATRICAL USAGES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

Usages generally, see CUSTOM & USAGES, Vol. XVII., pp. 25 et seq.

114. Existence of usage—Usage of hiring pianos by lessees of theatre—Liability of pianos to distress by landlord.]—In the absence of evidence establishing a custom that pianos are so constantly hired to lessees of theatres for theatrical purposes as to exclude the doctrine of reputed ownership, the ct. cannot assume as a matter of law that the lessee of a theatre is not the true owner of the piano which is in the theatre. In such a case the piano is not exempted by the law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908 (c. 53), from liability to distress by the landlord of the theatre.—CHAPPELL & Co., LTD. v. HARRISON (1910), 103 L. T. 594; 75 J. P. 20; 27 T. L. R. 85, D. C.

SUB-SECT. 2.—APPLICATION TO THEATRICAL CONTRACTS.

115. Usage must be universal.]—(1) Where an actor is engaged by a manager to take a part in a piece about to be produced. There is no custom in the theatrical profession which compels the manager to allow the artist, even though engaged, to open in the part.

(2) Can you on this sort of contract introduce any evidence of the custom among actors, & of this I have grave doubts as, for instance like the agricultural customs in counties or "a bakers dozen" & if it were to control the contract it must be proved to be fixed, regular & practically invariable, so as to be universal. With regard to this there was a strong conflict of evidence & they would probably be guided by its reasonableness (GROVE, J.).—WHITE v. HENDERSON (1885), 2 T. L. R. 119.

118. 130. — In case of partnership.]—Although an agreement to refer disputes to arbn. is, generally, no objection to a suit in a ct. of equity, yet upon the nature of the subject, the management of the Opera House & the anxious provision of the parties for arbn. the ct. refused upon motion to interfere, before they had taken that course.

The principle upon which a ct. of equity interferes between partners by appointing a manager, receiver, etc., is merely with a view to the relief, by winding up & disposing of the concern & dividing produce : not to carry it on. The ct. therefore would not upon motion appoint a manager, etc., of the Opera House except upon the principle applicable to any other partnership as necessary to the relief, a foreclosure ; taking into consideration also the difficulties from the nature of the subject & the contract, an anxious provision for arbn. & that one party was by the express contract manager.—WATERS v. Part II.—Stage Plays.

SECT. 1.—WHAT AMOUNTS TO STAGE PLAY OR ENTERTAINMENT OF THE STAGE.

See Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68), s. 23.

132. Question of fact.—Deft. occupied a house of public resort, licenced under Disorderly Houses Act, 1752 (c. 36), for music & dancing. There was a pit & private boxes, a band, a stage, & curtain. Upon this stage was performed a ballet divertissement by dancers dressed as ballet dancers, who danced, & in so doing described, by certain gestures & motions, the ideas of war, peace, & reconciliation:—Held: (1) the question, whether a performance is a "stage play," within Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68), is a question of fact; (2) the performance was a stage play, within the meaning of the Act.

I think those words "other entertainment of the stage," must be construed with reference to the previous words, as including only entertainments of the same kind as those which are specified expressly, as "tragedy, comedy, farce, opera, play, interlude, melodrama, pantomime," extending only to entertainments of a dramatic character (WILLES, J.).—WIGAN v. STRANGE (1865), L. R. 1 C. P. 175; Har. & Ruth. 41; 35 L. J. M. C. 31; 13 L. T. 371; 29 J. P. 774; 12 Jur. N. S. 9; 14 W. R. 103.

133. Tumbling.—Tumbling is not an entertainment of the stage within 10 Geo. 2, c. 28.—R. v. HANDY (1795), 6 Term Rep. 286; 101 E. R. 556.

134. Dramatic performance — Duologue.—A dramatic performance, a duologue, by two persons, is a stage play, within Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68).—THORNE v. COLSON (1861), 3 L. T. 697; 25 J. P. 101.

137. Ballet dancing—Gestures & motions descriptive of war, peace, & reconciliation.—WIGAN v. STRANGE, No. 132, ante.

138. Actions of performers shown by means of mirrors—Performers placed in chamber below stage—Only two characters bodily on stage—For short dialogue subordinate to plot.—The following was held to be a dramatic entertainment or "stage-play," within the prohibition of Theatres Act, 1843 (c. 68): On the rising of the curtain, there was a representation of a storm at sea & of a man swimming, not a living person, but in theatrical phrase a "double." When the storm subsided, a drop scene was disclosed, with a lake in the background. A character then appeared upon the stage, in the costume of a Greek prince, who spoke some lines relative to the shipwreck from which he had just escaped. He was then joined by another person, dressed as an attendant, & a short dialogue ensued. These two were the only persons who appeared bodily on the stage; & they were twice on the stage together. There were several other characters, a king, a princess, etc., & a chorus; & the dialogue between them was a composed set drama, with a regular plot of love, courtship, & matrimony. With the exception of the two persons above mentioned, the dialogue between whom was wholly subordinate to the plot of the piece, none of the characters were at any time bodily upon the stage: they had their places in a chamber below it, where they acted their parts, & addressed each other in the words allotted to them: but by a combination of lenses & mirrors their figures were reflected upon a mirror at the back of the stage, so as to present to the spectators the appearance of persons actually upon the stage. There was dancing, music, & singing, but no change of scenery or dress during the performance.—DAY v. SIMPSON (1865), 18 C. B. N. S. 680; 6 New Rep. 153; 34 L. J. M. C. 149; 12 L. T. 386; 11 Jur. 140. ——— Proof of "causing."—In a conviction of deft. for causing to be acted at a certain place called the Coburg Theatre, in the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth, for gain & reward, a certain entertainment of the stage called Richard the Third, the evidence set forth was, that deft. was seen once or twice at the rehearsals of Richard; that another person was stage manager; that deft. engaged I. S. to perform, & gave him a check for the amount of his benefit:—Held: this was sufficient to warrant the justices in drawing the conclusion that deft. caused the play of Richard the Third to be performed.—*R. v. A conviction by two justices, under this statute, having been affirmed on appeal, was, together with the order of sessions, removed into this ct. by certiorari, & confirmed. A levari facias issued out of this ct. for the penalty, & there was a return of nulla bona. This ct. not having authority to exercise the discretion given by the statute to the justices, as to the term of imprisonment, granted a procedendo to carry back to the sessions the record of conviction, & the order of sessions, & commanding the justices to enter continuances upon the appeal from session to session, & proceed to award execution.—*R. v. 151. Discretion of justices—To grant licence for one purpose only—Music licence.—Under Disorderly Houses Act, 1751 (c. 36), s. 2, which empowers justices to licence a house for public dancing, music, or other public entertainment of a like kind, the justices have a discretion to grant a licence for one of the purposes only, viz., music; & the keeper of a house with a music licence only is liable to the penalty for keeping a house without a licence, if he permit public dancing in the house.—BROWN v. NUGENT (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 588; 41 L. J. M. C. 166; 41 L. J. Q. B. 304; 26 L. T. 880; 20 W. R. 989, Ex. Ch.

Sect. 2.—Licences: Sub-sect. 3, A. & B. (a) & (b).]

152. — To grant licence for short period.]—A local improvement Act enacted that no house or room shall be kept or used for public dancing or music without a licence from the justices at the general annual licencing meeting, & certain conditions were imposed for breach of which the licence might be forfeited & revoked by the justices. L. got a licence in 1870 for one year, & each year the occupier got one till 1873, when the justices refused the licence & revoked it. In 1871 L. had transferred his house to H.:—Held: the justices had an implied right to grant the licence for one year, though no period was mentioned in the statute, & were entitled to revoke it.

L. must be taken to have surrendered the first licence of 1870, when he applied in the following years (COCKBURN, C.J.).—HOFFMANN v. BOND (1875), 32 L. T. 775; 40 J. P. 5.

153. — To attach conditions to licence—Condition as to charge for admission.]—In places where Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 51, is in force, the licencing justices are entitled to make it a condition of granting a music & dancing licence for a hall connected with a public-house that a charge of at least 3d. per head shall be made for admission, & that such sum shall not be returned in the form of refreshment.—Ex p. RICHARDS (1904), 68 J. P. 536; 20 T. L. R. 669; sub nom. R. v. ILKESTONE LICENSING JJ., 68 J. P. Jo. 352, D. C.

154. — To refuse licence—On ground that majority of shareholders in company alien enemies.]—The terms & conditions which a county council may impose on the grant of a licence under Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), s. 2, are not limited to terms & conditions for securing safety; & therefore the matters to which a county council may have regard in considering an application for a licence under the Act are not confined to matters relating to safety.

The London County Council, as the licencing authority, under Disorderly Houses Act, 1751 (c. 36), & Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), refused to grant the renewal of music & cinematograph licences to a limited co. registered in England on the ground that the large majority of its shares were held by alien enemies. A rule having been obtained for a mandamus directed to the Council requiring them to hear & determine the application according to law, upon the ground that they were actuated by extraneous considerations, namely, the shareholding & nationality of shareholders in the co.:—Held: apart altogether from the question whether or not the alien enemy shareholders were entitled to vote, the Council could in the exercise of their discretion refuse to grant licences to a co., the majority of whose shareholders were alien enemies.—R. v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, Ex p. LONDON & PROVINCIAL ELECTRIC THEATRES, LTD., [1915] 2 K. B. 466; 84 L. J. K. B. 1787; 113 L. T. 118; 79 J. P. 417; 31 T. L. R. 329; 59 Sol. Jo. 382; 13 L. G. R. 847, C. 155. Time for application—Power of justices to make rules—Construction of local Act.]—A local Act provided that no house should be used for public entertainment without a licence from the justices for the borough, & that the justices might grant such licences at any special session convened by fourteen days' previous notice:—Held: the justices had no right to lay down a rule that applications for these licences must be made only at the general annual licencing meeting.—R. v. OLDHAM JJ., Ex p. MELLOR (1909), 101 L. T. 430; 73 J. P. 390, D. C.

See Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), ss. 2, 5, 6, 7.

156. Licencing authority—County council—Right to delegate powers.]—By Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), s. 2, county councils are empowered to grant cinematograph licences, & by sect. 5 it is provided that a county council may "delegate to justices sitting in petty sessions any of the powers conferred on the council by this Act."

Sect. 6 enacts that the provisions of the Act are to apply in the case of a county borough as if the borough council were a county council:—Held: justices sitting in petty sessions to whom the powers of a county or borough council under the Act have been delegated do not, when exercising such powers, sit as a ct. of summary jurisdiction, & therefore, they have no power to state a case for the opinion of the ct. under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts.—*HUISS v. (b) Discretion of Licencing Authority to attach Conditions.

160. Restrictions on exercise of discretion.]—By Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), s. 2 (1), which is entitled "An Act to make better provision for securing safety at cinematograph & other exhibitions," it is enacted that "A county council may grant licences to such persons as they think fit to use the premises specified in the licence for the purposes aforesaid"—i.e., for cinematograph exhibitions—"on such terms & conditions & under such restrictions as, subject to regulations of the Secretary of State, the council may by the respective licences determine."

A licence was granted under the sect. subject to the following condition: "Children under fourteen years of age shall not be allowed to enter into or be in the licenced premises after the hour of 9 p.m. unaccompanied by a parent or guardian. No child under the age of ten years shall be allowed in the licenced premises under any circumstances after 9 p.m." :—Held: the condition was ultra vires inasmuch as there was no connection between the ground upon which the condition was imposed, namely, regard for the health & welfare

161. Conditions must be reasonable.—(1) By Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), s. 2 (1), the proper authority may licence persons to hold cinematograph exhibitions "on such terms & conditions & under such restrictions as . . . (they) may by the respective licences determine":—Held: such terms, etc., must be reasonable & may be formulated generally, subject to the right of each appct. to contend, when applying for a licence, that they should not be imposed in his case.

(2) A licence was issued subject (inter alia) to a condition that no film should be exhibited to which objection was taken by any three of the licensing justices:—Held: the condition was unreasonable & invalid.

(3) The licensing justices exacted an undertaking from the licensee, first, that he would not tempt children under sixteen to frequent his exhibition by the offer of free or reduced admission or sweetmeats; & secondly, that on being notified by the medical officer of health that any department of a public elementary school had been closed on account of the prevalence of infectious disease, he would exclude children attending that school:—Held: both were reasonable undertakings to impose. — R. v. BURNLEY J.J., Ex p. LONGMORE (1916), 85 L. J. K. B. 1565; 115 L. T. 525; 80 J. P. 382; 32 T. L. R. 695; 14 L. G. R. 960, D. C.

(1) A licensing committee in granting a licence under Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), attached to the licence a condition "that no film be shown which has not been certified for public exhibition by the British Board of Film Censors." This Board consisted of persons appointed by traders in the film industry for censorship purposes, & had no statutory or constitutional authority:—Held: the condition was unreasonable & ultra vires. Semble: if the condition had reserved to the committee the right to review the decisions of the Board, the condition would have been reasonable & intra vires.

(2) Qu.: whether the proper remedy for a licensee who has accepted a licence subject to a condition is not to apply to the ct. for a writ of prohibition or mandamus, if he wishes to allege that the condition is unreasonable.—ELLIS v. 167. — On objection to film—Right to give notice of objection—Certiorari to quash notice.—A licensing authority under Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), granted to a theatre proprietor a licence for the exhibition of cinematograph films at his theatre. The licence was subject to the condition that the licensee should not exhibit any film if he had notice that the licensing authority objected to it. A firm who had acquired the sole right of exhibition of a certain film in the district in which the theatre was situated entered into an agreement with the licensee for the exhibition of the film at his theatre. The licensing authority having given notice to the licensee that they objected to the exhibition of the film, the firm applied for a writ of certiorari to bring up the notice to be quashed on the ground that the condition attached to the licence was unreasonable & void & that they were aggrieved by the notice as being destructive of their property:—Held: whether the condition was unreasonable or not, appcts. were not persons who were aggrieved by the notice & were not entitled to apply for a certiorari.—Ex p. STOTT, [1916] 1 K. B. 7; 85 L. J. K. B. 502; 114 L. T. 234; 80 J. P. 169; 32 T. L. R. 84; 60 Sol. Jo. 418, D. C.

168. — — — Interference with contractual rights.—A licensing authority under Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), licenced the proprietors of a theatre to use it for the exhibition of cinematograph films. The licence was subject to the following condition: "No film shall be shown that is objectionable or indecent or anything likely or tending to educate the young in the wrong direction, or likely to produce riot, tumult, or breach of the peace, & no offensive representations of living persons shall be shown. Provided also that no film shall be exhibited if notice that the justices"—i.e., the licensing authority—"object to such film has been given to the licensee."

Grantees of the right of letting for exhibition a certain film agreed to let the film to the proprietors of the theatre for an agreed sum. The licensing authority gave notice to the proprietors of the theatre that they objected to the exhibition of the film. In an action by the grantees against the licensing authority for interfering with their contractual rights without just cause or excuse:—Held: the meaning of the condition was that the licensing authority might give notice of objection to a film where they had bond fide & in the judicial exercise of their discretion come to the conclusion that the film was objectionable on one of the grounds mentioned therein, & so interpreted the condition was reasonable & valid; even if the condition was unreasonable & void, the grantees had no cause of action, inasmuch as there was no evidence that the licencing authority knowingly or for their own ends induced the licencees to commit an actionable wrong.—STOTT v. GAMBLE, [1916] 2 K. B. 504; 85 L. J. K. B. 1750; 115 L. T. 309; 80 J. P. 443; 32 T. L. R. 579; 14 L. G. R. 769.

The Board was an unofficial body appointed by firms in the film industry for censorship purposes, & formed no constituent part of the council:—Held: as the effect of the condition was to reserve to the council the right to review the decision of the Board, it was not ultra vires or unreasonable, & further that the condition was not unreasonable & void for uncertainty by reason of the words "child . . . appearing to be under the age of 16 years" & "accompanied by . . . a bonâ fide adult guardian of such child."—*MILLS v. 178. ——— ——— Buildings erected or existing at passing of Act.]—By above sect. it is provided that the Metropolitan Board of Works, whose place has now been taken by the London County Council, shall make such regulations as are thought expedient for the protection from fire of houses or other places of public resort within the metropolis which are open for the public performance of stage plays, or other places of resort within the metropolis having a superficial area for the accommodation of the public of not less than 500 square feet & kept open for public dancing, music, or other public entertainment of the like kind; & that it shall not be lawful from & after the making of such regulations for any person to have or keep open such house or place of public resort for any of the above purposes unless & until a certificate shall have been granted to the effect that such house or other place on its completion was in accordance with the regulations, such certificate to be granted by the Metropolitan Board of Works, now the London County Council:—Held: the provisions of the section had no application to buildings other than those which were erected or came into existence after the passing of the Act.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. HALL OF ARTS & SCIENCE CORPN. (1913), 110 L. T. 28; 78 J. P. 11; 30 T. L. R. 3; 11 L. G. R. 1177, D. C.

179. Notice to remedy defects causing danger—Metropolis Management & Building Acts (Amendment Act) 1878 (c. 32), s. 11—Compliance with notice—Power to serve other notice in respect of same building.]—Where a notice has been served upon the owner of a building, under above sect., requiring him to remedy structural defects from which special danger from fire may result, & the requirements of that notice have been complied with, there is no power subsequently to serve another notice under that sect. in respect of the same building.

The first observation on the sect. [above sect.] is that it relates entirely to defects in structure, & not to defects arising from want of repair, or from the mode of control or management of the premises, such as keeping doors locked or the like (CHANNELL, J.).—*ST. 183. Regulations for securing safety in cinematograph exhibitions—Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), s. 1—Exhibition by dealer or manufacturer in presence of customers.]—Above Act, s. 1, provides that an exhibition of pictures by means of a cinematograph, for the purposes of which inflammable films are used, shall not be given unless the regulations made by the Secretary of State for securing safety are complied with, or, save as expressly provided for by the Act, elsewhere than in premises licenced for the purpose in accordance with the provisions of the Act:—Held: the statute does not apply to cases where a dealer or manufacturer in the exercise of his trade runs films through a cinematograph machine in the presence of prospective customers.

Though above sect. is in very wide terms the word "exhibition" must have some limitation imposed upon it, & must be construed as referring to displays of pictures in places of public entertainment for a profit.—A.-G. v. VITAGRAPH CO., LTD., [1915] 1 Ch. 206; 84 L. J. Ch. 142; 112 L. T. 245; 79 J. P. 150; 31 T. L. R. 70; 59 Sol. Jo. 160; 13 L. G. R. 148.

184. ——— Keeping gangways & passages clear—Obstruction due to incomplete seating accommodation.]—Under Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), s. 1, "An exhibition of pictures . . . by means of a cinematograph . . . shall not be given unless the regulations made by the Secretary of State for securing safety are complied with." The regulations made by the Secretary of State provided that "the gangways & the staircases, & the passages leading to the exits, shall, during the presence of the public in the building, be kept clear of obstruction."

All the seats for which resp.'s cinematograph theatre was licenced had not been installed. At a certain performance a number of persons were standing in the gangways & passages, so that persons going to & from seats had to pass through them, but the number of persons present did not exceed the number for which the theatre was licenced:—Held: the persons standing in the gangways & passages leading to the exits constituted an obstruction within the regulations, & the fact that if the theatre had contained all the seats for which it was licenced all the people present could have been seated was no answer to the charge.—PORTER v. WATT (1914), 84 L. J. K. B. 394; 112 L. T. 508; 79 J. P. 212; 31 T. L. R. 84; 13 L. G. R. 488; 24 Cox, C. C. 603, D. C.

185. Sufficiency of entrances & exits—Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 36—Right of local authority to refuse to pass plans—Narrowness & congestion of streets adjoining theatre.]—The owners of land in Cambridge, intending to build thereon a cinematograph theatre, submitted plans to the corpn. under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 158, which plans complied in every respect with the bye-laws of the borough as to building. The corpn. refused to pass the plans, alleging that by reason of the narrowness of several of the adjoining streets, & the congested traffic, the building would not be provided with ample, safe & convenient means of egress for the public, & would be an infringement of Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 36:—Held: the corpn. were not entitled to refuse their approval of the plans on account of the narrowness of adjoining streets & the congestion of traffic therein.—R. v. CAMBRIDGE CORPN., Ex p. CAMBRIDGE PICTURE PLAYHOUSES, LTD., [1922] 1 K. B. 250; 91 L. J. K. B. 118; 126 L. T. 365; 86 J. P. 13; 38 T. L. R. 96; 66 Sol. Jo. 125; 20 L. G. R. 67; D. C.

186. Crystal Palace—Charter prohibiting admission on Sunday for money payment—Conversion of shares into tickets—Tickets giving right to admission on Sunday.]—The charter of the Crystal Palace Co. was granted on condition that no person should be admitted to the building or grounds on Sundays, in consideration of any money payment, whether made directly or indirectly, unless the express sanction of the legislature should have been obtained for admission on such consideration. By a subsequent Act, the directors were empowered to convert the shares into tickets of admission for life or a term of years, the Act providing that nothing therein contained should alter the charter or relieve the co. from its covenants or conditions, except so far as the charter was expressly varied by the Act. The directors under this Act proposed to convert the shares into tickets of admission for the holders & their nominees, such tickets giving the privilege of admission to the building & grounds on Sunday afternoons:—Held: (1) the directors, by granting these tickets in consideration of the surrender of shares, would be receiving indirectly a money payment for the privilege of the Sunday admissions attached to the tickets, & there was nothing in the Act enabling them to dispense with the prohibiting condition imposed by the charter or to grant any other tickets than ordinary tickets conferring no such privilege of admission on Sundays; (2) the prohibition in the charter was express, & not limited in its operation by the provisions of Sunday Observance Act, 1780 (c. 49), against profanation of the Lord's day.—RENDALL v. CRYSTAL PALACE CO. (1858), 4 K. & J. 326; 27 L. J. Ch. 397; 31 L. T. O. S. 51; 22 J. P. 321; 6 W. R. 416; 70 E. R. 136.

187. Under Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), ss. 1, 3—Exhibition on unlicensed premises—Use of inflammable films—Meaning of “inflammable.”]—Appls. were summoned by resp. for allowing on premises which had not been licensed under above Act, a cinematograph exhibition for which inflammable films were used. Resps. had tested the films at the close of a performance by means of a naked light, which easily set some of them alight. The justices held that some of the films were inflammable inasmuch as they were easily set on fire, & they convicted applts.:—Held: there was evidence to support the conviction, as it was not necessary for the prosecution to prove that the films were liable to catch fire while being used in the cinematograph.—VICTORIA PIER, (FOLKESTONE) SYNDICATE, LTD. v. 191. — Payment of fee to justices’ clerk—Not condition precedent—Failure to take up & pay for licence.]—On Mar. 13, 1919, applts. applied for & obtained from the licencing justices a renewal of their billiard licence. The licence was prepared & signed by the justices’ clerk, & was duly sealed, but applts., although notified that it was ready, did not apply for it or pay the fee to which the clerk was entitled, & in consequence of this the clerk, on Apr. 6, treated the licence as lapsed, & so entered it in his minute book. Applts. being charged, under Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 11, with unlawfully keeping on their premises a public billiard table without being duly licensed & not holding a victualler’s licence, the justices convicted them, being of opinion that the licence had lapsed & that applts. were in the position of having no licence:—Held: payment of the clerk’s fee was not a condition precedent to the grant of the licence, & applts. were duly licensed although they had not taken up & paid for the licence.—WHITEFIELD BILLIARD HALL CO., LTD. v. PICKERING, [1920] 1 K. B. 604; 89 L. J. K. B. 287; 122 L. T. 429; 84 J. P. 30; 18 L. G. R. 185, D. C.

192. Offences against tenor of licence—Condition prohibiting supply of exciseable liquors—Licencee also holding beer licence—Supply of beer not an offence.]—Exciseable liquors are liquors subject to the duty of excise; & therefore, beer, upon which an excise duty is no longer paid, is not an exciseable liquor. A. was licensed under Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), to keep a house for billiard playing; & the licence provided that A. should not knowingly allow the consumption of exciseable liquors in the house by persons resorting thereto. He was also licensed under Beerhouse Act, 1840 (c. 61), & 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, to sell beer, wine, etc., to be consumed in the house. A. had allowed the consumption of beer by persons resorting to the house for the purpose of playing billiards, & was convicted of an offence against the tenor of his billiard licence:—Held: A. had not been guilty of selling exciseable liquor, & was wrongly convicted.—JONES v. WHITTAKER (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 541; 39 L. J. M. C. 139; 22 L. T. 535; 34 J. P. 663; 18 W. R. 1197.

The display was not in the nature of an advertisement & purported to be a pictorial representation of a play of recognised literary merit.—Held: deft. had exhibited a film of an indecent or obscene nature within Police Offences Act, 1915, s. 173, as amended by Venereal Diseases Act, 1916, s. 25 (1).—KIERNAN v. PART IV.

d. Grant of billiard licence—Discretionary.]—The grant of a licence under a bye-law made by a county council by virtue of Counties Act, 1908,

s. 107, for the licensing of public billiard-saloons is discretionary; & the refusal of such a licence in time of war, in conformity with a previous resolution of the council “that no billiard-room licence be issued during the currency of the “war” is not an improper exercise of the council’s discretion.—THATCHER v. f. — To impose licence fee.]—A bye-law of the corpn. of London, passed under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 48, providing that the owner of a billiard table shall pay £10 per annum for a licence to keep the same, had not the effect of abrogating the duty imposed on billiard tables by the provincial Act 50 Geo. 3, c. 6, but must be considered as a regulation super-added for the purposes of the town of London.—CHURCH v. Licencee holder of publican's licence—Play by lodgers.]—By Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 13, the holder of a victualler's licence who keeps a public billiard table, & allows persons to play thereon when the premises are not allowed to be open for the sale of wine, etc., is liable to a certain penalty. By Licencing Act, 1874 (c. 49), s. 10, a person licenced to sell any intoxicating liquor, to be consumed on the premises, may sell such liquor at any time to persons lodging in his house. Applt. held a victualler's licence for a certain house at H. The closing hour at H. on week days is 11 p.m., & after that time two gentlemen, lodgers in the house, were found playing billiards. The justices thought that Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 13, absolutely prohibited all persons without exception from playing at a billiard table during closing hours, & such prohibition was not affected by Licencing Act, 1874 (c. 49), s. 10. Accordingly applt. was convicted, but the justices stated a case:—Held: the conviction was right.—OVENDEN v. RAYMOND (1876), 34 L. T. 698; 40 J. P. 727, D. C.

194. ——— Licencee holder of beer licence.]—A beerhouse keeper who has obtained a licence to keep a billiard table, & allows billiards to be played after the closing hour for the beerhouse, is not liable to the penalty in Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 13, which applies only to victuallers licenced under 11 Geo. 4, c. 61.—BENT v. SECT. 3.—MONTH.

SUB-SECT. 1.—MEANING OF MONTH.

A. General Rules.

13. Primâ facie lunar month.—Where, by deed of arbn., dated June 1, the arbitrators were to make their award on or before Oct. 1, with power, in case they should not agree in making their award within the time, to appoint an umpire, & his award to be binding, so as it be made within six months after the date of his appointment, & the arbitrators appointed an umpire within the time allowed to them, who made his umpirage within six calendar, but not within six lunar months of his appointment:—Held: the umpirage was ill-made.

There is nothing ultra the expression itself to explain the meaning of the parties; in which respect the case differs from Lang v. Gale, No. 60, post, & therefore the six months must be taken as lunar (per CUR.).—Re SWINFORD (1817), 6 M. & S. 226; 105 E. R. 1227.

14. —.]—Webb v. Fairman, No. 232, post.

15. —.]—In common law, the word "month" means four weeks, but in the ecclesiastical cts., it means calendar month (KNIGHT BRUCE, V.-C.).—Bluck v. Rackham (1846), as reported in 5 Moo. P. C. C. 305; 13 E. R. 508.

Annotation:—Refd. Bruner v. Moore, [1904] 1 Ch. 305.

16. —.]—"Month" in all contracts, except there is some evidence to show that "calendar month" is meant, means "lunar" month, except in mercantile transactions in the city of London, where "month" means "calendar month." Therefore, where an artist agreed to engrave a copy of a picture in twenty-one months from the date of its receipt by him, having it in his possession at intervals as might be agreed upon for fourteen months for that purpose:—Held: "months" in this contract meant "lunar months," in the absence of evidence to the contrary, & such a work was not a mercantile transaction to bring it within the custom in the City of London, to construe the word "month" to mean "calendar month" in mercantile transactions.—Turner v. Barlow (1863), 3 F. & F. 946, N. P.

Annotation:—Refd. Bruner v. Moore, [1904] 1 Ch. 305.

17. —.]—In every contract, not being a contract relating to a mercantile transaction in the City of London, the word "month" primâ facie means lunar month, but the context or the surrounding circumstances may show that the word was not used to denote a lunar month, & it may then be construed as meaning a calendar month.—

beneficiary at a period of one year after the current year in which the trustor should die, & appointed the rents of the said two years to be applied in a particular manner:—Held: the words "current year" meant the year from Jan. 1, to Dec. 31, & not the agricultural year, with reference to which the rents were paid.—Williamson v. Hay (1855), 17 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 960; 27 Sc. Jur. 488.—SCOT.

HELISHAM-JONES v. HENNEN & Co. (1914), 81 L. J. Ch. 569; 112 L. T. 281; [1915] H. B. R. 167.

18. —.]—"Month" in law is, primâ facie, a lunar month or twenty-eight days, unless otherwise expressed. But, in mtge. transactions, a month means a calendar month.

By a mtge. dated Mar. 9, 1917, defts., as mtgors., conveyed certain lands in Cornwall containing about 500 acres, with the mines & minerals thereunder, to pltf. as mtgee. to secure £5,000 & interest at 8 per cent. The mtge. contained a provision that if interest were paid on every half-yearly day on which it was payable until Mar. 9, 1923, or within "twenty-eight days" after each such day, the mtgee. would not call it in, "provided also that in case a co. shall be formed with limited liability within six months of the declaration of peace, & which co. shall acquire the said premises," then the mtgee. would accept first mtge. debentures of the said co. for the £5,000 to be in full satisfaction & discharge of the principal moneys secured by the mtge. No interest on the mtge. had been paid since Mar. 1922. Within six calendar months of the Declaration of Peace, but some days after the expiration of six lunar months, a co. with limited liability was formed by defts. with a memorandum & articles duly registered & a capital of £10,000, divided into 100,000 shares of 2s. each, & defts. agreed to sell to the new co. the premises comprised in the mtge. of Mar. 9, 1917. Some three & a half years before the formation of this co. the remises & mines comprised in the mtge. had been entirely abandoned, certain of the plant & machinery sold, & the shafts filled up. Only £10 12s. of the capital of the co. had been paid up, & there was no ostensible business to be carried on. Pltf. claimed judgment for £5,000 an account, & in default of payment foreclosure. The defence was that there had been a compliance with the proviso in both respects:—Held: the transaction being one of mtge. was excepted from the rule at common law that "month" primâ facie meant lunar month, & further, apart from its being an exception to the rule, there was sufficient context in the mtge. deed to show that the six months referred to in the proviso for redemption meant six calendar months.—Schiller v. Petersen & Co., [1924] 1 Ch. 394; 93 L. J. Ch. 386; 130 L. T. 810; 40 T. L. R. 268; 68 Sol. Jo. 340, C. A.

(2) It is a question for the judge whether the context or the surrounding circumstances at the time the instrument was made show that calendar months were intended; but evidence that by the usage of a particular trade, business, or place, calendar months were intended, is for the jury.

(3) In an action by an auctioneer on a contract for payment of commission upon the sale of an estate, if the sale should be within two months after an auction:—Held: evidence of the conduct of the parties to the contract would not alone withdraw the construction of the word "months" from the judge; but evidence of the word "months" meaning in the trade of auctioneers calendar months, was to be left to the jury.—SIMPSON v. B. Effect of Custom and Usage.

31. General rule.]—In legal documents the primary meaning of month is lunar month. There is no general exception making it mean calendar month in commercial documents. It can only bear that meaning in cases where, according to the ordinary rules of construction of documents, a secondary meaning can be admitted. The belief or subsequent conduct of the parties cannot affect the construction, but an agreement to extend the time may be inferred from conduct which would make it inequitable to insist on the limit to lunar months.

In the construction of a document the meaning of "month" is lunar month except where a contrary custom of a trade or place be proved or a contrary intention appears either from the document to be construed or from surrounding contemporaneous circumstances.—BRUNER v. MOORE, [1904] 1 Ch. 305; 73 L. J. Ch. 377; 89 L. T. 738; 52 W. R. 295; 20 T. L. R. 125; 48 Sol. Jo. 131.

The word "month" was used in other articles:—Held: considering the circumstances, the word "month" with regard to the validity of a call, must be taken to mean a calendar month in

43. ———.]—A written agreement of tenancy of a public-house contained the clause: "Either party shall be at liberty to determine the tenancy hereby created upon giving to the other three months' previous notice in writing of his or their intention so to do expiring on any one of the days appointed as special transfer sessions by the justices of the district in which the said premises are situate." On Oct. 12, 1923, the landlords served on the tenant a notice to quit in these terms: "We hereby give you notice to quit & deliver up to us . . . on the earliest day your tenancy can legally be terminated by valid notice to quit given to you by us at the date of the service hereof all that," etc., naming the demised premises.

The justices of the district at the annual general meeting in Feb. 1923, had fixed Jan. 8, 1924, as a date of special transfer sessions. At the annual general meeting in Feb. 1924, Apr. 8, 1924, was fixed for special transfer sessions. If the words "three months" in the tenancy agreement meant lunar months, the earliest day on which the tenancy the terms "months" used therein, limiting the time for bringing an action for a loss, means calendar months.—POMARES v. PROVINCIAL INSURANCE Co. (1873), N. B. Dig. 432.—CAN.

41 v. ———.]—"Month" in an insurance policy in the form here in question, with provisions for payment of semi-annual premiums on named days of specific calendar months, means a calendar month.—MANUFACTURERS LIFE INSURANCE Co. v. GORDON (1892), 20 A. R. 309.—CAN.

could be terminated by a valid notice to quit given on Oct. 12, 1923, would be the earlier day fixed for the special transfer sessions—namely Jan. 8, 1924; but if the words “three months” meant three calendar months, Apr. 8, 1924, would be the earliest day. The landlords, notwithstanding that they had supplied the tenant with liquors after Jan. 8 in the belief that he was entitled to three calendar months’ notice to quit, brought an action for possession of the premises, alleging that the tenancy had been determined by a valid notice to quit expiring on Jan. 8:—Held: the expression “three months” in the tenancy agreement meant three lunar months.

As to the meaning of “month.” There is no doubt of the common law rule that primâ facie month means lunar month. It is stated in Coke & Blackstone; a large number of authorities for it are referred to in Norton on Deeds. A recent instance of its application is found in the judgment of FARWELL, J., in Bruner v. Moore, No. 31, ante. There are statutory exceptions, exceptions in the case of ecclesiastical documents, exceptions by custom mercantile, or otherwise, as in the case of notice to domestic servants. The relation of landlord & tenant has never been held to come within these exceptions. There may be an exception if the context or the surrounding circumstances at the time of making the contract show a contrary intention (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—PHIPPS (P.) & Co. v. ROGERS, [1925] 1 K. 56. Notice — Determination of agency.]—By a contract dated May 8, 1905, defts. agreed with a partnership firm that the firm should become deft.’s agents in a qualified sense, & that the benefit of the contract might be assigned by the firm to a limited co. to be formed to carry on the business of the firm on the memorandum & arts. of assocn. of the proposed co. being approved by defts. It was also by the contract agreed (inter alia) that the agreement thereby constituted between the parties should continue until Dec. 31, 1911, & should continue thereafter subject to determination by twelve months’ previous notice in writing by either side. On Nov. 2, 1910, defts. gave to the partnership firm written notice to determine the contract of agency on Dec. 31, 1911, which notice the firm refused to accept. By a second contract dated Dec. 5, 1910, & made between the firm, except one of the partners, who had previously died, & defts., & supplemental to the first contract, defts. agreed for a further period of seven years from the termination of the first contract to supply the firm with pianos on certain terms, & the parties agreed that the rights & liabilities under both contracts might be transferred by the firm to a limited co. formed to carry on the firm’s business, & stated that they were at the time of its execution unable to agree as to the date upon which the first contract determined, & that each of them reserved the right to have such date ascertained in the usual way, & the contract was entered into without prejudice. The first contract was not otherwise varied. On Jan. 24, 1911, the firm was formed into a limited co., pl’ts. in the action, & by an agreement of Jan. 28, 1911, made between the members of the partnership firm & pl’ts., the members agreed to sell to pl’ts. 57. — Determination of right to use patent.]—On Oct. 9, 1914, a full, sole & exclusive licence was granted under a patent during the term & any extended term thereof subject to the following provision for revocation: “Each party to this agreement shall be at liberty upon giving notice in writing before June 30, 1917, to the other party to determine these presents upon Dec. 31, 1917, & these presents shall thereupon cease & determine. Either party shall further be entitled at any time after the said June 30, 1917, to determine these presents upon giving six months' notice in writing of its intention so to do.” The licensors by letter dated Dec. 24, 1919, posted in the United States, purported to give notice to determine the licence. This letter was received by the licencees on Jan. 6, 1920. The licencees brought an action for a declaration (inter alia) that this purported notice of determination of the licence was wholly void & inoperative & that the licence had not been determined thereby or at all & remained binding on first-named defts. Upon delivery of the statement of claim & before delivery of the defences defts. obtained an order under R. S. C., Ord. 34, r. 2, to the effect that the question of law whether the said licence was determined by the said letter & if so, on what date, should be set down to be argued before the ct. & that all other proceedings in the action should be stayed until after the determination of such question. When the case came on for argument the points argued were, first, whether the words “six months” in the clause of the licence quoted above meant lunar months or calendar months, & secondly, whether, on the construction of the letter, it was a notice to determine the licence on July 1, 1920:—Held: having regard to the context “six months” meant six calendar months & the letter was a notice to determine the licence on July 1, 1920, & was not a good notice.—*ERITH ENGINEERING CO., LTD. v. SUB-SECT. 2.—COMPUTATION OF CALENDAR MONTH.

66. From day on which computation commences —To day of corresponding number “in ensuing month.”]—The proper mode of computing a calendar month, where the computation commences in the course of a month, is, to reckon from the day on which such computation commences to the day of the corresponding number in the next ensuing month. Where, therefore, notice of action was required to be given, under Limitations of Actions & Costs Act, 1842 (c. 97), s. 4, “one calendar month at least” before the action was commenced, & the notice having been given on Apr. 28, the writ was issued on May 29, it was held that the notice was sufficient.—*FREEMAN v. Pursuant to his sentence he was detained in custody until Dec. 14:—Held: the detention was lawful, for as the calendar month did not expire until Nov. 30, he was not entitled to be discharged from the second term of imprisonment, until the full period of fourteen days' computed from Dec. 1 had expired.—*MIGOTTI v. The record of his conviction, upon which no adjournments were entered, stated that he was convicted at the assizes held on the 19th:—Held: pltf. did not contradict the record by showing that the assignor was not, in fact, convicted till the 24th, for that the 19th, as used in the record, was a legal phrase for a period which might comprehend several natural days, & the ct. would take notice of a fraction of that period for the purpose of supporting the assignment.—*WHITAKER v. A cheque was handed to the company on May 10; the person who brought it was directed to pay it into the co.'s bankers, & was furnished with an authority to them to receive it; he arrived a few minutes after banking hours, but it was duly paid in the next day:—Held: the evening of May 10 meant any time before sunset, & not the end of the usual banking hours.—Re QUEBRADA CO., LTD., CLARKE'S CASE (1873), 42 L. 73. Dally—Whether Sundays included.]—By the South Metropolitan Gas Co.'s special Acts of 1869, & 1876 provision was made for the public testing of the quality of the gas supplied by them to their customers. The mode of testing & the situation & number of the testing places, which were to be provided by the co. & to be under the control of the Metropolitan Board of Works, whose powers subsequently became vested in plffs., the London County Council, were to be prescribed by gas referees appointed by the Board of Trade, & "daily" testings were to be made by gas examiners appointed by the Metropolitan Board.

Similar provisions were contained in the special Acts of the other metropolitan gas cos. By an Act passed in 1880, which was applicable to all the metropolitan gas cos., the provisions as to "daily" testings were substantially re-enacted by a sect. which provided that a gas examiner should, at each testing place, "make daily" such number of tests as the gas referees should prescribe. Other sects gave the Metropolitan Board, as "the controlling authority," the control & management of the testing places.

There was also a provision in the Act of 1869, which was to be read with the Act of 1880, defining "day" as twenty-four hours, beginning at 9 o'clock in the forenoon of one day & ending at 9 o'clock in the forenoon of the next. The practice under these Acts until 1902 had been to test on week days only:—Held: the words "daily" in the Act of 1880 must be construed literally, as including Sundays, & the previous practice under that & the earlier Acts was not sufficient to justify the ct. in departing from that literal construction; & accordingly, the gas examiners appointed by the London County Council were entitled to test on Sundays the gas supplied by the co.—*LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. 74. "Any working day"—Exclusion of Sundays & holidays.—In 1884 a local authority, the predecessors in title of defts., were empowered by a special Act to construct a reservoir, & for that purpose to divert a stream, which fed a watercourse that flowed for some distance across plff.'s lands & supplied a co., his lessees, with water for the purposes of their works. Sect. 8 of the Act provided that the local authority should permit "the owners, lessees, & occupiers" of the works to take compensation water along the watercourse not exceeding a specified quantity "during any working day," & imposed liability to damages on the local board if they failed to permit the due quantity of compensation water to flow into the watercourse. In 1890 the co. ceased to use their works & subsequently dismantled them & surrendered their lease to plff. Meanwhile the watercourse gradually fell into disuse & great disrepair, its banks became broken down in places, so that the water escaped & did not reach the site of the works; & in 1909 defts. diverted the stream & prevented water from flowing into the watercourse. In an action by plff. claiming a declaration of his right to the compensation water under the Act & an injunction to restrain defts. from diverting or interfering with the flow of water to the watercourse:—Held: "any working days" meant the days of the week other than Sundays & holidays.—HANBURY v. LLANFRECHFA UPPER URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1911), 75 J. P. 307; 9 L. G. R. 360.

To bring this case within Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7), we must pronounce that either D. or H. worked within their ordinary callings on the Sunday. The co. having obtained an Act of Parliament authorising their directors to agree with the proprietors of any shares or stock for the conversion thereof into tickets of admission for life or years for such proprietor or his nominee, but providing that nothing therein contained should relieve the co. from any condition contained in the charter, advertisements were issued by the directors, offering to accept the surrender of shares in exchange for tickets of admission for a term limited, to be made out to bearer, & to be available for Sundays as well as ordinary days:—Held: the admission of any person on Sunday by means of such a ticket as proposed would occasion a forfeiture of the co.'s charter; & upon bill filed by a shareholder, the co. was restrained from accepting a surrender of any shares in exchange for such tickets of admission.—*RENDALL v. The price, which was above £10, was then specified, & B. warranted the horse to be sound. It was not delivered, however, until the following Tuesday, when the money was paid:—Held: (1) there was not any complete contract until the delivery of the horse, & consequently that the contract was not void within Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7), s. 2; (2) assuming it to be void, the purchaser having no knowledge of the fact that the vendor was exercising his ordinary calling on the Sunday, had not been guilty of any breach of the law, & therefore was entitled to recover back the price of the horse.—*BLOXSOME v. Sale by agent.]—On an information under Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7), it was proved that at 1.20 p.m. on Sunday, May 13, 1906, several persons went to applt.'s shop & purchased oranges, sweets & eggs. At 1.30 p.m. a child purchased some currants & a youth tobacco. A police constable who was watching went into the shop & saw a young man, who was in charge of the shop, & the latter made a communication to him about applt. The young man was a railway clerk, & was seventeen years of age. The shop remained open until 10 p.m. He saw applt. on May 14, 1906, on the subject, & he replied that he was doing nothing wrong so long as he himself kept away from the shop. In cross-examination the witness said that applt., in addition to the shop where he carries on business as a grocer & general dealer, was a beer retailer at Barnsley. He was also a cycle repairer. n. Sale of timber.]—Where A. had received money on an agreement to deliver timber to B. which he afterwards refused to deliver, & was sued by B. to recover the money back, it is no defence to show that the agreement was made on a Sunday, & there-wordly labour, business, or work of their ordinary calling on the Lord's Day, & subjects parties offending to a penalty:—Held: this statute only prohibits labour, business, or work done in the course of a man's ordinary calling, & therefore, a contract of hiring made on a Sunday between a farmer & a labourer for a year, was valid, & a service under it conferred a settlement.—R. v. WHITNASH (INHABITANTS) (1827), 7 B. & C. 596; 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 452; 1 Man. & Ry. M. C. 177; 6 L. J. O. S. M. C. 26; 108 E. R. 845.

110. Solicitor—Undertaking liability for client.]—An attorney is not within Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7), s. 1, which prohibits certain persons from doing any work of their ordinary calling on the Lord's Day.

An attorney who acting on behalf of his client agrees to become personally responsible for part of the debt owing by the client does not thereby do any work of his ordinary calling within the meaning of that Act.—*PEATE v. 111. Farmer—Letting out stallion to cover mare.]—Pltf. sent a mare to deft. a farmer, to be covered by a stallion belonging to him; the contract was performed on a Sunday. Deft. afterwards claimed to detain the mare until he was paid a sum of money, which consisted of the fee due on that occasion, & also of other moneys due to deft. on the general account:—Held: (1) deft. was entitled to a lien for the costs of covering the mare; (2) this was not a contract within Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7), s. 1, it not being made in the exercise of deft.'s ordinary calling; & even if it were, the contract having been executed, the lien would attach; (3) the claim by deft. to retain the mare in respect of two sums, for one of which the lien could not be supported, was not a waiver of his lien as to the other, nor did it dispense with the necessity of a tender of that sum.

If the contract is executed, & a property either special or general has passed thereby, the property must remain; & on that ground also, this lien would be supported, though it were or might have been illegal to have performed this operation on a Sunday (PARKE, B.).—*SCARFE v. Applt. was convicted under Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7). The chief constable gave a verbal consent before the information was laid, & gave consent in writing after the information was laid & the summons issued:—Held: the prosecution was instituted when the information was laid, & therefore was not instituted with the consent in writing of the chief constable, & the conviction was bad.—*THORPE v. 119. — Consent by superintendent—Validity.]—In the county & city of Kingston-upon-Hull a superintendent of police was in fact in chief command of the police in the police district during the temporary absence of the chief constable. He consented to the institution of a prosecution against a person for an offence alleged to have been committed by him under Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7). At Kingston-upon-Hull there is no office of deputy chief constable :—Held : the superintendent of police had no power to give the consent, inasmuch as Sunday Observation Prosecution Act, 1871 (c. 87), refers to the "chief officer of police" as a person designated by name, & the superintendent of police did not necessarily come within the definition of that expression contained in the Act.—*R. v. 120. Conviction for more than one offence on same day—Validity.]—A person can commit but one offence on the same day, by "exercising his ordinary calling on a Sunday," contrary to Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7). If a justice of peace proceeded to convict him in more than one penalty for the same day, it is an excess of jurisdiction for which an action will lie, before the convictions are quashed.—CREPPS v. DURDEN (1777), 2 Cowp. 640 ; 98 E. R. 1283.

Applt. managed the business in the absence of her husband. 188. Computation of time in criminal matter—Same as in civil matter.]—The same rules govern the computation of periods of time whether the statute limiting the period deals with civil or criminal matters.—RADCLIFFE v. BARTHOLOMEW, [1892] 1 Q. B. 161; 61 L. J. M. C. 63; 65 L. T. 677; 56 J. P. 262; 40 W. R. 63; 36 Sol. Jo. 43; sub nom. RATCLIFFE v. BARTHOLOMEW, 8 T. L. R. 43, D. C.

189. Method of computation—No general rule.]—No general rule exists for the computation of time either under Bankruptcy Act, 1890 (c. 71), or any other statute, or, indeed, where time is mentioned in a contract, & the rational mode of computation is to have regard in each case to the purpose for which the computation is to be made. . . . To say that by the common law a part of a day is the whole of a day is to say something which is contrary to the truth (LORD ESHER, M.R.).

It is contended that the old authorities show that formerly, when time had to be computed from the doing of an act, the first day, that is the day on which the act was done, was included, & that that rule is applicable to the present case. But it has been shown from subsequent cases that there is no such universal rule, & that in the reckoning of time each case must rely on its own circumstances & subject-matter (A. L. SMITH, L.J.).—Re NORTH, Ex p. HASLUCK, [1895] 2 Q. B. 264; 64 L. J. Q. B. 694; 59 J. P. 724; 11 T. L. R. 417; 39 Sol. Jo. 560; 2 Mans. 326; 14 R. 436; sub nom. Re NORTH, Ex p. PARKINSON, 72 L. 203. ———.]—No general rule in computing time from an act or an event, that the day is to be inclusive or exclusive; depending on the reason of the thing according to the circumstances.

It is not necessary to lay down any general rule upon this subject: but upon technical reasoning I rather think, it would be more easy to maintain, that the day of an act done, or an event happening, ought in all cases to be excluded, than that it should in all cases be included. Our law rejects fractions of a day more generally than the civil law does. The effect is to render the day a sort of indivisible point; so that any act done in the compass of it, is no more referable to any one, than to any other, portion of it; but the act & the day are co-extensive; & therefore the act cannot properly be said to be passed, until the day is passed (GRANT, M.R.).—*LESTER v. According to the earlier authorities on this subject, whenever a period of time was to be computed from an act done, & not from a particular day, the day on which the act was done was reckoned inclusive. The point may now be considered as settled by a course of recent decisions, all proceeding upon the same principle, that the day from which the computation is made ought, in cases like the present, to be excluded (PAIRKE, B.).

Where there is given to a party a certain space of time to do some act, which space of time is included between two other acts to be done by another person, both the days of doing those acts ought to be excluded, in order to ensure to him the whole of that space of time (ALDERSON, B.).—YOUNG v. Garland, No. 203, ante, & Pellew v. Wonford (Inhabitants), No. 209, ante, were cited in the argument, & are those alone which it will be necessary to notice. In the former case, this distinction was taken by the Master of the Rolls, which gets rid of the difficulties in many of the cases : if the act done be an act to which the party against whom the time is to run, is privy, then the day on which it is done is to be included ; otherwise, it is excluded. The Master of the Rolls points out this distinction as reconciling many of the cases ; but he does not treat it as a binding rule in all instances : it prevails, however, in general (BAYLEY, J.).—HARDY v. 243. —.—What is reasonable notice to the indorser of non-payment by the drawer of a promissory note, or acceptor of a bill of exchange, is a question of law.

It is of dangerous consequence to lay it down as a general rule, that the jury should judge of the reasonableness of time. It ought to be settled as a question of law (ASHHURST, J.).—TINDAL v. BROWN (1786), 1 Term Rep. 167; 99 E. R. 1033; affd., 2 Term Rep. 186, Ex. Ch.

244. —.—The question of reasonable time is a mixed question of law & fact. A declaration in assumpsit against defts., for non-payment of such costs, alleged that they were taxed in a reasonable time after the making of the agreement, of which defts. had notice, & were requested to pay the amount, but that they had not paid it, & it still remained unpaid to pltf. Defts. pleaded, that the costs were not taxed in a reasonable time after the making of the agreement; on which traverse an issue was joined, & found for defts.:—Held: the question, whether such reasonable time had elapsed, was a question for the decision of the jury, & not of the judge.—*BURTON v. C. "Immediately."

260. Meaning of "immediately" — Whether all intermediate terms excluded.—The word immediately, although in strictness it excludes all mean times, yet to make good the deeds & intents of parties it shall be construed such convenient time as is reasonably requisite for doing the thing (per CUR.).—PYBUS v. 262. — Promptly according to circumstances.]—The word "immediately" is to be taken to mean promptly & expeditiously, according to the circumstances of the case.

Deft., on Thursday, May 2, was summarily convicted of an offence under 6 Geo. 4, c. 129, sect. 12 of which directs that the execution of the judgment shall be suspended in case deft. shall immediately enter into recognisance with sureties, etc. He was taken off some distance to gaol in execution of the sentence the same day. On Saturday, his attorney was ready to tender sufficient sureties for him, but no justices sat on that day. On the following Monday the sureties, were tendered & rejected, as being offered too late. Upon an application to this ct. for a rule calling upon the justices to take such recognisances:—Held: the word "immediately" is to be taken to mean "promptly according to the circumstances of the case," & he had come promptly according to the circumstances of this case.—*R. v. 263. — — — — —]—By Licencing Act, 1872 (c. 94), s. 52, an appeal is given to a person aggrieved by an order or conviction made by a ct. of summary jurisdiction, & by sub-sect. 3 the applt. is required "immediately after" giving notice of appeal to the sessions against the order or conviction to enter into a recognisance to try the appeal, etc.:—Held: the question whether an applt. had duly complied with the requirements of the sect. was one of fact to be determined by the sessions, having regard to all the circumstances of the case. The word "immediately" means the same thing as "forthwith," & implies prompt action & as speedy as the circumstances reasonably admit of.—R. v. BERKSHIRE J.J. (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 469; 48 L. J. M. C. 137; 27 W. R. 798; sub nom. Ex p. TUCK, 43 J. P. 607.

264. — — — — —]—Juries Act, 1825 (c. 50), s. 34, provides that the person or party who shall apply for a special jury shall pay all the expenses occasioned thereby without having any further allowance for the same on taxation than he would be entitled to, if the case had been tried by a common jury; "unless the judge before whom the cause is tried shall, immediately after the verdict, certify, under his hand, upon the back of the record, that the same was a cause proper to be tried by a special jury."

On Jan. 27, 1913, an action was tried with a special jury. The verdict was for pltf. upon one issue & for defts. upon another. Judgment was given for pltf. for a fixed sum with the costs of one issue. Each party was ordered to pay the costs of the issue on which they had failed, & an account which was not opposed, was directed. No certificate for a special jury was then asked for or given. On Apr. 24, 1913, on an application relating to the account, defts.' counsel applied for a certificate, & the judge gave it:—Held: the judge had not certified in time, for the word "immediately," must be construed literally, unless special circumstances prevented the certificate being made or applied for at the trial or the judge expressly reserved his decision on the point, & in either of such cases it should be applied for at the first reasonable opportunity.

There is no doubt that the word "immediately" has been construed & may in my judgment be construed to mean as immediately as the circumstances permit (KENNEDY, L.J.).—BARKER v. LEWIS & PEAT, [1913] 3 K. B. 34; 82 L. J. K. B. 843; 108 L. T. 941; 29 T. L. R. 565; 57 Sol. Jo. 577, C. A.

265. — Must be construed reasonably.]—PYBUS v. MITFORD, No. 260, ante.

266. — — — — —]—In an action by the consignees of goods against shipowner for non-delivery of goods according to bills of lading, in which there was a condition that the goods should be taken from the ship by the consignees immediately the ship was ready for discharge, & that otherwise they would be landed or put into craft at the merchant's risk & expense, & the goods having been landed at a dock the day after the ship was ready for discharge, but after the consignees were ready to receive on payment of freight, & the goods having been detained for some time for dock charges, payment of which was refused:—Held: it was for the jury whether the consignees had complied with the condition, or whether, if not, deft. had gone beyond it in landing the goods, but, even if pltf. were entitled to recover, yet they might have received the goods on payment of a small sum under protest, they would not be entitled to recover full damages for the delay, as their proper course was to have paid the disputed sum under protest, & then sued to recover it.

When a man is called upon by a contract to do an act, & no time is specified, he is allowed a reasonable time for doing it; & what is a reasonable time may depend on all the circumstances of the case. But here the word used being "immediately" it implies that there is a more stringent requisition than what is ordinarily implied in the word "reasonable." Still it must receive a reasonable interpretation, so far that it cannot be considered as imposing an obligation to do what is impossible. . . . The term "immediately" must be taken to mean, that whenever the ship is ready to discharge, the merchant must be there with his craft ready to receive the cargo. . . . This condition is inserted in cases of consignments of cargoes perishable in their nature, such as fruit, & requiring to be cleared quickly. . . . & the shipowner or master cannot know to whom the bills of lading have been assigned. . . . it is not unreasonable in such cases, that the merchant, making use of such means as he may have for hearing of the arrivals of vessels, should be bound to get his papers & his entries passed, & have his craft ready alongside the ship when she is ready to discharge (COCKBURN, C.J.).—ALEXIADI v. ROBINSON (1861), 2 F. & F. 679.

267. — In statute.]—A cause was tried by a special jury at the Spring Assizes, 1855, & a verdict found for deft. Deft.'s counsel then asked the judge to certify for the special jury, & he consented, but the associate omitted to indorse the certificate on the record. In the following term, a rule nisi was obtained for a new trial, which was not disposed of until Trinity Vacation. On taxation of costs it was discovered that the certificate was not indorsed on the record, & on application to the judge on Aug. 14, he signed the certificate:—Held: the certificate was too late, & the ct. set it aside.

When a statute requires an act to be done immediately, I do not see how we can construe it to mean that the act may be done some weeks afterwards (POLLOCK, C.B.).—LEECH v. LAMB (1855), 11 Exch. 437; 25 L. J. Ex. 17; 26 L. T. O. S. 107; 1 Jur. N. S. 1175; 156 E. R. 902; sub nom. LEACH v. LAMB, 4 W. R. 99.

268. "Immediately afterwards."]—In an action on the case for a nuisance to pltf.'s market, which was the last cause tried at an assizes, the verdict was found for pltf. with nominal damages, & the judge thereupon immediately adjourned the ct. to his lodgings, & quitted the ct. No application was made in ct. for a certificate under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 24, that the action was brought to try a right; but pltf.'s counsel followed the judge to his lodgings, & there, within a quarter of an hour after the delivery of the verdict, obtained from him such certificate:—Held: it was well given.

In strict construction, the words "immediately afterwards" exclude the lapse of any interval of time, but their meaning, with reference to a case like the present, must be, that the certificate shall be granted as speedily as conveniently can be (ROLFE, B.).—THOMPSON v. GIBSON (1841), 8 M. & W. 281; 9 Dowl. 717; 10 L. J. Ex. 241; 5 Jur. 390; 151 E. R. 1045.

Construing the words "immediately afterwards" as meaning within a reasonable time for the purpose, it would be contrary to the fact to say that the certificate in this case was given immediately afterwards (WILLES, J.).—*FORSDIKE v. 279. “From & after”—In Provisional Order.—By a Provisional Order under Electric Lighting Acts, confirmed by Electric Lighting Orders Confirmation Act, 1892 (cc. xix), which received the Royal assent on June 27, 1892, debt. co. were authorised to carry on an electric undertaking in Sheffield. The Order contained an option for the corpn. within forty-two years to purchase the undertaking “upon the terms of issuing or transferring to the undertakers such an amount of Sheffield Corpn. stock as will produce by the interest or dividends thereon an annuity of 5 per cent. per annum upon the sum properly expended by the undertakers upon the undertaking & chargeable to capital account.” This option was subject to a proviso for payment of an additional sum if the option were exercised within ten years, & alternative options were given to the corpn. to purchase for a capital sum if the power were not exercised until after twenty-one years or thirty-one years respectively.

Under the Sheffield Corporation Acts, 1883 & 1888 the corpn. had power to issue irredeemable or redeemable stock.

By a Provisional Order under the Public Health Act, confirmed by an Act which received the Royal assent on the same June 27, the power to issue irredeemable stock was repealed.

The two Provisional Orders contained provisions that they should come into operation, the first-mentioned “on the day” the last-mentioned “from & after the day,” upon which they received the Royal assent.

The corpn. gave notice to purchase. The co. refused to sell on the ground that the corpn. were bound to issue irredeemable stock, & had no power to do it. The corpn. brought this action for specific performance:—Held: the Provisional Order under the Electric Lighting Act came into operation on the day of, & the Order under the Public Health Act the day after, the Royal assent, but, even if they came into operation on the same day, they could not be construed together so as to give or reserve to the corpn. a power to issue irredeemable stock for the purpose of this purchase.—*SHEFFIELD CORPN. v. In our former judgment, we said that "not less than fifteen days" meant fifteen days, one exclusive & one inclusive; but upon looking at 13 Car. 2, st. 2, c. 2, s. 6, which recites that, in actions commenced by original writs, it was necessary that there should be "fifteen days at the least" between the day of the teste & the return of the writ, we think the words in Uniformity of Process Act, 1832 (c. 39), must be construed to mean fifteen full days (PARKE, B.).—*CHAMBERS v. 291. — —.]—A local Act required seven days' notice at least to be given by an applt. of his intention to bring an appeal. Notice was served on Dec. 31. The sessions commenced on Jan. 7, on which day appeals were entered, but not heard till a subsequent day:—Held: (1) the notice was insufficient, as both the day of giving the notice, & the day of holding the sessions, must be excluded: & the day of bringing an appeal is the day on which it is entered, not that on which it is heard; (2) the fraction of a day cannot be taken into consideration in such a case.

If this question were to be considered now for the first time, I should be disposed to doubt whether by the words, "seven days' notice at least," more was meant than that seven days should be the shortest notice, but that more might be given if the party pleased; but it has been so frequently decided that the words "at least" have the effect of excluding the day of the notice, as well as the day of the act of which notice is given, that it seems to me too late now to raise the question, & that we must abide by what has been so frequently decided. . . . It was contended that the fraction of a day might be considered, & that the notice might be calculated from the hour of the day on which it was served; but there is no authority for such a proposition as applicable to cases like the present. In all such cases the general rule excluding fractions of a day from the computation of time has been applied, & great inconvenience might follow if it were not so. Where the question is which of two acts, or conflicting rights, shall take precedence of the other, the precise time, including fractions of a day, must necessarily be inquired into (WIGHTMAN, J.).—*R. v. The words upon which that decision was based are the nearest to be found in the authorities to those which we have to construe in the present case, & we therefore come to the conclusion that the provision that "not less than seven days" notice has to be given means "seven clear days" notice, & we so answer the question (per CUR.).—*R. v. The peremptory order is only the expression of the then opinion of the judge; but it is not absolutely final; neither does it import any undertaking or contract on the part of deft. 325. Whether Sunday included.—The days between the Thursday before & the Wednesday after Easter Day are to be reckoned in the computation of such fifteen days [fifteen days under Uniformity of Process Act, 1832 (c. 39), s. 3].

I quite agree that the intention of the legislature cannot have been to exclude those days altogether. The justices decided against the party, who, being dissatisfied, sent the justices a written notice demanding a case to be stated by the justices under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43. The justices stated the case & sent it to G. on Thursday, who the next day forwarded it to the London attorneys. The latter deposited the case in the office of the ct. on the Monday following:—Held: G. had presumably authority to receive the case for applt., & as the case had not been transmitted to the ct. within three days after it had been received the provisions of sect. 2 of the above-mentioned statute had not been complied with, & consequently the appeal must be struck out.

The decision in the Ct. of Common Pleas [*Peacock v. 380. ——— Issue of writ & registration of copyright.]—The issue of a writ on the same day but subsequently to the registration of a copyright sufficiently complies with Copyright Act, 1842 (c. 45), s. 24, to enable the person making the registration to bring an action for infringement.

The registration was made at half past one o'clock on Mar. 9 & on the same day, but at a later hour, the writ was issued. It was said that the ct. would not take account of a fraction of a day. Unless obliged by some authority to hold that, in a matter of this kind, the ct. cannot divide a day into fractions, I shall decline to come to a conclusion so manifestly absurd. The entry at Stationers' Hall having been made before the writ was issued, although on the same day, the requirement of the Act has been thereby satisfied (KAY, J.).—WARNE v. LAWRENCE (1886), 54 L. T. 371; 34 W. R. 452; 2 T. L. R. 427.

381. ——— Rule to arbitrators to state case—Publication of award.]—It is unnecessary to determine whether the rule that a judicial act must be regarded as dating from the first moment of the day on which it is done would apply to such an order as that under consideration, or whether it would be sufficient cause for not making the order absolute if it were shown that the award, though bearing the same date, was in fact signed before the order nisi was made. I can entertain no doubt that where an order nisi has been obtained by a party who has no notice of an award having been made, it is for those who contest it to show that the award was executed prior to the order being made (LORD HERSHELL).—TABERNACLE PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. In general when a judgment is entered up in the

Therefore, where judgment was signed at the opening of the office at its usual hour, eleven a.m., & deft. died at half past nine a.m. on the same morning:—Held: the judgment was regular.—WRIGHT v. MILLS (1859), 4 H. & N. 488; 28 L. J. Ex. 223; 33 L. T. O. S. 152; 5 Jur. N. S. 771; 7 W. R. 498.

391. What are judicial proceedings—Delivery of pleadings.]—A declaration entitled generally of the term, relates to the first day of the term: & the promises & the breach, being laid on the first day of the term, may be presumed to have been made before the delivery of the declaration, because by a reference to the ancient practice of declaring ore tenus, the declaration cannot be supposed to have been delivered till the sitting of the ct. on that day.

Here, however, the question is not concerning a judicial proceeding, for the delivery of the declaration is the act of the party (BULLER, J.).—PUGH v. ROBINSON (1786), 1 Term Rep. 116; 99 E. R. 1004.

392. Issue of writ.]—To issue a writ of summons is not a judicial act, & the ct. may inquire at what period of the day it was issued. It appeared from the statement of claim that the writ of summons in the action was issued on July 2, & that the cause of action arose on the same day, but before the issue of the writ. The statement of claim was demurred to on the ground that the issuing of the writ was a judicial act, & must, therefore, be presumed to have taken place at the earliest moment of the day, before the cause of action accrued:—Held: the ct. could inquire whether or not the writ was in fact issued after the cause of action accrued.—*CLARKE v. Part I.—Nature of Torts.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1. Refusal or failure to perform duty imposed by law.]—If the law casts any duty upon a person which he refuses or fails to perform, he is answerable in damages to those whom his refusal or failure injures. If several are jointly bound to perform the duty, they are liable, jointly & severally, for the failure & refusal.—FERGUSON v. KINNOULL (EARL) (1842), 9 Cl. & Fin. 251; 4 State Tr. N. S. 785; 8 E. 2. —.]—Pltfs., merchants at Valparaiso, received through defts. a telegram purporting to come from London & addressed to them, ordering a large shipment of barley. No such message was ever in fact sent to pltfs. The misdelivery of the message was caused by the negligence of defts., & occasioned heavy loss, to pltfs., in consequence of a fall in the market price of barley. In an action to recover the amount of this loss:—Held: there was no duty owing by defts. to pltfs. in the matter, by contract or law, & therefore no action lie.—DICKSON v. REUTER'S TELEGRAM CO. [1899], 3 C. P. D. 1; 37 L. T. 370; 42 J. P. 308; 26 W. R. 23, C. A.; sub nom. DIXON v. REUTER'S TELEGRAPH CO., LTD., 47 L. J. Q. B. 1.

Sect. 1.—In general. Sect. 2: Sub-sects. 1 & 2.]

3. —.]—A tenant of an unfurnished house, under a verbal agreement which contained no term as to repairs, gave notice to quit. In consideration of the withdrawal of the notice the landlord promised the wife of the tenant, acting as agent for her husband, to repair a dangerous defect on the premises, but failed to do so within a reasonable time. The wife of the tenant afterwards sustained injury by reason of the defect. In an action by the husband & wife to recover damages for the injury sustained by the wife, the landlord denied the promise to repair:—Held: the wife could not maintain the action in tort, since there was in the circumstances no duty owing to her by the landlord for the neglect of which she was entitled to recover.—CAVALIER v. POPE, [1905] 2 K. B. 757; 74 L. J. K. B. 857; 93 L. T. 473; 54 W. R. 68; 21 T. L. R. 747; 49 Sol. Jo. 712, C. A.; affd., [1906] A. C. 428, H. L.

4. Not continuous cause of action.—Pltf. who had obtained damages in the county ct. for a misrepresentation under which he had been induced to enter into a contract, brought an action in the High Ct. for further damages accrued since judgment in the county ct.:—Held: a tort not being a continuing cause of action, no further damages could be obtained.—CLARKE v. YORKE (1882), 52 L. J. Ch. 32; 47 L. T. 381; 31 W. R. 62.

5. Infringement of personal right.—In the case of damage occasioned by a wrongful act, though such as the law esteems an injury, malice is not a necessary ingredient to the maintenance of an action.

It is essential to an action in tort that the act complained of should be legally wrongful as regards the party complaining, i.e. it must prejudicially affect him in some legal right. The fact that it will, however directly, do him harm in his interests is not enough.—ROGERS v. RAJENDRO DUTT (1860), 13 Moo. P. C. C. 209; 8 Moo. Ind. App. 103; 25 J. P. 3; 9 W. R. 149; 15 E. 6. —.]—All personal wrong means the infringement of some personal right. . . . Intentionally to do that which is calculated in the ordinary course of events to damage, & which does, in fact, damage another in that other person's property or trade, is actionable if done without just cause or excuse. Such intentional action when done without just cause or excuse is what the law calls a malicious wrong.

It is urged on the part of pltf., that even if the acts complained of would not be wrongful had they been committed by a single individual, they become actionable when they are the result of concerted action among several. In other words, pltf., it is contended, have been injured by an illegal conspiracy. Of the general proposition, that certain kinds of conduct not criminal in any one individual may become criminal if done by combination among several, there can be no doubt. The distinction is based on sound reason, for a combination may make oppressive or dangerous that which if it proceeded only from a single person would be otherwise, & the very fact of the combination may show that the object is simply to do harm, & not to exercise one's own just rights. In the application of this undoubted principle it is necessary to be very careful not to press the doctrine of illegal conspiracy beyond that which is necessary for the protection of individuals or of the public; & it may be observed in passing that as a rule it is the damage wrongfully done, & not the conspiracy, that is the gist of actions on the case for conspiracy. . . . But what is the definition of an illegal combination? It is an agreement by one or more to do an unlawful act, or to do a lawful act by unlawful means (BOWEN, L.J.).—MOGUL S.S. Co. v. MCGREGOR, GOW & Co. (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 598; 58 L. J. Q. B. 465; 61 L. T. 820; 53 J. P. 709; 37 W. R. 756; 5 T. L. R. 658; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 455, C. A.

SECT. 2.—DISTINCTION BETWEEN ACTIONS OF TORT AND ACTIONS OF CONTRACT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

8. Depends on facts of case—Not on form of action.—(1) An action founded on the common law liability of a bailee is an action founded on tort within County Courts Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 116.

(2) The question whether an action falls within the one class or the other depends on the facts of the case not on the form in which the action is brought (RIGBY, L.J.).

(3) Where such a relation [bailor & bailee] is established the result of the cases appear to be that if the pltf. can maintain his action by showing the breach of a duty arising at common law out of that relation he is not obliged to rely on a contract within the meaning of the rule; but if his cause of action is that deft. ought to have done something or taken some precaution which would not be embraced by the common law liability arising out of the relation of bailor & bailee then he is obliged to rely on a contract within the meaning of the rule (COLLINS, L.J.).—TURNER v. STALLIBRASS, [1898] 1 Q. B. 56; 67 L. J. Q. B. 52; 77 L. T. 482; 46 W. R. 81; 42 Sol. Jo. 65, C. A.

11. Action of detinue.]—Qu.: whether the action of detinue is within the operation of County Courts Act, 1846 (c. 95). If so, semble, it is an action on contract & not of tort; & the county ct. has, therefore, exclusive jurisdiction in such an action to the extent of £20.—HAND v. DANIELS (1850), 1 L. M. & P. 420; Rob. L. & W. 490; Cox, M. & H. 343; 15 L. T. O. S. 206; 14 J. P. 434; 14 Jur. 722.

12. ———.]—In an action claiming the return of a picture or its value & damages for its detention, pltf. recovered a verdict of £10, being its value as assessed by the jury, & 1s. damages for its detention:—Held: the action was founded on tort, within County Courts Act, 1867 (c. 142), s. 5, & pltf. were entitled to their costs.—BRYANT v. HERBERT (1878), 3 C. P. D. 389; 47 L. J. Q. B. 670; 39 L. T. 17; 43 J. P. 52; 26 W. R. 898, C. A.

13. ———.]—Pltf. brought an action in the High Ct. to recover from defts. certain drawings that had been deposited with them as agents for sale, & damages for their detention & he claimed also an account in respect of such of the drawings as had been sold, & the amount that might be proved to be due on the taking of the account. Defts. pleaded that they had always been ready & willing to return the drawings in their possession, & offered to return them forthwith on obtaining a proper receipt. Pltf. replied accepting the offer to return the drawings, & they were accordingly returned to him. They were of the value of £20 & upwards. The action went to trial on the question of the amount due from defts. in respect of the drawings that had been sold, & resulted in a verdict for pltf. for £33:—Held: pltf. was entitled to costs on the High Ct. scale on the ground that the action being one of detinue in which pltf.

had recovered the things claimed in specie, it was not within the class of actions founded on tort to which County Courts Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 116 (2) applies.—DU PASQUIER v. CADBURY, JONES & Co., LTD., [1903] 1 K. B. 104; 72 L. J. K. B. 78; 87 L. T. 519; 51 W. R. 113; 19 T. L. R. 41; 47 Sol. Jo. 49, C. A.

15. Action for negligence—Against bailee.]—A declaration stated that pltf., at deft.'s request, delivered to deft., then being a livery stable keeper, a horse of pltf., to be by him taken due & proper care of, & to be kept in a separate stall in deft.'s stable, for reward to deft. to be paid by pltf. in that behalf. Deft. accepted the care & custody of the said horse upon the terms aforesaid: yet he would not take due & proper, or any, care thereof, or keep it in a separate stall, & by means of the premises the horse was so kicked by other horses that it became of no value to pltf. Deft. pleaded "not guilty"; & at the trial a verdict was found for pltf., with £7 damages:—Held: the cause of action was founded on contract, not on tort, & consequently pltf. was deprived of costs by County Court Act, 1850 (c. 61), s. 11.—LEGGE v. TUCKER (1856), 1 H. & N. 500; 26 L. J. Ex. 71; 28 L. T. O. S. 145; 2 Jur. N. S. 1235; 5 W. R. 78; 156 E. R. 1298.

17. ——— Against carrier—Loss or damage to goods.]—A declaration stated that pltf., at the request of deft., hired deft.'s hackney carriage to convey her & her luggage, & on consideration that pltf. would become a passenger to be carried in the hackney carriage, deft. promised to convey her & her luggage safely & securely; yet deft., not regarding his duty, so carelessly & negligently behaved & conducted himself that pltf.'s luggage was lost:—Held: the cause of action was in contract, & not in tort, & she was deprived of costs, not having recovered more than £20.—BAYLIS v. LINTOTT (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 345; 42 L. J. C. P. 119; 28 L. T. 666.

18. ———.]—The statement of claim alleged that pltf. as vendor of goods, delivered them to defts. a railway co., as carriers for reward, the goods being consigned to the intending purchasers; that afterwards & before the goods had been delivered to the consignees or claimed by them from defts., pltf. discovered that the consignees were insolvent, & as unpaid vendor, gave notice to defts. not to deliver the goods to the consignees, but to hold them to pltf.'s order, & before the goods were delivered to the consignees pltf. required defts. to redeliver them to him; that defts. refused to do so, & delivered them to the consignees who absconded without paying for the goods. Pltf. claimed their value, viz.: £12 10s. 6d. as damages. Defts. paid that sum into ct. & pltf. took it out in satisfaction:—Held: the action was, "founded on tort" & not "on contract" within County Courts Act, 1867 (c. 142), s. 5, & pltf. having recovered a sum exceeding £10

Defts. paid £12 3s. 4d. into ct. which pltf. accepted in satisfaction of their claim:—Held: the action was founded on contract within the meaning of County Courts Act, 1867 (c. 142), s. 5, & pltf. was not entitled to costs.—*FLEMING v. 20. ————.]—A servant of pltf. took a ticket for a journey on defts.' railway, & a portmanteau of his was accepted by defts. as his personal luggage. The portmanteau contained his livery, which was the property of pltf. Through an act of misfeasance of a porter in the employment of defts. the livery was destroyed. In an action to recover the value of the goods destroyed:—Held: defts. were liable to pltf. for the tortious act of their servant in injuring pltf.'s property.

22. ————.]—Pltf. brought an action against a railway co. for compensation for personal injuries sustained whilst he was a passenger on the railway, by reason of the negligence of the engine driver in omitting to put on the brake or shut off steam soon enough, so that the train came into collision with a wall & premises of the co. at one of their stations. 23. ————.]—A municipal corp. constructed & worked an electric tramway under the authority conferred on them by an Order made by the Light Railway Comrs., in pursuance of the Light Railways Act, 1896 (c. 48), & confirmed by the Board of Trade & having therefore, by s. 10 of that Act, the force of a statute. On the construction of the Order the ct. held that it imposed on the corp. an obligation, after the tramway had been opened for traffic, to run cars & to carry passengers in them.

A passenger on one of the cars, who had paid his fare & had taken a ticket in the ordinary form, without any special conditions, was while travelling injured by the fracture of the conducting-rod, which fell upon him. He brought an action against the corp. for damages, alleging that the accident had happened through the negligence of defts. or their servants:—Held: the action was in substance founded on a breach by defts. of their duty as a public authority under their Light Railways Order; they were entitled to the protection given by Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61); & as the action had not been brought within six months from the happening of the injury, it must fail.

Pltf.'s cause of action does not depend on contract, but arises out of a breach of the duty to carry pltf. safely cast upon deft. corp. by the fact of his being taken as a passenger (STIRLING, L.J.).—LYLES v. SOUTHEND-ON-SEA CORPN., [1905] 2 K. B. 1; 74 L. J. K. B. 484; 92 L. T. 586; 69 J. P. 193; 21 T. L. R. 389; 3 L. G. R. 691, C. A.

24. ————. Against architect.]—In an action on the High Ct. against an architect to recover damages for not using due care & skill in supervising the erection of a house which the architect had undertaken to supervise pltf. recovered £20. Upon taxation of costs:—Held: the action was "founded on contract" with County Courts Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 116, & pltf. was only entitled to have county ct. costs.—STELJES v. INGRAM (1903), 19 T. L. R. 534.

25. Action for wrongful conversion.]—Pltf., a dealer, bought a hydraulic press from the defendant, an auctioneer, at a sale, under conditions of sale requiring payment before delivery. Time was allowed for payment. Payment was tendered within the time allowed, but deft. refused to deliver the press, having contracted to resell it, & in fact reselling it, subsequent to the tender. Pltf. had also contracted to resell the press, after delivery, at a profit. In the action the sole issue in dispute, namely, whether there had been tender within the time allowed for payment, was found in favour of pltf., & evidence of pltf.'s loss of profit on resale having been given as a measure of damage, judgment was given for pltf. for £29 15s. 3d. Deft. contended that the action was one for breach of contract, & that costs would therefore only be recovered on the county ct. scale:—Held: the action was for a wrongful conversion subsequent to & independent of the contract passing the property, & it was therefore an action of tort in which, more than £20 having been recovered, costs followed on the High Ct. scale.—COHEN v. FOSTER (1892), 61 L. J. Q. B. 643; 66 L. T. 616; 8 T. L. R. 519, D. C.

26. Action against lessor—Wrongful removal of fixtures.]—(1) By a written agreement deft. agreed to grant & pltf. to take a lease of certain premises from a future date. After the agreement & before the date at which the lease was to commence, deft. removed certain fixtures from the premises. The lease was executed & pltf. went into possession. He then discovered that the fixtures had been removed, & brought an action in the High Ct. against deft. for wrongfully removing the fixtures, & obtained judgment for £20. On appeal from an order affirming the taxation of the costs of pltf. on the county ct. scale:—Held: the action was founded on tort within County Courts Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 116, & pltf. was entitled to costs on the High Court scale.

(2) The distinction between tort & contracts is not a logical one, & it is sometimes difficult to say whether a particular thing is a wrong or breach of contract. If the claim of pltf. had been set out at large pointing to some particular stipulation in the contract, which stipulation had been broken, the action would be founded on contract; but where it is only necessary to refer to the contract to establish a relationship between the parties & the claim goes on to aver a breach of duty arising out of that relationship the action is one of tort (COLLINS, M.R.).—SACHS v. HENDERSON, [1902] 1 K. B. 612; 71 L. J. K. B. 392; 86 L. T. 437; 50 W. R. 418; 18 T. L. R. 382; 46 Sol. Jo. 336, C. A.

27. Action for payment for supply of water.]—Pltfs., a water co., were bound by their special Act to supply water to dwelling-houses in their district for domestic purposes at certain rates based on the annual value of such dwelling-houses, but were not bound to supply any dwelling-house with water, otherwise than by meter or special agreement, where any part of such house was used for any trade or business for which water was required.

On Aug. 8, 1901, defts., as occupiers of a workhouse within the district supplied by pltfs., demanded a supply of water for domestic purposes at a rate based on the annual value of the said workhouse. Pltfs. refused to supply on such terms, on the ground that the workhouse was a dwelling-house which, or some part of which, was used for a trade or business for which water was required. Up to the said date defts. had been taking water from pltfs. by meter. After the said date pltfs. continued to supply, & defts. to take & use, water for the workhouse through the existing meter, until the commencement of this action on July 6, 1904, but declined to pay, except on the annual value basis, for water so taken since Jan. 1, 1902. Pltfs. claimed a declaration & damages for wasting water passing through the meter; but at the trial the statement of claim was amended, by consent, by the addition of a claim for money due for water supplied by contract:—Held: pltfs.' ground of action was an implied contract to pay for water supplied & was not in tort, & therefore, Poor Law Payment of Debts Act, 1859 (c. 49), ss. 1, 4, applied, & as pltfs. had commenced their action in July, 1904, & had not amended their claim until after the expiry of the time limited by the said Act, they could not recover payments for any of the water which was the subject of the action.—*CHESTER WATERWORKS CO. v. 30. — Excuses negatived by intention to injure.]—(1) It is a violation of right to interfere with contractual relations recognised by law if there be no justification for the interference. This principle cannot be confined to inducements to break contracts of service. If such wrongful interference with a man's liberty of action is intended to injure & in fact damages a third person, such third person has a remedy by action.

(2) The intention to injure pltf. negatives all excuses (LORD LINDLEY).

35. — —.]—(1) An Act lawful in itself is not converted by a malicious or bad motive into an unlawful act so as to make the doer of the act liable to a civil action.

Resps. were shipwrights employed "for the job" on the repairs to the woodwork of a ship, but were liable to be discharged at any time. Some ironworkers who were employed on the ironwork of the ship objected to resps. being employed, on the ground that resps. had previously worked at ironwork on a ship for another firm, the practice of shipwrights working on iron being resisted by the trade union of which the ironworkers were members. Applt., who was a delegate of the union, was sent for by the ironworkers & informed that they intended to leave off working. Applt. informed the employers that unless resps. were discharged all the ironworkers would be called out or knock off work (it was doubtful which expression was used); that the employers had no option; that the iron-men were doing their best to put an end to the practice of shipwrights doing ironwork & that wherever resps. were employed the iron-men would cease work. There was evidence that this was done to punish resps. for what they had done in the past. The employers, in fear of this threat being carried out which, as they knew, would have stopped their business, discharged resps. & refused to employ them again. In the ordinary course resps.' employment would have continued. Resps. having brought an action against applt., the jury found that he had maliciously induced the employers to discharge resps. & not to engage them, & gave resps. a verdict for damages:—Held: applt. had violated no legal right of resps., done no unlawful act, & used no unlawful means, in procuring resps.' dismissal; his conduct was therefore not actionable however malicious or bad his motive might be, & notwithstanding the verdict applt. was entitled to judgment.

If a deft., by way of excuse or justification of a trespass or other wrongful act, can satisfy the tribunal . . . that he did such acts in the bona fide exercise of a legal right or privilege vested in him, no amount of even personal hatred or bad motive co-existing in his mind will render that unlawful which without it is lawful (HAWKINS, J.).

(2) There are, in my opinion, two grounds only upon which a person who procures the act of another can be made legally responsible for its consequences. In the first place, he will incur liability if he knowingly & for his own ends induces that other person to commit an actionable wrong. In the second place, when the act induced is within the right of the immediate actor, & is therefore not wrongful in so far as he is concerned, it may yet be to the detriment of a third party; & in that case, according to the law laid down by the majority in Lumley v. Gye, No. 169, post, the inducer may be held liable if he can be shown to have procured his object by the use of illegal means directed against that third party (LORD WATSON).

(3) While it is true that no act in itself lawful requires an excuse, it is equally true that some acts in themselves illegal admit of a legal excuse (LORD WATSON).—ALLEN v. FLOOD, [1898] A. B., as sanitary inspector thereof, served on pltf. a sanitary notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 94, requiring him to abate a nuisance in the house. With this notice pltf. refused to comply, alleging that it was the duty of his landlord to abate the nuisance. Deft. B., on the instructions of deft. council, then preferred a complaint before the justices under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 95, but the justices dismissed the summons with costs. At the trial of an action for malicious prosecution brought by pltf. against defts. the judge held on the evidence that defts. had no reasonable & probable cause for preferring the complaint, whilst the jury found that they had acted maliciously in so doing, that pltf.'s reputation was thereby injured, & they awarded him £250 damages as against deft. council. It was arranged that deft. might enter the shop after pltf. had left it for the day to see that it was secure. One night a lodger informed deft. that he thought he smelt gas coming from the shop, & deft. thereupon entered the shop followed by the lodger. In the shop a gas pipe passed down a wall & terminated in a burner. Deft., who was old, examined the lower part of the pipe with a naked light, & the lodger, who was much younger, then got upon the counter & examined the upper part of the pipe with a naked light, when an explosion occurred which did damage to pltf.'s goods. Deft. admitted that he desired to examine the upper part of the pipe, & that he welcomed the lodger's help:—Held: deft. was liable to pltf. for the damage done to her property by the negligent act of the lodger on the ground that the act was done in pursuance of a concerted enterprise of deft. & the lodger & was their joint tort.—BROOKE v. SUB-SECT. 5.—EFFECT OF JUDGMENT OR SATISFACTION AGAINST SOME.

84. Satisfaction against some—Compromise of action.]—Seemle: if pltf. in an action, commenced against several tortfeasors, accept of a sum of money from one of them & drop that action he cannot sue the others.—DUFRESNE v. HUTCHINSON (1810), 3 Taunt. 117; 128 E. R. 48.

85. —.—.]—Pltfs., guardians of the poor, appointed deft., who was the manager of a bank, to be their treasurer. He received no remuneration from them nor profit from the sums deposited in his hands, those sums being dealt with by the bank as other funds deposited by customers. B., the clerk to the guardians, allowed L., a clerk in his employ, to draw up orders on the treasurer for payment of money. These orders were paid across the bank counter, as cheques usually are. L. drew up orders in such a manner as to enable himself to increase the amount after they had been duly signed by the guardians & countersigned by deft., & he did increase them accordingly by various sums, in most instances by £10, the syllable "teen" being added after the written words four, six, eight or nine, & a 1 being inserted before the figures 4, 6, 7, 8 or 9, in spaces left by L. for the purpose. The orders thus fraudulently increased were presented at the bank & paid in the ordinary way, & the payment of the excess was due solely to the fact that deft.'s clerks were misled by want of proper caution on the part of the guardians & their clerk in signing the orders. In some cases L. forged the indorsement of payees; in others he both increased the amounts & forged the indorsements. The guardians sued their clerk for negligence in his duty, but settled the action on his consenting to a judge's order to stay proceedings on payment of a certain sum. They then brought a similar action against deft.:—Held: the clerk & the treasurer were not joint tortfeasors so as to make the compromise of the action against the one a bar to the action against the other, but, nevertheless, pltfs. were disentitled, by the negligence of themselves & their clerk, to recover against deft.—HALIFAX UNION v. Pltf. applied for an interim injunction as above upon an affidavit that £1,500 at the least could be specifically traced to the servant's account as being moneys paid by deft. for the goods wrongfully sold. An interim injunction was granted, but no further steps in the action were taken, an agreement being arrived at between pltf. & the servant that £1,125 out of the £1,500 then at the bank should be paid to pltf. in full settlement of all claims against the servant, without prejudice to pltf.'s claim against deft. This agreement was embodied in a judge's order, but no judgment was signed. Before the agreement was made pltf. had brought an action against deft. claiming damages for the conversion of the goods:—Held: pltf. had not, by his proceedings in the former action & by his dealings with the servant therein, elected to affirm the sale & to waive the tort, & the action against deft. was maintainable.—*RICE v. The excess it was agreed between deft. & H., was to be paid to the latter, & it was in part paid, as a bribe. Pltf's., on discovering the fraud, brought an action against H. in the Ch. Div. to recover the amount of the bribes that he had received, but afterwards entered into an agreement with him that on his depositing in a bank securities for £10,000, an amount taken to be equivalent to the sums received by H. from deft. & other contractors as bribes, pltf's. would bring such actions against former contractors, at the expense of H., as he might direct. It was further agreed that when the amounts recovered in such actions amounted to £10,000 & on receipt by pltf's. of that sum together with all costs, they would give H. a full discharge, & that in the meantime the Chancery action should be stayed. If by a specified date pltf's. had not succeeded in recovering the sum of £10,000, the securities deposited were to be realised, & that sum, or any balance remaining due, was to be paid over to pltf's. After the securities had been deposited in pursuance of the agreement, & after a sum of £4,000 had been recovered by pltf's. from other contractors in respect of contracts obtained through the intervention of H., pltf's. brought an action against deft. for damages, or, in the alternative, for money had & received. The judge at the trial held that the agreement could not be set up either as a defence to the action, or in reduction of damages, & directed a verdict for pltf's. for the full amount paid by them to deft. in excess of the current market price of the coal:—Held: the fraud committed by H. in accepting the bribe was separate & distinct from the fraud in respect of which the action was brought against deft., & the latter was not relieved from liability by reason of the previous action brought by pltf's. against H. for the recovery of the amount of the bribes paid

108. ———. General average.]—Liability for damage to property, where the damage is directly consequential on a general average act, may be the subject of a general average contribution, even assuming that the owners of ship and cargo were joint tortfeasors in relation to the damage.

The principle of common law laid down in Merryweather v. Nixan, No. 95, ante, that there cannot be any contribution between joint tortfeasors is one which ought not to be extended & does not apply in the case of contribution in general average.

A ship & her cargo being in imminent danger from perils of the sea, the master & a pilot who was on board having to choose between running her aground & entering S. Dock, with the probability of her injuring the dock, chose the latter alternative. In the attempt to enter the ship collided with one of the piers of the dock, sustained injury to the amount of £1,600, & inflicted injury to the amount of £5,000. The ct. found as a fact that to put into S. Dock with the knowledge that in doing so the ship would strike the pier was a reasonable & prudent thing to do in the interests of ship & cargo:—Held: the taking the ship into S. Dock was a general average act, & the owners of the ship entitled to recover from the owners of the cargo contributions in general average both in respect of the injury to the ship & the injury to the pier, the loss being in each case the direct consequence of a general average act.—AUSTIN FRIARS S.S. Pltf. then sued deft. for breach of an implied duty to keep secret the letter of instructions. The jury having found that it was the duty of deft. to keep the letter secret, that he had neglected this duty, & that the actions of libel & the damages recovered therein were the natural consequence of his negligence:—Held: pltf. could recover nominal damages & no more for the breach of this duty, any further damages being in the nature of an indemnity for the consequences of his own wilful wrong.—WELD-BLUNDELL v. At the trial a verdict was found against both defts. for an amount beyond the sums paid into ct., & judgment was entered for pltf. for that amount, with costs to be taxed:—Held: deft. who delivered the separate defence was alone liable for the costs occasioned to pltf. by & in consequence of the separate pleading, & the other deft. was not liable for those costs.—STUMM v. One was the president of the union, another was the general secretary, three were assistant secretaries, & three were members of the executive committee. The general secretary & the assistant secretaries received salaries from the union, & the other four received no salary, but were paid a fixed sum per day for expenses when engaged on the work of the union. Defts. were six members of a trade union called the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers & Firemen. In June, 1915, at a meeting at which representatives of the railway cos. & pltfs. & defts. as representatives of their respective unions were present, a request was made for a war bonus of 5s. a week to railwaymen, but this request was not granted. At a meeting in Oct. 1915, a war bonus of 5s. a week was granted to the men. In Oct. 1915, defts. made speeches at meetings of railwaymen in various places reflecting on the conduct of pltfs. at the meeting in June, & stating that but for their conduct at that meeting the men would have got the bonus then. Pltfs. brought an action in respect of those statements. The statement of claim alleged that defts. conspired together to injure pltfs. by publishing defamatory matter, & that in pursuance thereof they spoke & published of pltfs. & each of them in respect of their offices as officials of the union certain defamatory statements, & they claimed damages against defts. The jury found that four of defts. had conspired to slander pltfs.; that all defts. slandered pltfs.; & they assessed the damages for the separate slanders published by each of defts., but did not assess any damages on the conspiracy claim. Judgment was entered for pltfs. for the respective amounts awarded to them by the jury, & for a declaration that the four defts. had conspired to injure pltfs. by publishing oral defamatory statements of them:—Held: as damage was the gist of the cause of action for conspiracy, the declaration was wrongfully made.—*THOMAS v. 149. Damage must be natural & proximate cause.—Declaration stated that pltf. was possessed of certain messuages & premises; that deft. & one S. unlawfully & maliciously conspired to procure possession of a portion of the premises, & to set up & keep private stills thereon; that, in pursuance of such conspiracy, they, by falsely pretending & representing to pltf. that S. wanted such portion of the premises for the carrying on therein of a lawful trade, induced pltf. to demise them to him; that, in further pursuance of such conspiracy, deft. & S. entered & took possession of the premises & set up concealed stills therein, & falsely & maliciously pretended & represented, & by divers false & fraudulent means & devices made it appear to be believed that it was pltf. who held so set up such stills & was the proprietor thereof; that deft. & S. worked the stills, & falsely & maliciously pretended & represented, & by divers false & fraudulent means & devices made it appear & be believed that it was pltf. who so used the stills; & that, by means & in consequence thereof, an excise officer entered, & finding pltf. upon the premises, took him before a magistrate, who convicted him of keeping illicit stills:—Held: the declaration disclosed no cause of action, the damage to pltf. not appearing to have been the natural & proximate consequence of deft.'s act.—*BARBER v. 151.—Pltf., a broker on the Stock Exchange, under the belief that the major part of the shares in the co. promoted by defts. had been bonâ fide offered to the public for subscription, as stated in the prospectus issued by defendants, was induced to enter into contracts, anterior to allotment, to sell a number of shares in the co. The shares, however, were afterwards so allotted that they remained under the control of defts. Pltf. was afterwards compelled to deliver the shares, & in order to do so had to buy them at a much higher price than he had paid for them, owing to defts. having cornered the market. To make good this loss he brought an action against defts., alleging that such loss was the result of conspiracy & fraudulent misrepresentation on their part. Objection raised, that the statement of claim disclosed no cause of action:—Held: pltf. had no legal right to recover his loss from defts.; there was no remedy on the civil side in the case of conspiracy to do an action which would not have been actionable if committed by an individual; no specific fraud had been shown whereby any legal right of pltf. had been infringed, & pltfs. losses were indirect & too remote, & no cause of action was disclosed.—*SALAMAN v. 156.—(1) Passing, therefore, to the case of concerted action, the first & obvious observation is that if a combination of persons do what if done by one would be a tort, an averment of conspiracy so far as founding a civil action is mere surplusage. But when there is nothing done which per se would be a tort, then one is at once faced by the consideration that a particular thing done, not in itself a tort, may, if done by an individual, be supportable though unpleasant, but may, if done by many in concert, become insupportable & create a real injury (LORD DUNEDIN).

Combination in pursuit of lawful interests—By lawful means.—Owners of ships, in order to secure a carrying trade exclusively for themselves & at profitable rates, formed an assocn. & agreed that the number of ships to be sent by members of the assocn. to the loading port, the division of cargoes & the freights to be demanded, should be the subject of regulation; that a rebate of 5 per cent. on the freights should be allowed to all shippers who shipped only with members; & that agents of members should be prohibited on pain of dismissal from acting in the interest of competing shipowners; any member to be at liberty to withdraw on giving certain notices. Pltfs., who were shipowners excluded from the assocn., sent ships to the loading port to endeavour to obtain cargoes. The associated owners thereupon sent more ships to the port, underbid pltfs., & reduced freights so low that pltfs. were obliged to carry at unremunerative rates. They also threatened to dismiss certain agents if they loaded pltfs.' ships, & circulated a notice that the rebate of 5 per cent. would not be allowed to any person who shipped cargoes on pltfs.' vessels. Pltfs., having brought an action for damages against the associated owners alleging a conspiracy to injure pltfs.:—Held: since the acts of defts. were done with the lawful object of protecting & extending their trade & increasing their profits, & since they had not employed any unlawful means, pltfs. had no cause of action.—*MOGUL S.S. desired to be present at the first performance of a play at a theatre. He knew that, in consequence of his having made certain serious & unfounded charges against some members of the theatre staff, an application for a ticket in his own name would be refused. He therefore obtained a ticket through the agency of a friend who bought the ticket at the theatre, without disclosing that it was for pltf. By order of deft., the managing director of the theatre, pltf. was refused admission to the theatre on the night in question. Pltf. claimed damages from deft. for maliciously procuring the proprietors of the theatre to break a contract for the admission of pltf. to the theatre, alleged to have been made by them with pltf. by the sale of the ticket:—Held: the non-disclosure of the fact that the ticket was bought for pltf. prevented the sale of the ticket from constituting a contract as alleged, the identity of pltf. being in the circumstances a material element in the formation of the contract; & the action therefore failed.

On demurrer:—Held: the counts were all good, & an action lay for maliciously procuring a breach of contract to give exclusive personal services for a time certain, equally whether the employment has commenced or is only in fieri, provided the procurement be during the subsistence of the contract, & produced damage: & to sustain such an action, it was not necessary that the employer & employed should stand in the strict relation of master & servant. Semble: the action would lie for the malicious procurement of the breach of any contract, though not for personal services, if by the procurement damage was intended to result & did result to pltf.—*LUMLEY v. 170. — (1) Defts. were members of a joint committee of three trade unions connected with the building trade in Hull. A firm of builders there having refused to obey certain rules laid down by the unions with regard to building operations, the unions sought to compel them to do so, by preventing the supply of building materials to them. In pursuance of this object, they requested pltf., a master mason & builder in Hull, who supplied building materials to the firm, to cease to supply them with such materials, but pltf. refused to do so. Thereupon, with the object of injuring pltf. in his business, in order to compel him to comply with such request, defts. induced persons who, to the knowledge of defts., had entered into contracts with pltf. for the supply of materials, to break their contracts, & not to enter into further contracts with pltf., by threatening that the workmen would be withdrawn from their employ. Pltf. sustained damage in consequence of such breaches of contract, & of the refusal of such persons to enter into contracts with him:—Held: an action was maintainable by pltf. against defts. for maliciously procuring such breaches of contract, & also for maliciously conspiring together to injure him by preventing persons from entering into contracts with him.

A friendly society of workmen engaged in similar work protested to the employers against the engagement of pltf. as an apprentice, on the ground that it was a breach of one of the rules of the society which the employers had agreed to & signed, & they gave notice that, if the engagement was continued, they would call out the workmen who were working for the employers, & who were all members of the society. In consequence of this threat the employers refused to continue to teach pltf. under the terms of the deed of apprenticeship. In an action by him against the society & certain of the officers:—Held: pltf. had a good cause of action, to which the previous agreement between the society & the employers was no answer.

Deft. co., who dealt in goods of the kind manufactured by pltfs., & who had been placed on pltfs.' suspended list, obtained pltfs.' goods from a dealer who had signed the retailer's agreement at less than the prescribed retail price. Goldman held substantially all the shares & all the debentures, carried on a similar business at 8, New Bond Street. Pltf. carried on, or was interested in, similar businesses, under the name of Tecla, in Paris, New York, Vienna, Berlin & other cities.

In June, 1912, pltf. Goldsoll & deft. Goldman entered into an agreement for the purpose of putting an end to competition between them, whereby Goldman agreed to discontinue the business of the Terisa co., & not allow the name

Terisa to be used in a similar business for two years from Oct. 22, 1912; & covenanted that he would not for the like period "either solely or jointly with or as agent or employee for any other person persons or co. directly or indirectly carry on or be engaged concerned or interested in or render services gratuitously or otherwise to the business of a dealer in real or imitation jewellery in the county of London or any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain & Ireland & the Isle of Man or in France, the United States, Russia, or Spain, or within twenty-five miles of Potsdamerstrasse, Berlin, or St. Stefans Kirche, Vienna."

Goldsoll & the London Tecla Gem co., Ltd., a co. to whom Goldsoll had transferred his business, brought this action against Goldman, Sessel, a former manager of the Terisa co., & S. Sessel & co., a co. under whose name Sessel & his wife had started an imitation jewellery business at 14, New Bond Street, for injunction against Goldman restraining breaches of his covenant, & against the other defts. restraining them from procuring & inducing such breaches:—Held: (1) on the facts, Goldman had committed breaches of his covenant, & defts. Sessel & S. Sessel & co. had induced him to break his contract.

(2) Damages are essential to the right of action which a covenantee has against one who induces his covenantor to break his contract, but there was sufficient evidence of damages.

(3) In a case where the breach which has been procured would in the ordinary course inflict damage on the pltf., the pltf. may succeed without proof of particular damages.—GOLDSOLL v. GOLDMAN, [1914] 2 Ch. 603; 84 L. J. Ch. 63; 112 L. T. 21; 59 Sol. Jo. 43; on appeal, [1915] 1 Ch. 292, C. A.

180. ——— Absence of justification.] —

(1) Procuring a breach of contract is an actionable wrong unless there be justification for interfering with the legal right. Miners employed in collieries without giving notice to their employers & in breach of their contracts abstained from working on certain days upon the direction or order of a federation of the miners given by their executive council. The federation & council acted honestly without malice or ill will towards the employers, & with the object only of keeping up the price of coal by which the wages were regulated:—Held: an action for damages lay by the employers against the federation & its officers, no justification for their action being shown.

(2) It is useless to try & conceal the fact that an organised body of men working together can produce results very different from those which can be produced by an individual without assistance. Moreover, laws adapted to individuals not acting in concert with others require modification & extension if they are to be supplied with effect to large bodies of persons acting in concert. The English law of conspiracy is based upon & is justified by this undeniable truth (LORD LINDLEY).

182. ———.] — Resps. employed D. as their agent to buy tobacco from growers, the total bought not to exceed 300,000 lbs., & supplied him with forms of contract bearing their firm name as buyers. D. agreed not to act as buying agent for anybody except resps. & another firm. Applt., who knew the position as between D. & resps., induced him to buy in the names of the two firms a total of 1,000,000 lbs., arranging with him to take over the surplus not required for them. Out of that total weight D. handed 300,000 lbs. to resps., & tendered the balance to applt.; but he repudiated the arrangement, the market having fallen heavily. Resps. having also repudiated liability, one of the vendors, with whom D. had contracted upon resp.'s form, was held to be entitled to damages from resps. as having held out D. as their agent; resps. claimed to recover over from applt.:—Held: resps. were so entitled, applt. having knowingly induced D. to commit a breach of his duty to them, whereby they had suffered the damage.

Interference directed to bringing about a violation of legal right, such as that of resp. co. to have their contract with D. duly observed, is a cause of action, & it is a violation of a legal right to interfere with contractual relations recognised by law if there be no sufficient justification for the interference. It is an illustration of this principle when the interference is directed to inducing an agent to act in contravention of his duty by pledging his principal's credit (per CUR.).—*JASPERSON v. In an action by first & second *pltf.*s against defts. the jury awarded damages to both sets of *pltf.*s. Part III.—Remedies for Tort.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

195. *Alternative remedies—Effect on right to bring action—Statutory right to penalty.]—*As far as the public wrong is concerned, there is no remedy but that prescribed by the Act of Parliament. There is, however, beyond the public wrong, a special & particular damage sustained by pltf. by reason of the breach of duty by deft., for which he has no remedy unless an action on the case at his suit be maintainable; & the question is, whether the penalty annexed to the offence concludes pltf. who has sustained a special & particular damage, as well as the public, though no part of the penalty is payable to him. If the performance of a new duty created by Act of Parliament is enforced by a penalty, recoverable by the party grieved by the non-performance, there is no other remedy than that given by the Act, either for the public or the private wrong; but, by the penalty given in the Act now in question [7 & 8 Vict. c. 112], compensation for private special damage seems not to have been contemplated. The penalty is recoverable in case of a breach of the public duty, though no damage may actually have been sustained by anybody; & no authority has been cited to us, nor are we aware of any, in which it has been held that, in such a case as the present, the common law right to maintain an action in respect of a special damage resulting from the breach of a public duty, whether such duty exists at common law or is created by statute is taken away by reason of a penalty, recoverable by a common informer, being annexed as a punishment for the non-performance of the public duty (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—COUCH v. 197. Statutory right to compensation—Non-existence of special tribunal—Right to assessment by High Court.]—Where a right is given by statute to do acts causing damage to other persons' property, subject to the payment to such persons of compensation, & the statute provides a special tribunal for assessing the amount of compensation if such tribunal becomes non-existent, a person whose property has been damaged by the exercise of the statutory right is entitled to have the amount of compensation assessed in the High Ct. of Justice.

By a local Act, the predecessors in title of defts. were empowered, as undertakers of the river D. navigation, to clear, scour, & deepen the river, & to lay dredgings taken from it on the banks or lands adjacent to the places where the same should be taken out, giving satisfaction to the owners of such lands for any damage thereby occasioned.

The Act appointed a number of persons, therein named, as comrs. for settling, determining & adjusting in manner thereafter mentioned all matters of difference between the undertakers & their successors & the owners of adjacent lands, & provided that such comrs. should have power to determine what satisfaction such landowners should have for the damage done to their lands by the exercise of the statutory powers given to the undertakers.

The Act empowered any fifteen or more comrs. assembled together to elect new comrs. in the places of any comrs. who should be dead or refuse to act.

All the original comrs. were dead, & no comrs. appointed in their places, if any, were in existence :—Held : a landowner whose land had been damaged by the exercise by defts. of the statutory power to lay on his land things taken from the river was entitled to have the amount of compensation for such damage assessed in an action.—*BENTLEY v. A wrongful interference with pltf.'s lawful enjoyment of his own property was alleged. Pltf. was clearly entitled to rid himself of that unlawful interference by any lawful means without thereby affecting his right to hold defts. liable for that

SECT. 3.—ACTION FOR DAMAGES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

202. Parties to illegal agreement—Injury to one party arising out of illegal transaction—No right of action against other party.]—One of two parties to an agreement to suppress a prosecution for felony, cannot maintain an action against the other, for an injury arising out of the transaction in which they have both been illegally engaged.

A declaration in case stated that B., deft., had charged C. with embezzlement ; that it was agreed between B. & A., pltf., that B. should abstain from prosecuting C., & that, in consideration thereof, C. should draw, & A. should accept, a bill of exchange, & that C. should indorse the same to deft. The declaration then went on to aver that a bill was drawn, accepted, & indorsed to B. pursuant to this corrupt & illegal agreement ; that B., well knowing the illegal nature of the transaction, & that A. was not liable at law to pay the amount of the bill, & that there was no reasonable or probable cause for suing him thereon, conspired with D., a pauper, that the bill should be indorsed to D., & that D. should sue A. upon the bill, for the sole benefit of B. ; & that an action was accordingly brought by D. against A. in which A. obtained a verdict, on the ground of the illegality of the consideration for the acceptance, but was unable to obtain his costs, in consequence of the insolvency of D. :—Held : inasmuch as A. could not make out his case except through the illegal transaction to which he himself was a party, the action would not lie.—*FIVAZ v. 203. Right to damages—On failure to prove special damage.]—The principle ordinarily applicable to actions of tort is that pltf. is never precluded from recovering ordinary damages by reason of his failing to prove the special damage he has laid, unless the special damage is the gist of the action.—MUDHUN MOHUN DOSS v. GOKUL DOSS (1866), 10 Moo. Ind. App. 563; 19 E. R. 1085; sub nom. MUDHUN MOHUN DOSS v. GOKUL DOSS, 14 W. R. 590; sub nom. DOSS v. DOSS, 14 L. T. 646, P. C.

204. Assignability of damages—“If & when recovered.”]—Mrs. G. was pltf. in an action against H. for false representation, & was also pltf. in the present action against deft. for slander. Mrs. G., being at the time largely indebted to her husband, on May 21, 1910, executed in his favour a deed of assignment, whereby, after reciting that he had requested her to give him further security which she had agreed to do, she assigned to him “all that the interest, sum of money, or premises to which she is or may become entitled under or by virtue of any verdict, compromise, or agreement which she may obtain, or to which she may become party in or consequent upon the said action or otherwise howsoever, under or by reason of the same, to hold the same . . . subject to redemption on payment of all moneys due to him.” Subsequently the action brought by Mrs. G. against H. was dismissed with costs amounting to £218 but the action brought by Mrs. G. against deft. resulted in a verdict for pltf. for £200 with costs. H. thereupon instituted garnishee proceedings against deft. to attach the amount of damages recovered by Mrs. G. in satisfaction of the costs due to him in the first action, & in these proceedings Mrs. G.’s husband also claimed to be entitled to those damages under the assignment from his wife to him:—Held: the assignment was made for good consideration & was not an assignment of a mere expectancy, or of a cause of action, but was an assignment of property, that is, of the fruits of an action as & when recovered, & it was consequently not void under 13 Eliz. c. 5.—GLEGG v. g. Distinction between principles in damages awarded for tort & for breach of contract.]—Though the rule is the same in actions on contract as in tort, viz., that the damages which pltf. is entitled to must result directly from the wrongful act of deft. & that no claim can be made to damages which are only too remotely connected with it, there may be differences in the application to actions on tort of this basic principle which is common to both kinds of actions; in a contract “it is the duty of pltf. as a prudent man to take measures to reduce the damages as far as possible, for a breach of contract consists in deft.’s failure to do a certain act that he is bound to do, & it would be quite open to pltf. to take other measures to obtain the result he expected from deft.’s performance; a tort, on the other hand, may consist in deft.’s failing to do an act which he is bound to do or in doing one which he ought not to do or in preventing pltf. from doing an act which he is entitled to do.—KARIBASAVANA GOWD v. VEERABHADRAPPA (1913), 1 L. R. 36 Mad. 580.—IND.

205. Effect of impossibility of accurate estimate.]—Where a wrong has been committed, the wrongdoer must suffer from the impossibility of accurately ascertaining the amount of damage.

Therefore where an account of the equitable waste committed by a tenant for life was directed to be taken against his exors, which it was found impossible to take accurately, & the master had arbitrarily charged the exors., his report was supported.—LEEDS (DUKE) v. AMHERST (EARL) (1850), 20 Beav. 239; 15 L. T. O. S. 129; 52 E. R. 595.

207. New trial—Inadequacy of damages.]—In actions for torts there is no inexorable rule precluding the granting of a new trial on the ground of inadequacy of damages; but if the smallness of damages shows that the jury have made a compromise a new trial will be granted, such a case being in effect as if the jury had been discharged without a verdict.—FALVEY v. 212. ——— Right of action to enforce arbitration award—Award of damages for personal tort.]—An action for an illegal arrest was referred, the costs of the reference being in the arbitrator's discretion. The award directed that final judgment be entered for pltf., with £50 damages, & gave him the costs of the reference & award. The arbitrator had no authority to direct judgment to be entered, & for this excess the award was remitted to the arbitrator, who, in a second award, recited that he had made a former award, that it had been referred back, & gave pltf. the same damages & costs of the reference & award, & also the costs of the amended award. After the first award pltf. became insolvent. The vesting order was made after the reference back, & a few days before the second award:—Held: the action being for a personal tort, no right could pass to the assignees until the matter was adjudicated on, which could not be said to have been done until the second award; & as this award was not made until after the vesting order, the title of pltf. would be good, unless the assignees interfered, which they had not done.—*BREARCY v. SECT. 1.—WAIVER.

215. Whether tort may be waived—Without accord & satisfaction—Or release by deed.]—Where a wrongful act has been completed without the knowledge or assent of the party injured, his right of action is not ordinarily barred by mere submission to the injury, or even by a voluntary promise not to seek redress, some conduct amounting to release or accord & satisfaction must be shown; although, on account of laches, relief may be refused under special circumstances.

A right of action has vested . . . which at all events as a general rule, cannot be divested without accord & satisfaction or release under seal (per CUR.).—DE BUSSCHE v. ALT (1878), 8 Ch. D. 286; 47 L. J. Ch. 381; 38 L. T. 370; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 584, C. A.

217. Right to waive tort—In favour of breach of contract—Necessity for contractual relationship between parties—& for tort to amount to breach of contract.]—A tort can only be waived in favour of a breach of contract when either there were at the time of the commission of the tort contractual relationships between the parties & the tort complained of was also a breach of contract, or when the same act or omission creates a position which brings the parties into what the party suffering the wrong is entitled to regard as a contractual relationship. 228. ———.]—Action for tort barred.—The Shipping Controller, purporting to act under the authority of the Defence of the Realm Regulations, required as a condition of a licence to suppliants to sell one of their ships to a foreign firm that they should pay a percentage of the purchase-money to the Ministry of Shipping, & suppliants paid the percentage. On a petition of right to recover back the money so paid:—Held: the imposition of the condition was illegal, & the payment was not a voluntary payment.

The main & principal cause of action, namely, that against the Shipping Controller for tort, having been barred by the general words of sect. 1 [of the Indemnity Act, 1920, c. 48] it would be defeating the general purpose of the section to preserve either against the Shipping Controller, had he retained the proceeds, or, as things are, against the Crown an alternative remedy based upon an implied contract or quasi-contract merely introduced by & resting on a legal fiction (SARGANT,

As regards the claim for money had & received to the use of pltf. it appears clearly from the allegations in the statement of claim that it is founded upon the tortious acts alleged to have been committed by defts., & therefore if sustainable at all is a claim which falls directly within [Sect. 4 of Trade Disputes Act, 1906 (c. 47) (LAWRENCE, L.J.).—HARDIE & LANE, LTD. v. The goods were accompanied by an invoice, which stated them to be bought by defts. of the bkpt.:—Held: under these circumstances, the assignees might waive the tort, & bring assumpsit for goods sold & delivered.—RUSSELL v. BELL (1842), 10 M. & W. 340; 152 E. R. 500.

233. ———.]—Goods were delivered by the owners to forwarding agents to be carried by sea to Hull & thence forwarded to a customer in Manchester. When the goods arrived at Hull the owners instructed the forwarding agents not to deliver to the customer, but the goods were nevertheless delivered to him. The owners thereupon invoiced the goods to the customer & sued him & recovered judgment for the price of goods sold & delivered, & then, failing to get satisfaction, took proceedings in bkpcy. against him.

The owners of the goods might have sued for conversion. They did not do this. They sued for the contract price alleging a contract to sell & a right delivery under it, & they recovered judgment on that basis (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—VERSCHURES CREAMERIES v. HULL & NETHERLANDS S.S. 236. What constitutes waiver.]—A. having lost a £20 bank note, it was found by B., who took it to C. to get it changed, & C. changed it accordingly. B., being afterwards taken up on a charge of stealing the note, gave A. £7 as part of the change. In an action of trover brought by A. against C. to recover the value of the note:—Held: the action was maintainable, & the acceptance of part did not affirm the act of B. or waive the tort, but it only went in diminution of the damages.—*BURN v. The Ct. of Bkpcy. having made the order prayed for, & the assignee having accordingly paid over the proceeds of the sale:—Held: the trustee could not afterwards bring an action of trover against the assignee under the bill of sale to recover the difference between the value of the goods & the amount realised by the sale, inasmuch as by the proceedings in bkpcy. to recover the proceeds of the sale he had affirmed such sale & waived the tort.—*SMITH v.
